The fine rains we have had the past few days have revived the growing vegetation and relieved many bad cases of the blues. Wood Sullivan had the misfortune to lose a fine Jersey heifer about a year old last week. This makes three that he has lost since the first of the year. Ben Rye has torn down the old house on his father's place near here, with the intention of using the material to build a barn on the place he purchased of R. B. Hewitt. M. C. Stephens dug and walled a spring near his house, and for all this week, he is furnishing water for all his stock. He located the vein by means of an Indian hoodoo process. The shooting scrape at Petersburg, last Saturday, bears out an old saying that Kentucky wharves are the dumping ground for Hoosier's undesirable citizens. Shame on the good citizens of the town for allowing such conditions to continue. Geo. Crayne, whom many people about Burlington about Burlington will remember as an organizer of the Modern Woodmen of America in this county, a few years ago writes from Fargo, N. D., that they have a bumper crop up there this year. He says many of the farmers are poor and will make 40 bushels to the acre. Mrs. Wm. Beahly returned to her home at Waldron, Indiana, Thursday, after spending several days with her sister, Mrs. Cason. Many acquaintances in this county will be interested in knowing that she and her husband have adopted a little southern girl, whose parents are dead. She is only two years old.

Cove Carpenter and family and Mrs. Sarah Rector were guests of Mrs. Sarah Rector, near Walton, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Shaw, of Schoolcraft, Michigan, are expected here soon, and will be the guests of Ben Bristow and family. Mrs. Ben Bristow returned Monday from Schoolcraft, Mich., where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Shaw, the past fortnight.

BIG BONE.

Mrs. Nancy Story celebrated her 84th birthday, Sunday. Miss Beale Black, of Covington, is the guest of her cousin, Miss Bertha Hamilton. Miss Georgia Carroll entertained a number of her friends, last Wednesday evening. Mrs. Milton Baker and daughters, Lucy and Kate, of Covington, are visiting relatives in this vicinity. Congressman A. B. Rouse arrived at home last Friday. Congress will probably adjourn about next Saturday. Mr. Rouse is expected to return to his duties as representative of this Congressional District, and has gained the reputation of getting anything he goes after. He has several important matters pending at Washington which are to be disposed of later on.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE

By The Storm That Swept Over The County Last Tuesday Evening.

Burlington and Erlanger 'Bum Upset With Its Load of Passengers.

Grand Juryman On His Way Home from Court Had His Collar Bone Broken.

A heavy wind and rain storm swept across this county last Tuesday about 4:30 p. m. from northwest to southeast blowing down corn, tobacco, fences, trees and in a few instances damaging farm buildings. A barn belonging to Legrand Gaines out on the Petersburg pike was moved about two feet on its foundation and tacked considerably, while at Thomas Rouse's near Burlington the nice shade trees in one yard were demolished and in one time he thought his residence would be destroyed. The storm seemed to increase in force as it proceeded. Near Florence, J. B. Eddins, mail carrier, met the wind near the old Baldy tollgate site, where his mail wagon, in which were two passengers, was blown over, and the mules ran away. Fortunately Mr. Eddins and his passengers escaped with slight injuries while the vehicle was badly wrecked. The arrival of the mail at Burlington was delayed until about seven o'clock. Near the same point, on the Florence pike, the buggy of John S. Surface and David H. Brown, of Florence, two grand juryman, were returning home was turned over, and Mr. Brown was badly hurt his collar bone being broken. In the Union neighborhood the corn and tobacco poles were blown down. Bristow's mill was blown down. It was about the heaviest storm that has visited the above named localities in a long time. At J. B. Rouse's in Pleasant Valley neighborhood, poultry was killed, shade and fruit trees demolished and a corn crib and a buggy blown down. A house, while it was thought that the residence would go. Quite a number of the Bell telephone poles along the pike above Florence were destroyed, while the local system was badly disabled. The buggy in which Messrs. Surface and Brown were riding was struck by a twister that hit the vehicle and dashed it to the ground by the side of the pike. The buggy was overturned. Having the top and storm top torn up it took the men some time to extricate themselves from the wreck, the result of which was no loss as it might have been had Mr. Surface not held to the buggy lines, keeping the horse under control.

RICEWOOD.

Mrs. Chas. Fennell, who has been ill is much better. Mr. and Mrs. Gaines Robinson spent Friday as guests of W. E. Glacken. Mrs. Mary Markberry, of Ludlow, was the guest of friends here one day the past week. J. T. Powers' hop was an enjoyable affair and given in honor of Thomas Carpenter's birthday. Powers and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carpenter were guests of Cary Carpenter, Sunday. Ed Taggart's baby was buried at Richmond the past week. It fell from a window in town some months ago and never recovered its injuries. Mrs. Clarence Cole and children, spent the past week at the home of Mr. Wm. F. Tanner's. Mrs. Cole, of Covington, came out and spent Saturday night and Sunday.

"I Blamed a Good Worker." "I blamed my heart for seven years" writes W. Evans, Danville, Va., who now has a "indigestion" as Dr. Dr. New Life Pills completely "me." Best for stomach, headache, or debility, or all dealers.

The watermelon crop over bottom is said to be different as to size and quality. FOR RENT—My small week of Florence and friends. The school term is nearly all over. The school term is nearly all over. The school term is nearly all over.

HIGH POINTS TOUCHED BY ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH.

We are advocating the correction for Socialism and the antidote for anarchy.

The men who presided over the Baltimore and Chicago conventions and the great bosses who controlled the two conventions, Mr. Root and Mr. Parker, Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy, Mr. Penrose and Mr. Taggart, Mr. Guggenheim and Mr. Sullivan, differ from one another, of course, on certain points. But there are the differences which one corporation lawyer has with another corporation lawyer when acting for different corporations. They come together as once against a common enemy when the domination of both is threatened.

We are standing against the brutality of the Republican party and the hypocrisy of the Republican party in setting a standard on the color question. We are standing in advance of conditions which have led to the crushing disaster and death of the great Republican party itself.

The old parties are broken with no real soul within, other divided on artificial lines, boss-ridden and privilege-controlled, each a jumble of incongruous elements, and neither daring to speak only wisely and fearlessly what should be said on the vital issues of the day.

There will be no diminution in the cost of trust-made articles so long as our Government attempts the impossible task of restoring the conditions of business to 60 years ago by legislation to a succession of lawsuits under the antitrust law.

I regret to say that every man who has ever been to a national convention knows that the colored delegates to those conventions were of a character not only reflecting discredit on the Republican party, but upon their own race.

The control of the various state bosses in the state organizations has been strengthened by the action at Baltimore, and scant indeed would be the use of exchanging the whip of Messrs. Barnes, Penrose and Guggenheim for the scorpions of Messrs. Murphy, Taggart and Sullivan.

The first essential in the progressive program is the right of the people to rule.

There is no warrant for protection unless a legitimate share of the benefits goes to the pay envelope of the wage worker.

Whenever representative government has in actual fact become nonrepresentative there the people should secure to themselves the initiative, the referendum and the recall.

The American people, and not the Courts, are to determine their own fundamental policies.

All I desire is to give the people a chance to make their representatives represent them instead of misrepresenting them.

The American people, and not the Courts, are to determine their own fundamental policies.

Means should be devised to make it easier to get rid of an incompetent judge.

The present conditions of business cannot be accepted as satisfactory.

We cannot afford to let any citizens labor under conditions injurious to the common welfare.

The welfare of the farmer is the basic need of the nation.

The present Tariff Board is entirely inadequate.

The substitution of tariff for revenue only would plunge the country into widespread industrial depression.

Some of the reforms he advocates are as follows: Direct presidential primaries. Election of United States Senators by popular vote. Shorter ballot. Comprehensive "corrupt practices act." Publicity of campaign contributions to be obtained during contest. Initiative, referendum and recall in the states. Recall of Judicial decisions of both State and Federal Courts. An eight-hour day for women workers. Minimum wage commissions. Woman suffrage. Workmen's compensation. Improvement of farm conditions. Government control of big business without its elimination. Placing industrial conditions within the scope of Government action and control. Industrial commissions to aid in handling the trust problem. Child labor reforms. Adoption of the German system of old age pensions and insurance standardization of mine and factory inspection. Government aid to help industrial tool users to become tool owners. Prohibition of night labor for women and children. Measures to relieve the high cost of living, including limitation of middlemen, regulation of speculation, assistance to the farmer by the Government improved business methods. Revision of the tariff by a permanent nonpartisan commission. Equal treatment of deep-water vessels of all nations, including those of the United States, in the Panama Canal.

KENTUCKY NEWS.

Franklin, Aug. 8.—A representative of the purpose of sinking wells. Oil is prospecting in Allen county is about to begin taking leases for five of the Eastern oil syndicates known to exist in the eastern part of Simpson county, but no effort at development has ever been made.

Crops in Montgomery county are looking fine according to a special agent from the State Agricultural Experiment Station, and the prospects for an excellent yield could not be improved upon. Tobacco has come out wonderfully, while corn, which is fastening and earing, looks to be bumper crop. The oats and hay crops, harvesting of which has not been completed, were as fine as for twenty years past, and made an excellent yield. Wheat was fair and sold readily at $1.10 per bushel. With plenty of corn from the State Agricultural Experiment Station, the farmers of this section will be on Easy Street—E. K.

The tobacco growers in the Bluegrass section as well as in the Black Patch area are making the situation with much thought. Realizing that the trusts have the market so completely under their control that they are now wondering just what to take, independent buyers Western Kentucky have given out that they will not buy on the open market. The Eastern Protective Association is beginning to get busy in Western Kentucky and such an organization in the Bluegrass District is the only way to get the grafters can only be eliminated. With the independent buyers running to cover and his plan for the future, the struggle for existence it would seem to be only a question of time when the tobacco growers again be meekly asking the trust buyer, "What will you give me?" And in such a situation what the trust buyer will do to the grower will be more than a "plenty" if the growers are not vigilant. —Winchester Democrat.

Hopkinsville, Aug. 8.—Throughout the famous Black Patch, which includes all the counties in this section of the State and Tennessee, where the dark types of tobacco are grown, there is the keenest interest in conditions which affect both the Eastern Protective Association and independent tobacco buyers, and a coalition of these important factors in the trade may be brought about.

Association officials are out in a statement that unless a majority of the growers show a sufficient interest in their welfare to sign the pledge of the association before September first the corporation will probably be dissolved. For two years, owing to the high price of the loose floors, not more than 650,000 hogheads in the pool. Independent dealers in the region are holding about 7,000 hogheads for which they paid high prices, and the recent slump in values is causing them great uneasiness. They have lately held a number of conferences with the association managers, who have about 6,000 hogheads of the old crop on hand. It is said to be almost assured that the independents will form a new organization. Their hope of realizing profit on the tobacco they control lies in reports throughout the Black Patch that the crop in this field is not only short, but of inferior quality. The independents have 2,500 hogheads in Hopkinsville warehouses, 2,000 at Mayfield, 1,800 at Clarksville, Tenn., and 1,000 at Paducah.

The Child's Toys.
Cloaked under a pretense of making the children happy, our state has been giving them too many toys and have made the recipients blasé and unappreciative. One at a time let enough. In our secret souls most of us have been conscious of that mistake. In the second place, in our desire to produce something new and wonderful at frequent intervals, something that would do us credit in the eyes of our young admirers, we have been getting the wrong kinds. These mechanical toys upon which we have fallen with gusto and played happily ourselves until obliged to hand them over to our children, they do the work for the child instead of making him do it.

Here we have in a nutshell the main principle underlying the selection of toys. The child's toys should stimulate his imagination and make him work. If he has too many toys, he has nothing to imagine; if they respond to the magic of a key, he can only stand by and watch—Martha Cutler, in Harper's Bazar.

One of the largest crowds in the history of the Lawrenceburg Fair association was in attendance at the fair Saturday. The attendance was unusually light because the farmers were too busy with their crops to attend. But on Saturday many of them put aside their work and came to the fair to enjoy the pleasures that a county fair affords. Large numbers came from across the river, and from the north, while the northern part of the county was well represented. The visitors this year seemed particularly pleased, and many of those who were present on Saturday said this year's fair was the best they had ever attended.—Lawrenceburg Press.

A Fishy Story.

Christian county comes to the front with a report of a big day's fishing under unusual circumstances.

A lake of some twenty-five acres in area on a farm near Newstead began going dry a few days ago, and the discovery was made that thousands of fish were being stranded by the sudden disappearance of the water. Naturally this attracted the attention of the people for miles around, and they began flocking to the scene to participate in the fish harvest. A dispatch says immense quantities of bass, trout, carp and other varieties of the finny tribe were picked up with little trouble and carried away in barrels, tubs, baskets, cans and almost any old thing which would serve as a medium of transportation.

There is much speculation as to where the fish came from, and the theory has been advanced that the lake has been fed by a subterranean stream having an outlet to some unknown source of fish supply. The lake formed last winter, and had attracted no special attention up to the time the bottom dropped out, leaving the finny inhabitants in the middle of a bad fix. It is a peculiar state of affairs, but the fishing citizens are not troubling themselves about the whys and wherefores of it. They are too busy eating fish.

"Fisherman's luck" is no meaningless phrase to persons who participate in the sudden windfall of piscatorial blessings. And they were not expert anglers either like those patient individuals who waste precious hours by the river side without getting a bite save from predatory flies, gnats and mosquitoes.

About Cool Beverages For Summer.

Probably no summer beverage is more popular and desirable than lemonade, and one may so arrange it that it will take but a minute to prepare a glass. Make a thick syrup from five or six pounds of white sugar and a little water. Extract the juice from a dozen lemons and grate into this the rinds of half of them; allow this to set for several hours or over night till the juice has assimilated the flavor of the rinds. Strain into the syrup previously prepared, mixing thoroughly. When wanted put a tablespoonful in a glass and fill with ice water, and you have a glass of delicious lemonade without hunting up the lemon squeezer, sugar, spoon etc. every time you feel like taking a cool drink.

The tastes of persons are so different that some will require less sugar while others like it very sweet. In making the lemonade half as many lemons may be used and an ounce of tartaric acid added in place of the other half. This amount may be varied to suit the taste, which can be determined after a trial, and more acid, lemon juice or sugar syrup added as the taste requires.—E. K.

The Ohio a Long River.

The Ohio river is the second largest river in the United States. From its source at Pittsburgh, Pa., to where it flows into the Mississippi at Cairo, Ill., is a distance of 1,050 miles. The river varies in width from a few hundred feet to one mile its widest part being at what is known as the falls of the Ohio at Louisville.

Saturday was the coldest August 3d in the history of this community for many years. At the warmest time the heat thermometer could do was 68 while it was as low as 32. The low temperature brought out overcoats and wraps, and caused many housekeepers to open up their closets and drawers and have them closed until fall—Blue Grass Clipper.

A great many persons can be found who actually believe that Roosevelt will poll more votes than Taft, and then come second in the national derby.

Those who took the pains to get their seed corn the new way, the reward for their industry as seen in the almost perfect stand of corn in their fields, while those who trusted to luck or to statements of some one that the seed would grow have awakened to a realization of the fact that their fields show only 50 to 70 per cent of a stand.

According to Cincinnati commission men indications point to exceptionally low prices for potatoes during the late summer and fall. Educating the Farmers' Sons.

With a view of giving a special course in agriculture to at least one boy in each county in Kentucky, Commissioner Newman has perfected plans by which each county may visit the State Fair for one week free of charge. He will be brought by the railroads and be boarded while here. A committee will care for the boys at the fair. The boy selected from each county shall be between fifteen and eighteen years old and will be expected to write an essay about his home, farm and submit it to the State Fair Board. Under the general title of "The Home Farm," the boys will be required to deal with the following topics:

- (a) Describe the farm.
- (b) Why I desire to remain there.
- (c) What changes may be made in the present system of carrying on this farm to insure better financial returns.
- (d) What can be done to make farm life more enjoyable.

All essays must be in the hands of the County Superintendent before the 20th of August. Application blanks for entrance may be obtained from the County Superintendent.

Money Almost in Sight.

It is said that the long-looked-for checks for the Burley Tobacco Society, in payment of its third distribution of the 1908 pool will be made within the next week or ten days. Work of making out the distribution sheets for Scott county is now in progress in the local office, and it is said that the checks will be ready for distribution within the next few days. It is said that the amount on hand for final distribution amounts to about 15 per cent. Of this amount 1 per cent will be retained to cover any emergency in the final settlement, making the amount of the checks to the growers at this time about 14 per cent of the warehouse receipts. It is said that the book value of the stock in the Burley Company will be about 130 on each $100.00.—Georgetown News.

Educate Farmer Boys.

The country is crying out for educated farmers and in no age of the world has there been such golden opportunities for educated farmers. The high cost of living has made it possible for the occupation of farming to be a lucrative one. The state colleges over the country offer free tuition for the boys of the land and when a boy has completed a course in agriculture he will command a salary of from two to five thousand a year and a few educated farmer boys in each county will revolutionize the farming of the land. It might be well for many who have educated themselves to be lawyers, doctors, and dentists to leave their crowded professions and turn their attention to farming and reap the benefit of the present high cost of living. Educate your boy to farm. Keep plenty of farm journals within easy reach and take him to the state fair. Give them a course in farming at state college and watch them lead easy, happy lives with prosperous farms and families.

JUPITER PLUVIOUS

Did Not Prevent a Large Crowd At the Convention in Burlington Tuesday.

Notwithstanding the rain last Tuesday morning a large number of people came to Burlington that day to attend the convention of the Christian churches of Boone county. Several able divines were on hand and the numerous speeches were interesting. A large audience. An abundant dinner was prepared by members from that and other churches, many of them bringing large baskets well filled with the choicest edibles. The day was well spent and the church greatly benefited by the convention. The time and place for holding the next convention will be made known by the committee some time in the future.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The August term of the Boone Circuit Court was put in motion last Monday morning by Judge J. W. Cammack immediately upon his arrival about 9 o'clock. The grand and petit jurors summoned for the term were on hand, and the cases were organized at once as follows:

GRAND JURY.

J. S. Surface, Foreman;
Owen Aylor, Elsie Harper,
Lawson Brown, Jas. Botts,
Albert Underhill, R. O. Smith,
Perry Carpenter, David Brown,
Eli Carpenter, J. H. Walton,
J. W. Seebree.

Petit Jury No. 1.—T. J. Dinn, Henry Groger, Hubert Bachelor, W. H. Marshall, A. L. Nichols, R. L. Huey, Bert Berkshire, L. H. Kelly, J. D. Acra, Edward Hensley, Thos. F. Grant, J. F. Lambert.

No. 2.—John Green, Kirby Tanner, Lewis Rector, Harvey McGlasson, Geo. Blyth, W. O. Rector, B. F. Zimmer, Chas. Shinkle, Ed. Sullivan, Geo. S. Host, Hubert Rouse, Wm. Phillips.

The criminal docket was called and all the indictments were either continued or filed away, except one, where a fine of $15 was assessed.

COURT NOTES.

Judge Cammack will begin a special term of Owen county circuit court next week. Alvin Stelger, Clerk of the Owen county circuit court, was on hand early Monday morning to keep the record for circuit clerk J. A. Duncan.

Commonwealth's Attorney E. E. Winn attended the court only a few hours Monday.

The rain Tuesday morning caused some of the jurors to reach town somewhat later than otherwise would have been the case.

David H. Brown, grand jurymen not being able to come to court yesterday on account of injuries received the day before as he was going home Albert Conner was summoned to supply the vacancy on the jury.

Court will adjourn some time today, Thursday, unless intentions are sidetracked.

Rev. Oscar W. Riley will preach at Pleasureville next Sunday morning and evening. Every member of the church should attend the Bible School service at 9:30 a. m. Rev. Oscar W. Riley will speak at Buftaville Christian Church next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. All members of the church and residents of the community are requested to gather at the church promptly at 2:30 p. m. to organize the Bible School.

Hardin county has the unusual distinction of having a girl entered in the corn growing contest. The young lady is Miss Gertrude Dillard 17 years old of near Rienienville. There are 105 boys entered but Miss Dillard is the only member of the fair sex. It seems that her father was sick about the time for corn land to be broken and with unusual pluck and determination she went into the field and rode behind the plow. She is now taking part of the crop and was seen only a few days ago plowing corn in the broiling sun.—Ex.

In old times it took two men to plant potatoes. Now it takes only one, and he does not plant them, for the potatoes ride on plant themselves, while the man sits in front and admires the view. But indoors the woman does the man's work. She is still troping clothes with a flat-iron, still washing dishes by hand. If she knows anything about the machine that washes, dries, polishes and sterilizes the dishes from an ordinary meal in less than ten minutes, it is only to dream of it when she is worn out from doing the work by hand.

These Inventions Give You a Bed That Is Both Useful and Ornamental.

The Sanitary Steel Divan Bed

At last we can offer you a small Divan that takes up very little room at day, that opens up into a full-sized, comfortable and sanitary bed at night.

The construction is of extra heavy angle steel throughout, covered with the new-style National Fabric Spring. The bed closes instantly with one motion, and mattress serves as a cushion for seat. The back is tufted, and a green denim cover conceals any indication of a bed in the room. It is a very suitable piece for any room in the house as it answers well as a Divan and always meets the emergency of an extra bed.

It Serves Two Purposes

We want you to see this new bed invention. It will readily appeal to you, and our reasonable price thereon places it within your means to own one.

The Original Pullman Revolving Seat Couch

We are exclusive dealers for this celebrated bed in Campbell and Kenton counties. In our many years of handling different styles of beds, there is no bed that has ever come to our attention to which we gave as much praise as this wonderful Pullman Couch Bed. The Pullman Bed has reached the height of perfection in bed construction.

A Couch that serves two useful purposes. A Couch that solves that extra room problem is the Pullman Bed. A beautiful parlor piece at day, without showing any indications that it can instantly be converted into a full-size, comfortable bed without even moving it from the wall.

Mattress and other bedding may be folded in bed when couch is closed.

They come in a variety of beautiful frames, in any finish desired.

C. C. Roberts was the first in the town of Burlington to procure his license to hunt under the new hunting law. It would have been a great saving of rabbits and quails had the clerk refused the Judge a license.

Wheat and oats in this county have suffered much from the wet weather. The wheat crop generally is short. In some sections it is turning out 8 or 7 bushels to the acre but some yields are much better. Trimble Democrat.

"What you want to do is to have that mud hole in the road fixed," said the visitors.

"That goes to show," replied the farmer, "how little you realtors understand local conditions. I've nearly paid off a mortgage with the money I made hauling automobiles out of that mudhole."

"Were all medicines as meritorious as Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, the world would be much better off and the percentage of suffering greatly decreased," writes Lindsay Scott, of Temple, Ind. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly.

Miss Alberta Kelly celebrated her fourteenth birthday last Wednesday evening with a party which was attended by quite a number of her friends. Miss Alberta is a deserving popular with her associates and they all wish her a long and happy life. Nice refreshments were served during the evening.

A vast amount of ill health is due to impaired digestion. When the stomach fails to perform its functions properly the whole system becomes deranged. A few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets is all you need. They will strengthen your digestion, invigorate your liver, and regulate your bowels, entirely doing away with that miserable feeling due to faulty digestion. Try Many others have been permanently cured—why not you? For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly.

This county was visited by a very fine rain last Friday the result of which will be the spoiling of some bunnies and the making of many more. The corn crop, most of which was planted very late, was needing rain badly and the farmers were getting very blue. Some of the tobacco which was topped had begun flaring while the late planting was doing no good, but the rain will give the crop new life and with favorable weather from now on about 80 per cent. at least of an average crop will be honored. The corn crop will not this year be a failure.

NEW FEATURE.

Fancy Auto Show to Be One of the Many Exhibits at The Florence Fair.

On another page appears the Florence Fair advertisement, the premium list of which is as comprehensive and as liberal as any of the past, the premiums on the fancy automobiles being a new feature and the first premium ever offered by a country fair in this part of the country on that vehicle. By its long and consistently fair and square dealing with the patrons this fair has established a reputation among exhibitors not excelled by any other fair. The premiums are always paid as soon as awarded, and the directors keep its blindness up to the minute. It has always made the comfort of those who attend its exhibitions a matter of first importance, and the courtesy extended by its officials has won for the association the praise of all who come from a distance. This fair comes in a season when the country people are prepared to spend a few days away from their homes, and they can find no better place than the Florence Fair at which to enjoy a brief outing. There many pleasant hours are spent on the beautiful lawn beneath the in-irrigating shade of the towering trees, renewing old acquaintances and forming new ones. There is no place like the county fair for the country people to assemble and cultivate sociability and strengthen the bonds of friendship resulting from this annual gathering. After spending three days at the Florence Fair mingling with your neighbors and exchanging views on many important matters you will find yourself feeling better for having done so. Try it.

BADLY FRIGHTENED

Over the Appearance of A Wild Animal in their Neighborhood.

J. B. Rouse and James Strouse two prominent farmers residing out on the Florence pike, are very much agitated over the appearance in their neighborhood for a strange animal which they believe to be a wild cat. Mr. Strouse saw the animal once and describes it as dark, as large as a Shepherd dog, and makes a noise that will raise your hair. He went after neighbor Rouse and his gun when he discovered the animal but when he returned to do the killing act it had disappeared and has not been seen since although its scream has been heard several times at night. There is no doubt in the minds of Messrs. Rouse and Strouse but the animal is the same one that created so much excitement in Pleasant Valley neighborhood last fall, and would be dangerous to make battle with. Mr. Rouse is trying to organize a squad of men to engage in search for the animal as he believes the lives of both men and beasts are in jeopardy so long as it is in the neighborhood. It may be the animal is one of those that escaped from the Cincinnati zoo about a year ago. One thing in connection with the animal is the fact that a dog cannot be induced to follow its track, but seems to be overcome with fear as soon as it gets the scent.

NEXT WEDNESDAY

The Big Erlanger Fair Will Begin a Four Day's Meeting.

The big Erlanger fair will begin next Wednesday and continue four days, and the outlook is very flattering for a large attendance and a good show of livestock. The directors have made several improvements in their program and with suitable weather the Erlanger fair will be equal to any the past notwithstanding the unfavorable crop condition in Kenton and adjoining counties. The fair season is on and people are making their arrangements for brief outing and will be ready to take in the Erlanger show beginning the first day and attending until the curtain goes down late Saturday afternoon. Covington people will find the trip to Erlanger a real pleasure this year as the pike has been cleared of the distance, doing away with the dust that has been so dreadfully annoying heretofore.

A Good Game of Ball.

The best game of ball of the season was played at the local park last Saturday afternoon by the Burlington and Petersburg teams, the score resulting 3 to 1 in favor of the visitors. It was very much of a pitchers' battle in which Ruth, who pitched for Petersburg broke the season's record on the local grounds for strikes out. One of the best Burlington batters, fan, Willie Huey, for Burlington, made 11 of the Petersburg sluggers retire by the same route. Burlington made nine and Petersburg seven hits, while neither of the three runs was earned. Ruth served up a "highball" that the Burlington boys went after with an eagerness that was remarkable when it is remembered that they have dwelt in dry territory so long. The Wilson team will get a fraction at the local park next Saturday afternoon.

No More Fake Institutes.

Commissioner of Agriculture Newman has the right idea about holding Farmers' Institutes. He is arranging now for the work, but proposes not to hold an institute in a county unless the farmers wish it to be held, and signify their intention of attending. Newman justly says that the department will not be criticised for perpetuating farces, our people. This is just a place where there are only two farmers in the audience. He has received assurances from a number of points that the institutes are desired and will be attended. Boone county should of course have an institute. The meetings in this county heretofore have not been well attended. It would be well for our farmers to get into communication with Commissioner Newman and arrange a time for holding the institute when the farmers could attend. Then do a little work to get them out.

Aug. 20—"The Authority of Jesus."

Aug. 21—"The Bible contains a Revelation."

Aug. 22—"The Certainty of punishment for Sin."

Aug. 23—"The Final Harmony of all Souls with God."

Aug. 24—"If these things are True what of It? Whose affair is it?"

Everyone welcome. Congregations are not requested to vote on any question.

Measuring Up Eternity.

In order to impress upon his congregation the length of eternity, a colored preacher used the following illustration:

"If a sparrow, breddened, should take a drop of water from the Atlantic ocean at Coney Island and with this drop of water in its beak should hop a hop a day until it reached the Pacific ocean at San Francisco, and when it got there should let the drop fall into the Pacific, and when this was done should turn around and hop a hop a day all the way back to Coney Island and get another drop and do the same thing over, and keep on doing this very same thing until it had carried the whole Atlantic ocean over into the Pacific, it would then only be early morning in eternity."

Big Hay Crop.

Sure-enough timothy hay is now being sold at $18 a ton like in an institute, for instance, come down from having to pay $30 a ton for very inferior stuff as they did last winter. The hay crop is now mostly in the barn or stack and such a crop has rarely if ever been harvested in this county. The same is true of the oats crop. And the prospect for a fine corn crop is growing better all the time. With seasonable rains during the month of August corn will be a crop.—Flemingsburg Democrat.

His Nose Was Broken.

Last Saturday afternoon when Huey and Slayback, who constituted the battery for the Burlington base ball team were warming up immediately before the beginning of the game, Huey threw a ball which went beyond Slayback's reach, and it struck Harry Roberts, a spectator, a glancing lick on his nose, breaking it and causing him in-ense pain for some time. Harry showed his gameness and love for base ball by returning to the park as soon as he had his wound dressed, and witness the game.

Somebody has discovered that rubber can be made of potatoes. Owing to the high price and scarcity of potatoes some people would be glad to get paid a potato made out of rubber.

Here's The Plumb Bob

It's just another proof that Tubular Cream Separators are just up to the minute—miles ahead of any other. No other machine has it.

What's It For?

It enables you to level the Sharples Dairy Tubular Cream Separator in a minute—quicker than you could find the spirit level you must use to level all other separators. A glance at the plumb bob, hanging there on the back of the Tubular, will always tell you whether the Tubular remains level. In that way you get the very best work out of the Tubular, for all Separators should be kept level to do their best work.

Tubulars have dozens of exclusive fine points and are sold on the level. Bring the wife in. See how simple, perfect and different from others Tubulars are.

DARED

His Wife to Shoot and She Fired
Six Times at Him, Says Licher.

Shooting Occurred at Doctor's Home in Petersburg.

Wounded Man, Whose Condition is Serious, Taken to Covington.

Mrs. Licher and Dr. Tilly Now in Burlington Jail.

GRAND JURY INDICTS BOTH.

The following account of the shooting that occurred in Petersburg, last Saturday afternoon, appeared in Sunday's Enquirer: Suffering from bullet wounds in the abdomen, arm and leg, Frank Licher, 35, of Aurora, Ind., employed at the Royer Wheel Works in that city, tossed on a bed of pain at the home of his brother, Henry Licher, 215 Pike Street, Covington, last night and told a story in which he claimed he had been shot by his wife at the home of Dr. Ralph C. Tilly, Petersburg, Ky., yesterday afternoon. Licher and his wife have been separated since last February, and for some time she has been acting as Dr. Tilly's housekeeper. Licher went to the doctor's home in Petersburg yesterday, as it had been reported that he had been making insulting remarks about his own wife and Dr. Tilly, who is married. It was in response to a dare, he asserted, that his wife emptied every chamber of a 32 automatic revolver at him and a friend, named Sharp, who he said was a next door neighbor of Dr. Tilly. He declared Sharp was struck in the knee by one bullet.

Licher was taken in a cab to the home of his brother, and attended by Dr. O'Malley. His condition was regarded as serious, and it was announced that he would be taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital today.

"I'll take no action against my wife now," he said last night. "I'll wait until the grand jury convenes and then I will present the charges that she let me at the instigation of Dr. Tilly. She applied for a divorce in Boone County, Kentucky, after we became separated, but the judge refused the decree."

After the shooting Licher was placed on a ferry by friends and taken across the river to Aurora, Ind., where he boarded a train for this city. Despite the serious nature of his wound and the intense pain he walked from the grain warehouse and climbed the stairs at the Grand Central Station to the street. He was met there by his brother, who had received a telegram, informing him of the affair.

They were living at Aurora when his wife left him, he said, and went to Petersburg, where she secured employment at Dr. Tilly's residence as housekeeper. Then Licher heard rumors that he was being credited with striking his wife's name with that of the doctor. He determined to go to Petersburg and face Dr. Tilly with the report. Yesterday afternoon he arrived in Petersburg. He walked to the doctor's house and was told that the physician was in Lawrenceburg, Ind., but would return on the 5 o'clock ferry. He waited and was at the dock when the boat pulled in. As he was scanning the dock for Dr. Tilly, he caught a glimpse of his wife on the shore. He said she waved to the doctor as if to warn him of danger. Then, he said, he saw the physician leave the boat and start on a roundabout way for his home.

Licher waited for a time he declared, and then started for the Tilly residence. He met a friend named Sharp and together they proceeded to the house. When they neared the place, Licher said, he saw Dr. Tilly and Mrs. Licher sitting on the porch. He called to the physician that he wanted to see him. Dr. Tilly arose, said Licher, and replied that if he didn't go away he would shoot. "I dare you to," Licher said, he replied. "Dr. Tilly then drew a revolver and waved it at me," he added. "Then my wife grabbed the revolver and made the same dare to her. She fired six times. One bullet hit my friend Sharp in the knee."

Licher said his wife's name before marriage was Hattie Bradley, and that she lived at Ghent, Ky. Town Marshall McCune, of Petersburg, arrested Dr. R. C. Tilly and Mrs. Licher, Monday afternoon, and delivered them to Sam Adams, jailer of Boone county about 5 o'clock Monday night, who locked them up to await investigation by the grand jury which began its session last Monday. Adams said that he and the trouble given by Dr. Tilly and Mrs. Licher is so very different from the above that it will require a hearing in court before the facts in the case can be obtained.

Tuesday the grand jury returned indictments against Mrs. Licher and Dr. Tilly. Mr. Licher is indicted for malicious shooting and Dr. Tilly for aiding and abetting. Each is required to give bond in the sum of $3,000.

At last accounts Licher was yet alive but in a very critical condition.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

By Firing A Bullet Through His Heart.

Kenneth Carpenter, 29, son of Fernando Carpenter, of Richmond neighborhood, committed suicide last Monday morning by shooting himself through the heart, using a pistol. Before firing the fatal shot the young man cut his clothing open on the left breast in order that the bullet might have as little resistance as possible on its deadly mission. Young Carpenter's protracted absence from the house Monday caused his parents to become uneasy as several years ago he had attempted to end his life by taking arsenic, and they had a search for him instituted which resulted in finding his dead body at the neighborhood school house, and by his side lay the pistol which was used. R. O. Hughes, one of the neighbors discovered the body and life had evidently been extinct several hours. No cause can be assigned for the rash act, as the young man was a quiet, industrious citizen, not supposed to have any troubles.

Boone County Sunday School Convention.

The Boone Co. Sunday school convention will be held in Mr. Dennady's Grove on the Hicks pike between Richmond Station and Richmond church on Saturday, August 17th. Miss Maud L. Dance, State Worker, will be present and speak on several topics. The convention will open at 10 a. m. A varied program is being prepared. Let all the ministers in the county who can be present, and take part in the discussion. Let the men come and bring baskets of dinner with them. The State Worker will address the Sunday Schools of Walker in the Baptist church on Sunday, August 18th, at 3 p. m. Let everybody come.

The Country's Tobacco Crop.

Figures gathered for the July issue of the Crop Reporter of the United States Department of Agriculture indicate that the American tobacco crop of 1912 will be materially larger than was that of 1911. In Kentucky the acreage is 12 per cent, as compared with 1911, and the condition on July 1 was 88 per cent, against 89 per cent. on the same date last year and a ten-year average of 83 per cent.

The Crop Reporter estimates that Kentucky had 431,200 acres in tobacco on July 1st. The estimates for the various districts in Kentucky and Tennessee are as follows: Berea district, 228,000 acres; Paducah, or Western district, 136,000; Henderson or Stamping district, 35,000; Upper River district, 35,000; Upper Cumberland district, 25,000; Clarksville and Hopkinsville district, 112,500.

Cutting Expenses.

County Judge W. P. Yancy, of Owen county, has had published the following notice: "Notice is hereby given to the farmers, shippers and stock traders of Owen county, that the county will not pay the expense of the livestock inspector after August 10, 1912. If you have lambs to ship it is to your interest to see the inspector and have him give you a certificate on or before that date. Because a few farmers possibly four or five have been so careless as to allow the scabies to infect their flocks, we feel that the county has been put to enough expense in trying to prevent the spread of this much dreaded disease and that reason the expense will stop after August 10, 1912."

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, who doeth all things well, has in his wisdom seen fit to call our esteemed and beloved Bro. L. S. Love, from this sinful world to the realms above. Whereas, Fowler Lodge No. 201 has lost a faithful and devoted brother, the family devoted husband and father, the community a faithful citizen.

Resolved, That Fowler Lodge extends its deepest sympathy to the widow and children and urge them to put their trust in the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Resolved, That these resolutions be placed on the Lodge records and a copy sent to the bereaved family, also to the Recorder for publication.

Committee—W. H. Smith, N. C. Tanner.

They Don't Like The Law.

The law forbidding the bringing of fish and game into the territory is surely condemned by those who enjoy the annual fish fries over on Uncle House's farm. They do not recognize black catfish and lampnads as the only dishes necessary to make a fish fry a roaring success.

The warm weather following the recent rains is making vegetation grow very rapidly. There has already been a noticeable improvement in the tobacco crop.

will be very instructive.
The protracted meeting held at Walton Christian church by Rev.
Milo Atkinson, of Bloomington,
Illinois, assisted by the pastor,
Rev. L. A. Kohler, of Cincinnati, closed Sunday night after a most enjoyable session of two weeks during which time Rev. Atkinson preached some very eloquent and entertaining sermons of the strongest logic. Prof. J. S.
Gardner, of Bromley, conducted the vocal exercises in a very sat isfactory manner. The attend ance was large every night and much interest was manifested by the public generally. Miss and Mrs.
Joseph Readnor united by let ter and J. J. Hudson made a confession of faith with the priv ilege of taking his present mem bership with the Presbyterian church which he had been attend ing.
Quite a number of Masons from degree, the candidates being S.

H. Henderson, J. H. Bethel and H. D. Nichols. There was a large attendance and a splendid time was enjoyed by all until "dow twelve" when the work was completed. Bro. Fred Har beck, of Covington, officiated as Master in conferring one of the degrees, Bro. Fryer, of Butler
Lodge in another degree, and Bro.
J. G. Slater and the Walton team conferred the last degree, and Bro. L. Vest delivered a most en joyable lecture, assisted by Bro.
Roy D. Stamler with a full set of stereopticon views. A nice lunch was served, Bro. Elmer Stansifer being the master of ceremonies.

FOUR BIG DAYS IN THREE

SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING

Boone County

FAIR

There is no place where you can spend a more delightful day, the spacious grounds over which the beautiful forest trees spread their leafy limbs in shady protection; and where you meet your old friends whom perhaps you have not seen for a year, enjoying the pleasure of their society and entertaining conversation, such as makes the old time country fair one of the happy events of the year, and while, perhaps, the day has its fatigue, yet it is refreshing and invigorating and makes all of us feel nearer to each other in friendship and pleasant association.

HOOK WORM IN KENTUCKY.

Report of the Executive Secretary of the Rockefeller Sanitary Commission on Health Conditions in Kentucky after a visit and inspection.

Dear Doctor: I have just returned from Kentucky. You may be interested in a few facts picked up on this journey:

1. The latest Kentucky Legislature enacted a law authorizing the State Board of Health to conduct a summer school for county health officers and making it obligatory on all county health officers to attend the school, the counties paying the expense. This school was held in Louisville from June 1 to 11. In addition to the health officers many county judges were present and took an active part in the work.

2. The program covered in its main outlines the work of the county health officer; the instruction was definite, concrete and effective; the principal themes were illustrated with lantern slides, maps and other exhibits. The meeting was immensely valuable; it marks a new step in the public health work in Kentucky.

3. Hookworm disease, because of its importance and because of its being new to the health officers in this state, was given more emphasis than any other subject. This instruction brought immediate results; when I left the laboratory at Bowling Green on the morning of the 15th there were about 1,000 specimens on hand, most of them from county health officers.

4. All the lecture on hookworm disease that I heard in Kentucky impressed me with the value of local pictures. Doctor Locke gave at Louisville the most effective series of illustrations that I have seen; he had made his own slides from photographs which he had made of mountain homes, the sanitary conditions, the people whom he had treated in his own district. The story was from his own experience; it was irresistible. A man's best working tool is his own capital experience.

5. Dr. Locke is trying a new method of administering the treatment. The patient takes the first dose of salts Friday night or Saturday morning, the second dose of salts Saturday night; on Sunday morning the thymol is taken in three parts at 6, 7, and 8 o'clock, the patient remaining in bed; at 10 o'clock the last dose of salts is given and the patient gets up. He reports that as far as he has been able to make a microscopic examination, 90 per cent of his patients have been cured by one treatment.

6. Out in the field I saw the most eager and intelligent response on the part of the people to our work that I have seen anywhere. On Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 1 to 14, I went with Dr. A. T. McCormick on a tour of preliminary inspection through some of the more remote rural districts of Edmonson county. Dr. Heizer, the vital statistician, and a microscopist were with us. On Friday afternoon at Brownsville Dr. Heizer and I went up to the public school, made a group photograph of the children, gave them a talk on hookworm disease, and asked that each child give us a specimen for examination. Dr. Heizer having expressed doubt of our ability to secure specimens in this way, the request was made primarily as a test of the attitude of the children. Miss Fox the Teacher gave support, and practically all the children brought in specimens next morning.

That evening the court house was crowded with people from the little towns and the surrounding country to hear the illustrated lecture on hookworm disease. Dr. McCormick announced the person desiring examination could secure containers at the close of the lecture; that if they would bring in the containers on the following morning, the microscopist would examine them and that all persons found infected would be given free treatment. By 8 o'clock next morning the specimens were coming in by the hundreds. Dr. McCormick had to announce that specimens would be sent to the laboratory for examination and that he would return later to conduct a free dispensary.

On Saturday at noon we arrived at Ice Spring where a lecture had been announced for 9 o'clock at the school house. We had to adjourn to church to accommodate the crowd. The church had to be darkened for the lantern; it was the hottest place I was ever in, but the people heard the last word and remained after the lecture to get the containers for specimens to be sent to the laboratory. The leaders at this meeting were the local representative in the State Legislature and local collector of vital statistics. I was greatly impressed with the effectiveness of these local registrars of vital statistics as an agency in this campaign of education.

7. Of all my observations in Kentucky, the thing which impressed me the most was the effective organization, the enthusiasm, the aggressive energy of the State Department of Health, and the way in which it was enlisted on the part of the people. Every person connected with the department is fired with the spirit of service; every person, whatever his own specialty, is ready at all times to lend a hand in any department of the work. Dr. Heizer, for example, is vital statistician; but his chief concern is not to make statistics, but to make his statistics vital, to get his facts tell a story and get this story to the people. If you had seen him in action on our hookworm campaign in Kentucky, you would have seen a man who was not content merely to examine the specimens that are sent in to him, but who has caught the idea that the laboratory was established to serve the people of Kentucky, to be an aggressive factor in bringing better health conditions in this commonwealth. To the end, she goes to the people with illustrated lectures and demonstrations, to show the people what the laboratory can do and how they can help for their own good. At the Louisville meeting she gave an illustrated lecture on the hookworm disease, and the following morning she had a laboratory open for the three days. In addition to other work, she had hookworm specimens enough to keep two microscopists busy. She went before the State Federation of Women's Clubs at the recent annual meeting, gave an illustrated lecture and appealed to about 300 representatives of the club women of the State as a patriotic duty to have their own families examined for hookworm infection, to get their neighbors interested and put the matter before the clubs which they represented. She followed this up by writing a letter to each of the women and sending each a hookworm specimen. It is not surprising that this makes work for the laboratory. It gets the women interested in its work. When the funds had been exhausted the State Medical Society supplied funds for the salary of the microscopist and the specimens for hookworm disease. Dr. McCormick asked his Council to take enough from his own salary to pay another microscopist and now the work is going on where the next is to come from. Then they have enlisted Dr. Mutchler, the biologist at the Normal School. There isn't a more effective health officer in the State; each year he teaches these health lessons to about 1400 school teachers. He was at Louisville to give one of the best illustrated lectures of the course.

I know no state in which the medical profession is so well organized. In the survey of the state for hookworm infection the physicians have given indispensable cooperation. The State Board of Health keeps in constant touch with them and calls on them for definite service and they give it.

I repeat, the thing which most impressed me was the aggressive energy of the State Department of Health and of all persons connected with it. The work of each department is reinforced by the sympathetic and active cooperation of all; the passion of service which is becoming contagious is making the citizenship of that State in making better health conditions for the people.

Very Sincerely Yours,
WICKLIFFE, ROSE.
JOHN MORGANS
Captor, Lewis H. Bond, Passes Away at His Home in Avondale, Ohio.
A long and eventful career was ended Sunday afternoon when Attorney Lewis Hamilton Bond, who had the distinction of being the captor of General Morgan, died at his home at 4129 Ivenhoe avenue, Norwood, Mr. Bond was born July 28, 1833, at Nelsonville, Ohio. He and was the son of Dr. H. A. Bond. He was admitted to the bar in 1859. In 1862 he was appointed by Governor Todd to superintendent of the recruiting of troops and later was appointed second Lieutenant Company B, Eighty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. In 1863 he was detailed to command a battalion of the Third Ohio, and shortly afterwards was sent from Parkersburg, W. Va., to pursue General John Morgan, the famous raider, who, at that time was operating in Ohio. His command followed Morgan for five days and captured him—Pendletonian.

The Soil.
The farmer who intends to grow a good crop of truck should plow the patches this fall and cover them with manure. If convenient it is well to cover the ground with straw, tobacco stalks, etc., before plowing and turn this under which will prevent the soil from baking and will aid it in standing a drought. Cover the plowed ground with manure and use from 800 to 1500 pounds of good truck and tobacco growing fertilizer. An acre of ground prepared this way will pay well in potatoes and will be fine in the fall for turnips.

Successful truck growers use plenty of manure and fertilizers, plant their crops early and work plenty while growing.
The farmers of this country should never be without plenty of vegetables if they mix brains and muscle with energy and push.—Ex.

Likes Nominee Wilson.

The nomination of Woodrow Wilson for president means a new democracy. It means a new epoch in American self-government.

The Democratic party at last has broken its shackles. It has emancipated itself. It has rehabilitated itself in power and principle. It has turned its face to the rising sun, to re-establish the faith of the American people in their own institutions.

Woodrow Wilson will be the next president of the United States. But he will be more than that. He will be the first president of the United States in a generation to go into office owing favors to nobody except the American people and under obligations to nothing except the general welfare.

No political boss brought about his nomination. No political machine carried his candidacy to victory. No coteries of Wall Street financiers provided the money to finance his campaign. He has no debt to pay to corrupt politicians or corrupt business. He was nominated by the irresistible force of public opinion, and by that alone. He stands before the country a free man.

The American people have set out to regain possession of their government, and Woodrow Wilson was nominated for president because he embodies that issue. The bosses and plutocrats who tried to prevent his nomination were beaten by the power of the people, and the power that will elect him.

With Woodrow Wilson as the Democratic candidate for president, it makes no difference what Mr. Roosevelt does. It makes no difference how many third parties he organizes. Progressive Democrats and progressive Republicans now have a candidate of their own. The contest between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft is now a contest for the control of the Republican organization and nothing more. The menace of a third term no longer hangs over the country. The menace of personal government no longer threatens American institutions. The United States is not to be Mexicanized. It is to be re-Americanized.—New York World.

For The State Prisoners.

Savings accounts for the benefit of the prisoners in the two state penitentiaries will be started August 1st by the State Board of Prison Commissioners. This was decided upon at a meeting of the board with the consent of Governor McCreary, and will carry out the provisions of a law passed by the 19th General Assembly providing that 20 per cent of the per capita earnings of the prisoners shall be deposited for the benefit of the prisoners or their families. Of the amount deposited for each prisoner, 35 per cent will be kept intact until the prisoner has served his sentence, and the fund accumulated will be turned over to him when he is released from the penitentiary. This will prevent prisoners from being without funds when freed. The accounts of the prisoners will be kept by a clerk in the Auditor's office, and will allow considerable extra work, as it will mean that about $25,000 will be saved each year for the prisoners.

Told The Members Good Bye.

Rev. S. J. Bradley, who has been pastor of the Methodist church in the Petersburg circuit for the past four years, preached his last sermon for the church at Burlington, last Sunday night. It is not often that a Conference will assign a pastor to the same circuit for four years in succession, and the fact that Rev. Bradley has served this circuit for four consecutive years is a testimonial of the esteem in which he is held by the membership of the circuit. It is hoped that Rev. Bradley will be equally as popular where ever his lot may be cast in the future.

Hunters Calore.

Frankfort, Aug. 13.—During the month of July there were 1,498 hunters' licenses issued to resident hunters of this State and one non-resident license, making 1,500 issued during the month. The number of licenses issued far exceeded the expectations of the Fish and Game Commission. Christian county so far holds the record for the largest number of hunters, as 128 licenses were issued in that county.

Lightning struck the residence of Lewis Recter, in Locust Grove neighborhood, last Monday afternoon. Fortunately very little damage resulted.

For Sale—Three thoroughbred Brown Leghorn roosters. Price, 50 cents each. Apply Bert Smith, Burlington R. D. 1.

A 100 Per-Cent

Kitchen Cabinet Value

This No. 422 GREENCASTLE $28.50

The Greencastle Kitchen Cabinet is not an advertised article. It is sold solely on its merits, and has found place in the homes of the best housekeepers of the country.

The Greencastle factory has minimized the cost of production and marketing of this cabinet (omitting advertising), thus being able to give you a 100 per cent value.

From the minutest feature of the fine cabinet construction, the Greencastle is by far superior to any cabinet on the market.

CONSTRUCTION

Nothing but seasoned, selected lumber goes into the construction of the Greencastle. Skilled union cabinetmakers build them. The finish is superior to that of a high-grade dining-room piece. Top corners are dovetailed to prevent warping. Hardware is dull brass finish, and adds to the attractiveness.

FEATURES

The entire interior of top is white enameled. It is divided into compartments, providing ample room for a complete dinner set. Flour hopper, equipped with sieve, is fed from rear by lowering it to the base of cabinet. It is made detachable for cleaning. Swing anti-proof sugar jar is placed where it is always handy for use, and is also detachable.

A very distinct and exclusive feature are the roll doors, that are much more convenient than the swing style. Roomy compartment in base accommodates all utensils, and is equipped with sanitary wire shelves, racks on door, glass spice jars, rolling pin, &c. The base also contains one divided cutlery drawer, one linen drawer and a metal bread and cake box. The beautiful design of the No. 422 Greencastle will add beauty to the kitchen and convenience and ease to the housekeeper.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The Boone circuit court adjourned last Friday about 3 p. m. after a busy session of five days, although there were not many jury trials.

R. Rogers showed that since his last report he had collected revenue to the amount of $702.13. Deeds recorded 78, mortgages recorded 12, marriage licenses issued 15, licenses to sell soft drinks 19, hunters licenses 19.

To pay the grand and petit jurors for the term required $257. J. C. Revell was appointed deputy clerk of the court.

Lena Strader was granted a divorce from Dudley Strader, while the bonds of matrimony existing between Edward S. Riddell and Queen V. Riddell were dissolved. All the above parties were colored.

J. B. Cummins was given a verdict for $150 compensatory damages against William Farrell.

Robt. Popham was appointed Summers administrator of Mary Ellen Snyder. Popham was adjudged the owner of the horse claimed by him.

In the action of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, assignee of the Richmond-Deposit Bank against the Verona Bank, the former was adjudged to be the owner of the warehouse certificate in controversy.

True Value of Life.

There is so much for us to do, so many wrongs to be made right, and so many evils to be remedied that a consideration of the petty bickerings of life is far beneath our notice. So long as life runs smoothly in its usual channel we are inclined to attach great importance to the minor details of existence and in time yield largely to its influence. The terrible test of some great emergency, however, makes clear life's true values. The greatest success that can be attained, the highest station that can be achieved are nothing in the closing hours of a man's life. Then it is that he scrutinizes his past for the least vestige of personal good which he has wrought, and it is that he alone which is worth anything at all to him. He cannot derive much comfort from the wealth he has accumulated or the social distinction he has attained, but he can and does rely for his eternal reward upon the unselfish and simple service he has rendered for the welfare of others. The life upon which we place so high a value must end some time sooner perhaps than we imagine. We must build for the future, indeed, not blindly or selfishly, but bravely and in that spirit of brave fellowship which measures up to every emergency.

M. S. RICE.

OLD GRUDGE

Leads to The Killing of M. T. Wilson, Undertaker at Verona.

By William Littrell, Farmer of Same Neighborhood.

Wilson Died at A Cincinnati Hospital Tuesday Morning.

Littrell Rearrested on Charge of Manslaughter and Released on $5,000 Bond.

Walton and Verona neighborhoods were startled last Thursday about noon by a serious shooting affray at Hugh Vest's barn. William Littrell shooting M. T. Wilson three times, two of the shots taking effect in Wilson's bowels and passing entirely thru while the third shot missed him. It seems that Littrell and Wilson were not on good terms, and when they met at Vest's barn Littrell asked Wilson about something he understood he had said about him and Wilson said it was true. Littrell gave it the deuce and advanced towards Wilson who was in his buggy. Wilson reached down and drew a 22 rifle which some of the witnesses said he appeared to be loading. Littrell drew his pistol when Hugh Vest stepped in between the men and requested them to drop the matter which was causing the trouble, and Littrell seemed to put his pistol in his pocket, but Wilson continued to fool with his rifle, when Littrell drew his pistol and shot Wilson. Wilson fell out of the buggy on the side from Littrell, the rifle falling five or six feet from Wilson. The horse moved up with the buggy, and Wilson got up in a stooped position and started from Littrell, but turned sideways towards him, saying, "do not shoot any more." The men were then about ten feet apart and Littrell fired the second shot and Wilson fell again, but got up and ran into the barn, being followed ten or fifteen feet by Littrell who fired a third shot as Wilson entered the barn about 50 feet distant. The third shot did not take effect. Wilson's rifle was examined when it was picked up and was found to be empty. The attention of those present were turned to the wounded man and Littrell walked away almost unobserved. Esq. O'Neal telephoned Sheriff Hume about the trouble and he was on the scene in a short time and soon had Littrell under arrest he having shown no disposition to conceal himself or to get out of the State. He was brought to Burlington and the Sheriff guarded him that night and Friday he was taken before County Judge Cason, where he waived examination and gave bond for his appearance at the next term of the Boone circuit court in the sum of $2,000 attorney D. E. Castleman going on his bond.

Wilson was put on the train in a few hours after the shooting and taken to a hospital in Cincinnati, where an examination of his wounds showed them to be as reported by the local doctors who realized that in a hospital was the only place where the necessities of the case could be met.

Littrell is a farmer, about forty years old. Wilson is a funeral director and about the age of Littrell. They lived close together, and the trouble that resulted in the shooting grew out of Littrell having heard that Wilson had accused him of making a statement reflecting on one of their neighbors.

Littrell claims that he can prove that Wilson had threatened his life and had been after him once before with his rifle.

Mr. Wilson was thought to be getting along very well until last Monday, when he took a change for the worse and died about 10 a. m. Tuesday. Immediately upon receiving the news of Wilson's death, Sheriff Hume and Boone County Attorney Riddell were in conference which resulted in the sending of Sheriff B. B. Hume to arrest Littrell on a charge of manslaughter. He found Littrell at Walton, and brought him over to Burlington, and yesterday morning his attorney, D. E. Castleman, of Erlanger, came over and a new bond for $5,000 was executed.

Wilson died of acute pneumonia. The remains were brought to the home near Verona yesterday.

Fair Under Way at Erlanger.

The Erlanger fair is under full way this week, the rains last week doing great benefit to it. The exhibition in floral hall during the week will be as good as any of the past, while the show of horses and cattle will not go back. The track is in excellent condition and there will be some exciting races. The pike being closed the entire distance from Covington to Erlanger will cause many city people to attend, who, heretofore, have remained away on account of the terrible driving conditions. That this year's fair will be equal to as good as any of those the association has held, and the purses hung up ought to bring fast trotting and pacing stock, and doubtless will.

There will not be preaching at the Universalist church next Sunday as previously announced on account of the State Convention being in session at that time.

According to report, Kansas is suffering this year from the worst invasion of grasshoppers she has experienced since the celebrated invasion of 1874. It is said to be due to the dry weather in that State for the past few years which has brought about conditions favorable to the present invasion.

Complaint is made by the Boone County Recorder about chickens thieves getting in their work among Burlington poultry yards. Looks like a revival meeting is needed over there.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Remarkable though it may be the raid on the editor's poultry was immediately preceded a big basket meeting on Sunday. There are many weedy corn fields this season; it was impossible to keep them clean on account of the continuous rains. Now the question is what must be done to prevent seeding the land for future crops. The Chinese farmers would gather the seeds by hand and compost them for fertilizer. Labor is too expensive to dispose of weeds in that way. What shall be done?

J. M. Eddins received his new ten passenger mail wagon last Wednesday. It is a nice vehicle, constructed especially for the comfort of passengers. Around the top is a railing which makes the upper deck a good, roomy space for carrying packages and mail sacks. Had the new wagon been received one day sooner it would have been in the storm on the afternoon of Tuesday of last week, and probably wrecked on its first day's service.

In a few weeks the Boone Co. High School will begin its fall and winter session. Owing to the illness of his father Prof. Dix has not been able to do much work in the interest of the school during the summer vacation although he had planned to be very active along that line. The school has the most excellent reputation and it is hoped that the people of Boone county will give it the patronage it deserves, and that the names of many new pupils will be added to the roll the first day of the term. The school is centrally located and should be built up until the entire county can point to it with pride. Prof. Dix will do his part, and solicits your hearty cooperation in behalf of the institution.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

CHAPTER XX.

Murrell Shows His Hand.
At length points of light began to show through chinks in the logs. Hannibal roused and sat up, rubbing his eyes with the backs of his hands. "Wasn't you able to sleep none?" he inquired. Betty shook her head. He looked at her with an expression of troubled concern. "How soon do you reckon the judge will know?" he asked.

"Very soon now, dear," Hannibal was greatly consoled by this opinion. "Miss Betty, he will love to find us."

"Hark! What was that?" for Betty had caught the distant splash of oars. Hannibal found a chink in the logs through which by dint of much squinting he secured a partial view of the bayou.

"They're fetching up a keel boat to the shore, Miss Betty—it's a whoop-er!" he announced. Betty's heart sank; she never doubted the purpose for which that boat was brought into the bayou, or that it nearly concerned herself.

Half an hour later Mrs. Hicks appeared with her breakfast. It was in vain that Betty attempted to engage her in conversation. Either she cherished some personal feeling of dislike for her prisoner, or else the situation in which she herself was placed had little to recommend it, even to her dull mind, and her dissatisfaction was expressed in her attitude toward the girl.

Betty passed the long hours of morning in dreary speculation concerning what was happening at Belle Plaine. In the end she realized that the day could go by and her absence occasion no alarm. Steve might reasonably suppose George had driven her into Raleigh or to the Howards' estate, and she had kept the carriage. Finally all her hope centered on Judge Price. He would expect Hannibal during the morning; perhaps when the boy did not arrive he would be tempted to go out to Belle Plaine to discover the reason of his non-appearance. She wondered what theories he would offer themselves to his ingenious mind, for she sensed something of that indomitable energy which in the face of rebuffs and laughter carried him into the thick of every sensation.

At noon Mrs. Hicks, as usual as in the morning, brought her dinner. She had scarcely quitted the loft when a shrill whistle pierced the silence that hung above the clearing. It was twice repeated, and the two women were heard to go from the cabin. Perhaps half an hour elapsed, then a step became audible on the packed earth of the dooryard. Some one entered the room below and began to ascend the narrow stairs, and Betty's fingers closed convulsively about Hannibal's. This was neither Mrs. Hicks nor her daughter, nor Slosson with his clumsy shuffe. There was a brief pause, then the leading was reached, but it was only momentary; a hand lifted the bar, the door was thrown open, and its space framed the figure of a man. It was John Murrell.

Standing there he regarded Betty in silence, but a deep-seated fire glowed in his sunken eyes. The sense of possession was raging through him, his temples throbbing, a fever stirred his blood. Love, such as it was, he undoubtedly felt for her, and even his giant project, with all its monstrous ramifications, was lost sight of for the moment. She was the inspiration for

It all, the goal and reward for which he struggled.

"Betty!" the single word fell softly from his lips. He stepped into the room, closing the door as he did so. The girl's eyes were staring with a mute horror, for by some swift, intuitive process of the mind, which asked nothing of the logic of events, but dealt only with conclusions, Murrell stood revealed as Norton's murderer. Perhaps he read her thoughts, but he had lived in his degenerate ambitions until the common judgments or the understanding of them no longer existed for him. That Betty had loved Norton seemed inconsequential even; it was a memory to be swept away by the force of his greater passion. So he watched her smilingly, but back of the smile was the menace of unleashed impulse.

"Can't you find some word of welcome to me, Betty?" he asked at length, still softly, still with something of entreaty in his tone.

"Then it was you—not Tom—who had me brought here!" She could have thanked God had it been Tom, whose hate was not to be feared as she feared this man's love.

"Tom—no!" and Murrell laughed. "You didn't think I'd give you up?"

"You didn't think I'd give you up?" he asked, standing with a halter about my neck, and all for your sake—who'd risk as much for love of you?" He seemed to expand with savage pride that this was so, and took a step toward her.

"Then It Was You—Not Tom—Who Had Me Brought Here!"

"Don't come near me!" cried Betty. Her eyes blazed, and she looked at him with loathing.

"You'll learn to be kinder," he exclaimed. "You wouldn't see me at Belle Plaine; what was left for me but to have you brought here?"

While Murrell was speaking the signal that had told of his own presence on the opposite shore of the bayou was heard again. This served to arrest his attention. A look of uncertainty passed over his face, then he made an impatient gesture as if he dismissed some thought that had forced itself upon him, and turned to Betty.

"You don't ask what my purpose is where you are concerned; you have no curiosity on that score?" She opened her eyes to meet his glance with a glance as resolute, then her eyes sought the boy's upturned face. "I am going to send you down river, Betty. Later I shall join you in New Orleans, and when I leave the country you shall go with me."

"Never!" gasped Betty.

"As my wife, or however you choose to call it. I'll teach you what a man's love is like," he boasted, and extended his hand. Betty shrank from him, and his hand fell at his side. He looked at her steadily out of his deep sunken eyes, in which blazed the fire of his passion, and as he looked, her face paled and flushed by turns. "You may learn to be kind to me, Betty," he said. "You may find it will be worth your while." Betty made no answer; she only gathered Hannibal closer to her side. "Why not accept what I have to offer, Betty?" Again he went nearer her, and again she shrank from him, but the madness of his mood was in the ascendant. He seized her and drew her to him. She struggled to free herself, but his fingers tightened about her.

"Let me go!" she panted. He laughed his cool laugh of triumph.

"Let you go—ask me anything but that, Betty! Have you no reward for patience such as mine? A whole summer has passed since I saw you first—"

There was the noisy shuffling of the stairs and releasing Betty, Murrell swung about on his heel and faced the door. It was pushed open an inch at a time by a not too confident hand and Mr. Slosson thus guardedly presented himself to the eye of his chief, whom he beckoned from the room.

"Well!" Murrell, when they stood together on the landing.

"Just come across to the keel boat!" and Slosson led the way down stairs and from the house.

"Damn you, Joe, you might have waited!" he observed the outlaw. Slosson gave him a hard grin. They crossed the clearing and boarded the keel boat which rested against the bank. As they did so the cabin in the stern gave up a shattered presence in the shape of Tom Ware. Murrell started violently. "I thought you were hanging out in Memphis," Tom said, and his brow darkened, as sinister and forbidding as a starless night in the winter. "New Orleans"

"I was in Memphis until five o'clock this morning."

"Damn your early hours!" roared Murrell. "What are you doing here? I suppose you've been showing that dead face of yours about the neighborhood—why didn't you stay at Belle Plaine, since you couldn't keep away?"

"I haven't been near Belle Plaine; I came here instead. How am I going to meet people and answer questions?" the teeth were chattering. "Is it known she's missing?" he added.

"Hicks raised the alarm the first thing this morning, according to the instructions I'd given him."

"Yes!" gasped Ware. He was dripping from every pore and the sickly color came and went on his ashen cheeks. Murrell dropped a heavy hand on his shoulder.

"You haven't been at Belle Plaine, you say, but has any one seen you on the road this morning?"

"No one, John," cried Ware, panting between each word. There was a moment's pause, and Ware spoke again. "What are they doing at Belle Plaine?" he demanded in a whisper. Murrell's lips curled.

"I understand there is talk of suicide," he said.

"Good!" cried Ware.

"They are dragging the bayou down below the house. It looks as though you were going to reap the rewards of the excellent management you have given her estate. They have been trying to find you in Memphis, so the sooner you show yourself the better," he concluded significantly.

"You are sure you have seen no one?" John; no chance of discovery? For God's sake get her away from here as soon as you can; it's an awful risk you run!"

"She'll be sent down river tonight," said Murrell.

"Captain," began Slosson, who up to this had taken no part in the conversation, "when are you going to cross to the other side of the bayou?"

"Soon," replied Murrell. Slosson laughed.

"I didn't know but you'd clean forgot the Clan's business. I want to ask another question—but first I want to say that no one thinks higher of me from the ladies than just now; I'm genuinely fond of 'em, and I've never lifted my hand ag'in 'em except in kindness." Mr. Slosson looked at Ware with an exceedingly virtuous expression of countenance.

He continued: "Yo' orders are that we're to slip out of this a little afore midnight, but suppose there's a hitch here—the lady knowing what she knows and here's the boy knowing what he knows."

"There can be no hitch," rapped out Murrell arrogantly.

"I never knew a speculation that couldn't go wrong; and by rights we should have got away last night."

"Well, whose fault is it you didn't?" demanded Murrell.

"In a manner it were mine, but the ark got on a sandbank as we were fetching it in and it took us the whole damn night to get clear."

"Well!" prompted Murrell, with a sullen frown.

"Suppose they get shent of that notion of theirs that the lady's done drowned herself; suppose they take to watching the river? Or suppose the whole damn bottom drops out of this deal? What then? The lady, good looking as she is, knows enough to make west Tennessee mighty on healthy for some of us. I say, suppose it's a flash in the pan and you have to crowd the distance in between you and this part of the world, you can't tell me you'll have any use for her then."

Slosson paused impressively. "And here's Mr. Ware feeling bad feeling like hell," he resumed. "Him and me don't want to be left in no trap with you gone God only knows where."

"I'll send a man to take charge of the keel boat. I can't risk any more of your bungling, Joe."

"That's all right, but you don't answer my question," persisted Slosson, with admirable accuracy of purpose.

"What is your question, Joe?"

"A lot can happen between this and midnight—"

"If things go wrong with us there'll be a blaze at the head of the bayou; does that satisfy you?"

"And what then?"

Murrell hesitated.

"What about the girl?" insisted Slosson, dragging him back to the point at issue between them. "As a man I wouldn't lift my hand ag'in no good looking woman except, like I said, in kindness; but she can't be turned loose; she knows too much. What's the word, Captain—you say I'm to take her?" He made a gesture of appeal to Ware.

"Look for the light; better still, look for the man I'll send. And with this Murrell would have turned away, but Slosson detained him.

"Who'll he be?"

"Some fellow who knows the river."

"And if it's the light?" insisted Slosson, dragging him back to the point at issue between them. "As a man I wouldn't lift my hand ag'in no good looking woman except, like I said, in kindness; but she can't be turned loose; she knows too much. What's the word, Captain—you say I'm to take her?" He made a gesture of appeal to Ware.

The fine rains which fell last week came in good time for the corn and tobacco, as they were beginning to show the effects of the drought. It is the opinion of many that these rains have assured a splendid crop of corn.

INDIANA NEWS ITEMS.

A river man who has been a close of weather conditions for nearly thirty years says that he has never known a Saturday in which the sun did not shine some time during the day.

Dredging the river channel in front of town resumed Wednesday after an interruption the greater part of two weeks due to a rise. The work is being done by the Monongahely and Western Dredge Company. Two cuts thirty-three feet wide and six feet below the present gauge are to be made diagonally from a point a short distance above the wharfbow toward the upper ferry landing on the Kentucky shore. The cuts will extend to the channel on the other side of the river. The gravel and sand dug out of the bed by the dredgeboat Western is loaded on barges and then emptied near the opposite shore where there is hardly any current. E. D. Lynn of Cincinnati, government inspector in charge, says that barring another rise the work will be completed in four or five weeks. Low water mark in the dredged channel will very nearly correspond with the Cincinnati gauge upon which most Lawrenceburgers are accustomed to base their observations when the river gets to flood stage. Lawrenceburg Press.

The Tobacco Crop.

Hopkinsville, Aug. 18.—The Hopkinsville tobacco market showed renewed activity last week after a period of lethargy. The demand was decidedly better, and inquiry from various sources indicated an awakening among the buyers to the fact that the present stock, while small, is in good condition, and the growing weed is in anything but satisfactory shape, though somewhat improved by generous rains.

Richmond, Aug. 18.—The general rains throughout this county last week came as a great blessing to Madison farmers, as it has caused numbers of tobacco and corn crops to be brought out which were considered ruined on account of the dry weather. The corn crop, the largest in acreage in years, gives prospects of one of the largest ever raised here, while the tobacco crop will be about the same as last year, which was one of the best in the State.

Carlisle, Aug. 18.—One crop of tobacco growing has been sold to a local speculator here at $10 a hundred for all grades. This is the first sale since 1912 of tobacco. The condition of the tobacco crop is much better than a week ago. Some cutting has been done and about all of the smallest tobacco has been topped. Good rains the last of the week are causing the recently topped tobacco to spread and a bumper crop is the outlook. The average is the largest in years and indications are that the yield will be accordingly heavy.

Cooperative Tobacco Meeting.

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of Burley tobacco growers of Bath county held here Monday Aug. 12, the following resolutions were adopted by many tobacco growers:

Whereas there being universal failure at the selling end of the tobacco business from the intelligence of the 1912 crop of tobacco should be just cause for the tobacco raisers throughout the Burley District of Kentucky and other States to take immediate steps toward organizing with a view to putting the tobacco business on a paying basis, and we in mass meeting assembled do hereby solicit co-operation and correspondence with the tobacco raisers and request that all persons interested in a co-operative movement to make a paying price for the 1912 crop of tobacco sign a call for such a conference meeting to be held at the Courthouse in Lexington on the 28th day of August 1912 at two o'clock p. m., the same to be forwarded to A. W. Walden, Owingsville, Ky., for publication in the Lexington Herald and county papers throughout the Burley District—Owingsville Outlook.

PENSIONS HELD UP

Examiner Makes Announcement in Letter.

Back Allowance From Time Of Approval.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 14.—A circular letter sent out by J. W. Stone, State Pension Examiner, copies of which have been received here, makes the announcement that no Confederate pensions will be paid before November 5th, none of the applications having been acted on in time to be payable on August 5, which is the date next preceding November 5th, on which the law directs such disbursements to be made. While the announcement will be a great disappointment to many applicants, the letter gives the assurance that the delay will be eventually forthcoming from the date that the application has been received at the examiner's office. Examiner Stone states that 2,000 applications are on file, and many others are being received daily. While Capt. Stone gives no reason for the delay other than that it takes considerable time to examine each claim, it is understood that owing to the shortness of money in the State Treasury at present a delay in paying pensions will be a convenience to the State. Capt. Stone's letter is as follows:

"Frankfort, Aug. 12.—Dear Sir: Replying to your letter relative to your application for pension will say that final action has not been had on your application yet. There are 2,000 applications on file and many being received daily, and they are being prepared as rapidly as possible for consideration by the Pension Board. It takes a great deal of time and labor in each case and consequently much delay occurs."

"As soon as applications are finally passed upon by the board I will notify each applicant or his attorney of the result. The dates provided by law for the payment of pensions are August 5, November 5, February 5 and May 5. Consequently no pensions can now be paid before November 5 next."

"The pension will begin, in all cases that are favorably acted upon, on the day the applications are received in this office. When applications are received on or after the date is stamped upon them, so that in all cases in which pensions are allowed they will be calculated from the date of the reception of the application here."

"No pensions can now possibly be paid before November 5. How many or what paying part will be ready for payment by that time it is impossible for me to tell at this date."

"I want to assure you, and all who may inquire of you, that I realize the anxiety of many of the applicants, and that all possible haste is being made and will be made in the consideration and final adjudication of the claims that are now pending or may hereafter be filed."

Mr. Bryan's Great Victory.

New York Herald: "How does Bryan stand the strain?" This was the question uppermost in the minds of those who saw the journeyman presidential candidate dashing along the thirty-fourth street the other day. Fresh from the most terrific political struggle in the history of the Democratic party, a man who had played the leading part, he looked as fit as a man returning from a month's vacation. Most of the politicians and newspaper men who took part in the siege of Baltimore came back in wretched physical condition, the sizzling heat, irregular meals and all night sessions, playing havoc with the strongest constitutions. Bryan alone came through with unimpaired vitality. "Bryan is a remarkable physical machine," said a reporter who had campaigned almost 100,000 miles with the Nebraskaan. "To begin with, he has a powerful frame. It has never been weakened by riotous living. He is a tremendous appetite, and can eat at any hour of the day or night. Eggs, a small steak, some chops, dessert and coffee is an ordinary meal for him. He can sleep to order. I've seen him sleep like a baby in the 15 and 20 minute intervals between speeches from the 'back piazza' of his train. It's his ability to sleep under any conditions that enables him to keep up his high rate of speed."

Not So Bad in Boone.

It's so dry here that wagons are going with their tongues out. Ice has to be soaked in water all night before it is wet enough to make lemonade. The catfish kick up such a dust the bed of the river that the river has to be sprinkled before you can go fishing. A spark from an engine set fire to a pond and burned up a lot of fish. Because of the fire could be extinguished and the ground is so dry and hard that crawfish holes in low places are being pulled up and used for gas pipes.—Ex.

Feeding Lambs.

The New York experiment station at Cornell recently completed some interesting tests in feeding sheep, to determine the relative cost of grain weight with wide and narrow rations and to study the effect of overfeeding lambs. The lambs were fed in addition to wheat, alfalfa and corn, alfalfa hay, bean fodder and oil meal for one lot; alfalfa and alfalfa distillers' dried grains, for another and timothy hay as a supplementary feed for the third. At the end of 90 days the lambs in the first lot had made an average gain 16.3 pounds, a cost of 3.7 cents per pound of gain. The corresponding figures for the second lot were 20 pounds of gain at a cost of 7.48 cents per pound and for the third lot 15.3 pounds of gain at a cost of 7.87 cents per pound. The experience with the third pen showed that these sheep lacked protein in their ration because they were very eager to eat up all the bean fodder and by coming up to full feed after their ration had been changed toward the end of the experiment when many lambs were eating daintily or were off feed entirely. These lambs not only made poorer gains but it was hard to get them to eat as much grain by weight as did the lambs in the other pens, until a change was made in the ration which narrowed the nutritive ratio.

TYPHOID LURKS IN WELLS.

United States Geological Survey Issues Reprint of Report on "Underground Waters for Farm Use."

The rural sections, long considered ideal so far as the health of their inhabitants, have been dealt a blow by physician investigators who maintain that two-thirds of the cases of typhoid fever in the city owe their origin to unsanitary conditions in the country and to polluted water supplies.

Farms, which are generally remote from towns, cities, or other centers of congested population, would seem to be almost ideally situated for obtaining pure and wholesome water, but in reality polluted water is exceedingly common to them and typhoid fever rates are usually greater in country districts than in cities. Typhoid fever is now almost universally believed to be transmitted solely through drink or food taken into the stomach, and is especially liable to be communicated by polluted waters obtained in shallow wells near spots where the discharges of typhoid fever patients have been thrown upon the ground and subsequently carried down through the soil and into the wells, and it is doubtless principally by this fact that accounts for the disease being so common in farming regions.

On a great many farms the well is located at a point that may be convenient to the dwelling, without any regard for the possibility of the pollution of the well water through the circulation of water underground. Information relating to the underground movement of water is particularly valuable, and on this account the United States Geological Survey is distributing a report on the subject—Water-Supply Paper 235—"Underground Water for Farm Use," by Myron L. Fuller. The demand for this publication has necessitated a third reprint. A copy of the report may be obtained by addressing the Director of the Survey at Washington, D. C.

What is a Boy Worth?

Somebody has figured out that the average boy who is dependent upon his parents for a livelihood until he reaches the age of 21 years costs them $4,000 by the time they get away from the home roost. The question arises: Does it pay to raise boys and are there no other crops that would prove more profitable? If a boy turns out to be a cigarette fiend with a breath like a turkey buzzard and a laugh that makes the untutored donkey perfectly at home in his society and with an untrammelled and unvarnished desire for gold work, it is safe that his parents might have invested their $4,000 at a much better advantage. But if the boy grows up to manhood with the lesson well learned that wealth and success grow only on bushes watered by the sweat of one's brow the parents need not begrudge whatever they might have spent on him for he will be a source of increasing pride and joy to their hearts and when they grow old and their step is faltering they will have two strong arms to lean upon and help them over the twilight path.

The Cost of Carelessness.

Forty-five millions is a big toll to pay to carelessness, but the loss to the nation in packing and shipping of goods is doing this every year. The trouble is mainly with the lack of skill and care exercised by the farmer. He knows that his goods tastelessly as well as carefully marketed as a better price than the market, and the one who does not in the matter of eggs, the careful farmer is forced to accept the same price that is paid his less inquisitive neighbor and the public, staggering already under an era of high prices, is $45,000,000 out of pocket. It is doubtful whether in any other country such carelessness would be permitted.—Ex.

TOBACCO PRODUCTION

For Over Half a Century Indicates Close to Bumper Crop For This Season.

According to the official estimates of the tobacco crops of the United States by the Department of Agriculture, covering a period of 4 years, the production in 1912, based on the area planted and the probable yield per acre under favorable circumstances during the growing season, will not be far from a record-breaker, approaching close to the bumper crop of 1910. A comparison of the statistics in the appended table reveals the fact that the 1910 tobacco area was the largest ever planted in the United States. The 1911 planting was not so large, but the total production was materially increased by the heavier yield per acre. The preliminary estimate of the Government for 1912 places this season's planting at 1,194,200 acres, with a probable production of 1,003,000,000 pounds.

A study of the conditions controlling the tobacco crops of the country, which are substantiated in a measure, at least by the statistics at hand, lead to the conviction that the crops progress pretty much by five-year periods. The period from 1892 to 1903, for instance, was marked by an area planted to tobacco of more than one million acres each season, and the yield per acre and total production was maintained approximately at the same figures. The period from 1904 to 1908, inclusive, was marked by a sudden shrinkage in the acreage planted and a corresponding decrease in the total production, regardless of the fact that there was a considerable improvement in the average yield per acre. Previous low prices and the organization of the growers' pools in various sections contributed largely to this condition.

In 1909 the area under cultivation was again increased, and a good sized crop, the largest up to that time, was produced. The 1910 planting was still heavier, and while the 1911 crop fell short again, the 1912 crop promises again to start the upward trend. Judging by the past it is reasonable to suppose that at least one more large crop of tobacco may be planted without seriously glutting the markets and bringing about conditions such as prevailed during the five-year small crop period from 1904 to 1908 inclusive.

MILLIONS IN GOLD

Not Worth the Face Value Is in Circulation.

Washington.—There are probably millions of dollars in gold coin circulating in the United States which are not worth their face value. This fact has been called to the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, but the Government has no desire or intention to recall the money in order that only gold of standard value may be in circulation.

While the Government does not require that gold coins shall be of standard weight to be redeemed for their face value, it has established what is known as "limit of tolerance," which permits a loss in weight of one-half of one per cent. Below that limit the Treasury makes reduction at the rate of four cents per grain.

Lightweight gold it is said, exists principally on the Pacific coast where the greater bulk of the yellow metal is in circulation. The financial interests of the West, the Treasury has been advised, know two kinds of gold—Treasury gold and bank gold. The former is fullweight while the latter is below the limit of tolerance. The worn gold never reaches the Treasury or the Subtreasuries. According to reports here it is passed from bank to bank and individual to individual, like a plugged coin, and in the way maintains its parity of value.

Carefully enough, silver coin is always worth its face value, however much abused by the ravages of time.

Judge O'Rear has notified Committee H. Green Garrett that his services are at the disposal of the Republican State Campaign Committee from now until the election. The attitude of Judge O'Rear was not unexpected by his friends, despite the fact that his son, Prentice O'Rear is one of the leaders in the "Bull Moose" movement.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Florence, of Lexington pike, entertained quite a number of friends and relatives August 11. Among the relatives were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Anderson and family, of Walton. Mr. Fred Day, a brother of Mrs. Florence, of Falmouth; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ransom and family, of Lexington; Misses Hazel and Florence Ransom, and some of their friends, Misses Alma Airen and Marie Mesch, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Belle Stevens.

There was a very large crowd last Saturday attending the ordination services at Walton Baptist church when Rev. A. Kirtley Johnson was ordained to preach as a minister in the Baptist church. The ordination sermon was delivered by Rev. Ellis, of Latonia, and prominent ministers of that denomination assisted in the exercises. A splendid choir, of the church, made the church and a most happy day was spent by all. In the evening Rev. Johnson delivered a most thoughtful and interesting sermon to the congregation, and impressed all with the opinion that he will be a very forceful worker in the Master's cause. Rev. Johnson has attended several churches and all of his time is taken up in the work, and he is in receipt of numerous invitations to preach at some of the best churches in the city being of such a satisfactory degree.

The Masonic gathering here last Saturday was one of the most enjoyable and successful meetings ever held in Walton. The occasion was the exaltation to the august degree of a Royal Arch Masons of six candidates.

Chas. Chambers, J. Taylor Grubbs, J. C. Tomlin, J. W. Cross, Dr. Chas. C. Jones, and A. M. Edwards. The degrees were conferred by the Companions of a Royal Arch Chapter, who came on a special train in the morning and spent the day here, the work requiring their entire time. There were about 75 companions from the surrounding towns, and all were so impressed all with their gentlemanly deportment and excellent appearance. The degree was conferred on the morning, and the companions repaired in a body to the beautiful grove at the residence of Companion Napoleon Kirtley, where the work was done. The lofty trees, a fine dinner of fried fish, barbecued lamb, and other delicacies was served, winding up with coffee, watermelon and cake. The work was resumed in the afternoon and was completed in bare time to catch the train for home at five o'clock.

Many of the guests, attending from the neighborhood, all enjoyed the beautiful work as it was the finest ever witnessed in Walton. The visitors were delighted with the work, and gave them and asked for an opportunity to demonstrate their appreciation at a meeting of their Chapter on Sept. 7th, when the Royal Arch Chapter will be conferred on six candidates, and in all probability Dr. B. W. Stalward and Judge J. G. Tomlin of Walton will be members of the team on whom the degree is to be conferred as it was requested that they take the degrees at that time. Too many of the brethren of Walton brethren for the manner in which they handled the delightful affair on Saturday, but particularly Dr. Kirtley, Dr. Metcalfe, Dr. G. Slater, Roy D. Stalmer and Joseph Reed. The latter gave a very happy impression of the old time impracticality of the old time preacher, and attired as the old time preacher, Bro. Reed delivered a characteristic sermon that was duly appreciated and greatly enjoyed by all. The day will be long remembered as one of the most pleasant in the Masonic history of Walton.

BEAUTIFUL OHIO RIVER

Lined With Quaint, Old Towns and Sleeping Villages.

From an attractively illustrated folder issued by the Louisville and Cincinnati Packet company the following descriptive matter relative to the Ohio river is taken:

From its source to its mouth the Ohio flows between majestic wooded hills and green, fertile, hill-backed valleys. A peculiar feature, and one that causes no little wonder, is that while each side has its hills and its valleys, the hills on one side of the river are always opposite the valleys on the other shore.

The banks are lined with thriving twentieth century cities and old towns and sleeping villages of a seemingly bygone age, the wooded lands and productive farms.

Upon its waters the commerce of an empire is transported. Steamers with their loads of passengers and freight ply out between its ports and great coal fields are continuously passing down the full length of its course.

The United States Government awakened to the importance of this great commercial waterway, has begun the construction of a series of dams and locks that will when completed, assure a perpetual stage of nine feet of water throughout the length of the river. When these needed improvements are an accomplished fact the commerce of the Ohio will reach such vast importance that one dare not prophesy its future.

The beauty of the river has often been told in song and story. Every mile of its banks is every day history enacted thereon, and all its course is alive with points of interest to the traveler; consequently only from the deck of a steamer can the charms of the Ohio be seen and fully appreciated.

Between Cincinnati and Louisville the Ohio flows in every direction, winding in and out among the hills, seemingly putting forth an effort to lose itself.

Liquor Law Amended.

The law forbidding the sale of liquors to minors has been amended so as to prevent minors from entering saloons without written direction of parents. The law now reads: "Any person who shall sell, lend or give, procure for, or furnish vinous, spirituous or malt liquors or any mixture of either to a person under twenty-one years of age; other than his own children without the special written direction to do so, specifying the person by name and the quantity, from the father, mother, or guardian of such infant, shall be fined fifty dollars, provided that it shall be unlawful for any person under the age of twenty-one years, except he is accompanied by his father or guardian to enter the saloon, room, or place or premises, where the business of a retail liquor dealer is carried on, for the purpose of drinking therein, or on the premises of said dealer, spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or any mixture thereof as a beverage, or for the purpose of directly or indirectly purchasing, or otherwise procuring or obtaining spirituous vinous or malt liquors, or any mixture thereof to be drunk as a beverage, without the special written direction to do so, specifying the person by name and the quantity, from the father, mother or guardian of said infant, and any person violating any provision of this act shall be fined fifty dollars."

The Law of Good Citizenship.

The law of good citizenship requires:

1. That I shall keep sacred my word of honor.
2. That I shall be loyal to God and my country.
3. That I shall be cheerful obedient to orders and be happy and pleasant even under trying circumstances.
4. That I shall be courteous and polite towards all with whom I associate.
5. That I shall be kind and helpful to others, doing at least one good turn for some one every day.
6. That I shall be profitably employed all the time, realizing that labor is honorable and idleness is a disgrace.
7. That I maintain myself in good health in order that I may be as efficient in life as possible.
8. That I have courage to do my duty.
9. That I cultivate my powers of observation, thought and reason.
10. That I shall be faithful to every trust.
11. That I shall have a laudible ambition, and shall strive in sincerity and honor to render such service in the world as will prove that I have some degree of spirituality and culture.

Tobacco Knife Busy.

The tobacco knife will be in evidence this week as many of the growers will begin splitting the stalks and making preparations to husk and cure the 1913 crop. From all appearances the crop is well above the average, and in some places it is a bumper. Says Scott Henick has about 30 acres which he claims has the prospect of any he has raised. He wouldn't be surprised to see it average 2 1/2 to 3 bushels per acre. He is optimistic about the crop, and he is not alone. Many other growers are realizing the same thing. The crop is well above the average, and in some places it is a bumper.

"The Billion Dollar Waste."

The greatest waste in any single industry in this country is made with the corn crop. The grain of the annual corn crop of the United States is worth on the farms one and a half billion dollars. In a ripe corn plant 60 per cent of the feed value is contained in the kernels and 40 per cent in the stalk and leaves. With the grain worth one and a half billion dollars, the feed value of the crop is a billion dollars. At least 90 per cent of the feed value of the stalk is lost under the present system of farm management—a waste with this crop alone of almost a billion dollars yearly. No other business but farming could stand such an enormous loss.

In the New England and the Middle States most of the stalks are saved as fodder, and there are many silos, but with the damage from weathering, the waste in handling and the loss in digestibility from drying, the farmers are very far from utilizing the full feed value of the corn stalk. In the corn belt, where the bulk of the crop is raised, comparatively few corn growers harvest the stalks, and the only returns most of them secure from the forage is by pasturing dead stalks in the cold and storms of winter. Frequently the death of stock pastured in the stalk fields makes a loss that far exceeds the returns from the feed.

Fatal Accident.

At a late hour on Saturday evening as Morice Bellman, engineer, and Henry Nordloh, fireman, both of Sunman were conveying a car purchased engine to which were attached two cars filled with coal road scrapers etc. to the site of the new gravel road recently constructed for by Mr. Bellman, the iron bridge over a branch of Hogan Creek, near the residence of J. W. Chisholm in Manchester township on one side of the bridge gave way under the weight, overturning the engine into the bed of the stream a broken foot between Bellman and Nordloh was driven with the engine across the bridge from which he was injured from which he died later. Bellman was the driver. The cars remained on the bridge way. Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Why It Costs More.

Prof. Alfred Vivian, of the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University, asserted in a recent interview that "the consumer himself is largely responsible for the higher cost of food products." This is the way he figures it out:

It is not so very many years ago that the housewife went to the store and carried her purchases home in a basket. Now she orders over the telephone and has her purchases sent out in a delivery wagon or an automobile. It is not unusual for the automobile to travel a mile to deliver a 5-cent loaf of bread and the expense of maintaining this delivery system is necessarily paid by the consumer. One used to be content to buy his oatmeal and wheat grits in bulk; now he must have his breakfast foods in fancy packages, the packaging costing more than the contents. Formerly one went to the grocery with a pail for a pint of oysters; now they come home in fancy paper or tin containers. All of these things may be sanitary, but at the same time they cost money, and the consumer pays the bill. At the same time none of this increase in price goes to the producer. One constantly hears about the increase in price of milk, but the complainant does not realize that the standard set by modern city milk inspection has infinitely increased the cost of producing milk. If people were willing to go back to the kind of milk they bought twenty years ago they could get it for about the same price as they then paid."

"Were all medicines as meritorious as Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, the world would be much better off and the percentage of suffering greatly decreased," writes Lindsey Scott, of Temple, Ind. For sale by J. W. Berkshite & Sons and W. E. Kelly.

Mr. Joe Snider of Spring Lick was walking along the banks of Casey Creek when he saw a catfish some three feet long lazily floating on the surface of the water. He shot the fish as it came to the bank and prepared for the table. When the fish was opened a blue spot about 18 inches long was inside the catfish. It was a parasite.

Women!

If weak, you need Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is made from gentle herbs, acts in a natural manner, and has no bad results, as some of the strong drugs sometimes used. As a medicine—a tonic—for weak, tired, worn-out women, Cardui has been a popular success for over 50 years.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Lula Walden, of Gramlin, S. C., followed this advice. Read her letter: "I was so weak, when I first began to take Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Now, I can do all the general housework for a family of 9." Try Cardui for your troubles. It may be the very remedy you need.

MUST ENROLL

To Parents and Guardians in Boone County.

That All May Know the New Compulsory School Law and The Penalty for Its Violation.

WE PUBLISH IT IN FULL.

Parents and guardians send them to school—Every parent, guardian or other person residing within the boundary of the county school district, and having the custody, control and supervision of any child, or children between the ages of seven and 12 years inclusive, shall cause such child, or children to be enrolled in and to attend some public or private day or parochial school regularly for the full common school, or graded common school term in each year in the common district of the county in which such child or children may live in this Commonwealth. Provided, however, that this act shall not apply in any case where the child has been or is being taught at home in such branches as are taught in the public schools for a like period of time and subject to the same examinations as other pupils in the district in which such child resides; and for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not any child is embraced within this exemption the County Court may order such child to submit to an examination to be given by the county superintendent of schools. Provided, further, that this section shall not apply to any child who is excused by County Board of Education, upon its being shown to the satisfaction of the county superintendent of schools that such child is not in proper physical or mental condition to attend school.

Penalty for false statement.—Any parent, guardian, or other person having the custody, control or supervision of any child embraced within the provisions of this act, who shall make a false statement concerning the age of such child or the time such child has attended school, shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof may be fined in any sum not exceeding fifty dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days or both as fined and imprisoned at the discretion of the court.

Any parent, guardian or other person having the custody, control or supervision of any child embraced within this act who shall be proceeded against under this act may prove to the satisfaction of the court that he is unable to compel the child under his control to attend school, and he may thereupon be discharged from liability, and such child shall be proceeded against as a delinquent child under the statutes in such cases made and provided.

Penalty for violation.—Any parent, guardian or other person failing to comply with the provisions of this act shall forfeit to the use of the schools within the district in which the child lives a sum not less than five dollars nor more than twenty dollars for the first offense nor less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars for the second and every subsequent offense, and cost of suit.

Intoxicating Liquors Barred.

At Frankfort, on the penalty of dismissal from service at the penitentiary and houses of reform of any who take any kind of intoxicating liquors at these institutions, an order was issued by the new Prison Commission as follows: Any Warden, Deputy Warden, Superintendent, guardian or other official or employee of the State Prison or State House of Reform who shall drink intoxicating liquors while on duty or who shall be found under the influence of intoxicating liquors on or off duty shall be dismissed.

The commission also determined to send back to the counties from whence they were sent to the houses of reform children who are paupers instead of criminals. The commissioners decided to grant no paroles nor make appointments at this meeting.

Tried to Kill Himself but Couldn't

Here is a good story from an exchange about a man who was determined to commit suicide. He went to a store and purchased a rope, a cup of oil, a box of matches, a dose of arsenic and a revolver. He went down to the river and pushed a boat from the shore and waded to where a limb hung over, tied the rope to the limb and placed the dose of arsenic in his pocket. He then took the oil, lighted a match and set fire to his clothing; swallowed the dose of arsenic; put the muzzle of the revolver to his temple, pushed the boat from under him and pulled the trigger. But the bullet glanced off his neck, struck about him and he fell keelup into the water; the water put the fire out and he got entangled and coughed up the arsenic. He swam out and announced himself a candidate for the Legislature on the Progressive ticket.

Growers Dissatisfied.

Lexington, Aug. 24.—In response to the report from Frankfort that tobacco growers of Franklin county who had tobacco in the pool of 1898 are dissatisfied with the final payment that is being made and are threatening suit against the Burley Tobacco Society with a view of creating a new society, a statement was issued from the society's headquarters here this afternoon in which denial is made that there has been discrimination. There is no difference whatever, it is stated, in the proportion paid on the crops. Any seeming discrepancy is due to the condition of the tobacco when received by the society. For tobacco received in summer order a charge of $0.50 per 100 pounds was made and deducted as against a charge of $10 per 100 for tobacco in winter order.

MAD DOG VICTIM'S TAKING TREATMENT

Madstone Adhered Five Hours to The Hand of One of The Parties.

The five persons at French who were bitten by a strange dog supposed to have had hydrophobia, mention of which was made in last week's Local, are being treated daily by the famous Wamsley madstone, owned by Mrs. Martha Lowe, of Homestead. The stone has adhered to two of the unfortunate, Miss Alma Kittle and Miss Mary Thompson.

The parents of these girls induced Mrs. Lowe to come to French and she has taken up her abode temporarily at the Thompson home. At one treatment yesterday the stone adhered to the Kittle girl's hand five hours.

After doing such serious damage at French the dog appeared at Aurora where it bit eight persons. Two of them are being treated by Aurora physicians and six went to Indianapolis for treatment.

The word that was sent out last week to the effect that the dog's brain showed no evidences of hydrophobia, was far from being correct. Word came back from Indianapolis to the Aurora physicians who had sent the animal's head away that the dog had rabies in the worst form.

This madstone, which thus has been brought into such valuable service in this community, has an interesting history, and is consequently prized very highly by its possessor, who gave the Local the following information concerning it.

"The stone has proven its efficiency more than 100 times since it became my property. While it was owned by my mother, Mrs. Eunice Wamsley, it was used more than 100 times. It has never failed to do its work."

"The stone was once a part of the famous Tanner madstone, and was purchased of the Kentucky Tanners by my father, Moses Wamsley. The Tanners brought it from Virginia more than 100 years ago."

"A tanner was one night given supper and lodging by a man named Tanner up in Virginia. When he prepared to leave the friendly roof that sheltered him he stated to his benefactor that he had no money to give in return for the kindness that had been shown him, but that he had that to give which was of greater worth than any small sum of money. He then produced the stone and explained its merits. The stone has been in my family for more than sixty years."—Rising Sun Local.

Resolutions of Respect.

The per capita wealth in the United States is put at $1,300. Fifty years ago it was less than one-fourth that amount. Then the millionaires of the country could be counted on the fingers of one's hand, and their fortunes were reckoned at two or three million dollars only. There is something wrong in conditions when men can legitimately accumulate fortunes in a short period of time. The quadrupling of the per capita wealth has been of so benefit to the toiling millions. It is not a good condition of things when the rich grow richer and the poor poorer."—Georgetown Times.

Farm Demonstrators.

Frankfort, Aug. 26.—Farm demonstrators from the Federal Department of Agriculture will be stationed in ten counties in Kentucky next year. Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newman stated today that he is now assured of sufficient funds for the purpose. The Government and the State each have an appropriation to be used for this purpose, and the manufacturing and distributing concerns has adopted the policy of allotting $1,000 to each of certain counties selected in a State for the purpose of promoting agriculture on the theory that no agriculture prospers their sales increase.

These demonstrators will give expert advice to farmers regarding matters bearing on the character of soil rotation of crops, methods of cultivation and fertilization, laying off the farm, drainage, building silos, barns, etc., and all questions arising in connection with practical farming. Their method of demonstrating is unique. They make arrangements with the farmer whereby he plants his crop in a field according to his ideas, then the demonstrator takes a portion of the same field, plants the same kind of crop, after the most approved methods, and demonstrates, side by side, to the farmer, the advantage of scientific methods.

The counties in which the demonstrators are to be located will be chosen so as to have the demonstrations on diversified kinds of soil. Commissioner Newman hopes before his term expires to have a demonstrator in every county, believing the wealth of the State can be multiplied. "If this can be done," said Commissioner Newman, "the increased yield will pay the expenses of the State government ten times over in a year."

SCARED OFF.

At last the blackbirds have been scared off for a time at least. Last week a plan was tried which seems to have induced them to go elsewhere for their nightly slumbers. It was suggested that if they were greeted with a fusillade of shots just before their rising time in the early morning that perhaps they would be so badly scared that they would not care to come back again. Permission was given by the Mayor and on last Wednesday morning a number of boys and men, with shot guns and other firearms opened up on them about 3 o'clock and for an hour or more volleys were kept up with telling effect. Large numbers of them were killed and those that escaped were so badly scared that many of them remained away that night. For two other mornings the firing was kept up and now the dwellers along Wilder St., and in other parts of the city where these birds were wont to congregate feel that they have been relieved of a very great annoyance and nuisance.

Those of the citizens who had not been told that such a plan would be tried were somewhat startled when the firing began and did not know what was happening in the town. Some thought the bank was being blown up, others thought a war of extermination had broken out. The telephone exchanges were kept busy answering the calls of subscribers who wanted to know what in the world the matter was. When told they unanimously declared, "let the good work go on." This scheme worked well for the time, and if there is a return of these pests, it should be tried again.—Blue Grass Clipper.

It is bad enough in Georgetown but what do you think of this from Danville? Nineteen keepers of "blind tigers" were arrested by the police who were asleep, and all of them put in the work house. One of them was a Blue Grass Clipper.

STATE NEWS.

Mr. David M. Beach, aged 31, and Miss Sarah Beach, aged 21, were married in Covington last week.

Mrs. Mary Freeman, aged 70 years, wife of Mr. William Freeman, of Montgomery county, was stricken with hemorrhage of the brain, while washing clothes and dropped dead.

Virginia Ruth, a two-year old daughter of Rev. R. L. Benn, of Mayeville, died from eating a daisy, which it is said caused ptomaine poisoning. It is thought she swallowed the seed.

Mr. J. C. McDonald brought to this office last Friday two green peppers that stand high up in the "Hot" family. These measured six inches in length and seven inches round.—Greenville Sentinel.

The colored voters of Midway do not seem to be disturbed over Roosevelt's attitude on the negro question as a Roosevelt club with 42 members was organized among them here Monday night.—Midway Clipper.

The Capitol Commission has appointed H. E. Hillemeier and Prof. H. Garman of Lexington a commission to supervise the planting of the trees in the rear of the new Capitol. The State Forester will be added to the commission as soon as he is selected.

Of all the useless concerns of modern times is the "Press Bureau" of the leading political parties. The campaign managers hire a lot of wordy space fillers, who write long dissertations of dry stuff that few papers can afford to give space to and no man has time to read.—Carlisle Mercury.

Some Bath county farmers are attempting to organize a co-operative selling movement among the tobacco growers. Experience seems to teach that the farmers can't stick together unless they have got the glue they don't care to stick. Hence the grower usually gets stuck.—Cynthiana Log Cabin.

Watermelons were a drug on the market here on Saturday last, a wagon being drawn up on almost every corner of the city streets, loaded with the luscious fruit. Prices ranged anywhere from five cents up based on size. It is thought that as many as 500 melons were disposed of in this way.—Campbellsville News-Journal.

The Western Union Telegraph Company has closed its office at Carlisle, and one of the correspondents of a daily paper says the city is now without telegraphic communication with the rest of the world. That ought to make no difference. The correspondents have been using a grape vine for a long time anyway.—Cynthiana Democrat.

We are indebted to J. H. Nimmo for the biggest apple that has been brought to this office this year. Mr. Nimmo returned Sunday from Benton, Marshall county, where he had been visiting the family of J. B. Oakley, and it was while on this trip that he found the big apples. He brought back several of these apples from Mr. Oakley's orchard, and four of them weighed five pounds and two ounces. We got one of the four.—Marion News.

The electric car due in LaGrange last Sunday night at ten o'clock was stopped by a pole cat at Anchorage. The motorman discovered the animal on the track, and in time to stop the car at the safe distance, and an effort was made to "shoot" him off, but with no success. Finally the car was started, but the varmint held his ground. The cat came out second best, when the car hit him, but passengers had a very "odoriferous" ride on to LaGrange.—LaGrange Era.

In the county of Owen no industry has grown like that of sheep raising. There are thousands more sheep in the county now than ever before. There are a few things needed in the county before the farmers are prepared for sheep as they should be. They need more fence and blue grass, better shade and smaller fields. Blue grass will be very low this fall, and much should be sown. Fencing is cheaper than ever before, so there is no reason why this county should not fence, and sow blue grass and prepare for sheep.—Owen County Democrat.

The Colored Baptist church has announced a "Gospel Feast" to take place in this city. The event will be commemorating the 25th anniversary in the ministry of the pastor, the Rev. William Hocker. According to hand bills, the Rev. Mr. Hocker will preach a series of sermons, the following being some of the announced subjects: "Blind the Scarlet Thread in the Window," "After the Ball is Over," "Hell Under the Water," "Old Shoes and Moulded Bread," "A Dead Dog After Fleas," "Have Out Your Bibles," "The Bible that the sun Do Move," and "Proving by the Bible that Christ was a Colored Man."—Lexington Enterprise.

Mr. Frank Kennedy, who is an excellent fisherman, has been successful in catching a large number of fish in the river.

headed for a log, and despite Mr. Smedley's efforts it went down the obstruction, and was broken by the log. According to Mr. Smedley it would have been a "little" the size of a "pound" Harrodsburg.

Last Saturday Mr. Albert Threlkeld was returning to the house after overhauling some work in a field on his place, and as he was passing thru the orchard he was suddenly stricken with blindness and diarrhea and fell unconscious. He has a small dog that is always his constant companion and never leaves his side when he is out on the farm, and as soon as his master fell the dog went on to the house, where his actions attracted the attention of Mrs. Threlkeld, who thought it was strange that the animal should return without his master. She went to investigate and found the unconscious form of her husband. She called some workmen on the farm and Mr. Threlkeld was carried into the house, where it was several hours before he regained consciousness. He was sufficiently recovered from the attack to be in town Tuesday.—Harrodsburg Herald.

GOOD CROP

Of Tobacco Is Looked For—Louisville Times Sizes Up
Situation for 1912.

In spite of the fact that the tobacco crop of 1912 is expected to be very irregular in yield, though generally of excellent quality, it is not too late for the yearly miracle to be worked. The crop is currently and noisily spoken of as "the weed," it is in fact the weed par excellence, and like other weeds has that amazing vitality and "come out" when in other weeds are the despair of the agriculturist. It may dry up and blow away and come to life. It may be "drowned" and washed away and help enrich some other fellow's farm. It has a more than Irish ability for coming up smiling, which is perhaps the reason why only in Ireland have British attempts at tobacco culture been successful. We know of only two agencies that can effectively destroy it—Night Riders and a killing frost and in the latter case, since Germany took to serving sheep-wash with cabbage the farmer has acquired a taste in the purchase and particularly in the Green River section floods have done a great deal of damage; in late rains have brought as they always do, new vigor. And thus it is true of tobacco, as of other maligned gifts, corn for example, that what is one man's food is another man's poison.

But be the outcome what it will there is rejoicing. The Executive Committee of the Kentucky Society is sending out checks for the crop pooled in 1909, and from Henderson word comes of the sale of the last remnant of "strips" to British buyers. Everything comes to him who waits.

Wanted—An Apple.

Although there are more than a thousand well-defined varieties of apples now under cultivation in the United States, there are very few that are adapted to the conditions of the upper Mississippi valley. In Iowa and Minnesota the climate is not suitable for the established Eastern varieties. There are plenty of good fall apples produced in that region, but none that are good for keeping through the winter. The apples known as the Wealthy and the Colorado Orange are almost the only ones that can be kept until midwinter, and they are not to be compared with the best Eastern varieties.

The Minnesota Horticultural Society has a standing offer of one thousand dollars to any one who will introduce into the state an apple that has hardiness and keeping quality besides the other qualities that are essential to good apples. The society is also encouraging its members to grow seedlings, in the hope that ultimately, by cross breeding, the right sort of apple may be produced.

In Iowa the horticultural department of the Iowa State College is trying to achieve a similar end by different methods. It is turning for help to the science of chemistry. Since a high content of sugars and acids indicates good quality in apples, the horticulturists are submitting different varieties to chemical analysis, on the theory that certain valuable chemical characteristics will be inherited by one generation, are likely to appear in the next. If that proves true, a part of the guesswork in breeding plants will be eliminated. By cross-breeding the sorts that are chemically satisfactory with varieties that are hardy and productive, a few seedlings may be obtained with a large preponderance of desirable qualities. And these few may be the progenitors of a new apple of the North.

This No. 422 GREENCASTLE $28.50

The Greencastle Kitchen Cabinet is not an advertised article. It is sold solely on its merits, and has found place in the homes of the best housekeepers of the country.

The Greencastle factory has minimized the cost of production and marketing of this cabinet (omitting advertising), thus being able to give you a 100 per cent value.

From the minutest feature of the fine cabinet construction, the Greencastle is by far superior to any cabinet on the market.

CONSTRUCTION

Nothing but seasoned, selected lumber goes into the construction of the Greencastle. Skilled union cabinetmakers build them. The finish is superior to that of a high-grade dining-room piece. Top corners are dovetailed to prevent warping. Hardware is dull brass finish, and adds to the attractiveness.

FEATURES

The entire interior of top is white enameled. It is divided into compartments, providing ample room for a complete dinner set. Flour hopper, equipped with sieve, is fed from rear by lowering it to the base of cabinet. It is made detachable for cleaning. Swing anti-proof sugar jar is placed where it is always handy for use, and is also detachable.

A very distinct and exclusive feature are the roll doors, that are much more convenient than the swing style. Roomy compartment in base accommodates all utensils, and is equipped with sanitary wire shelves, racks on door, glass spice jars, rolling pin, &c. The base also contains one divided cutlery drawer, one linen darter and a metal bread and cake box. The beautiful design of the No. 422 Greencastle will add beauty to the kitchen and convenience and ease to the housekeeper.

Local Happenings.

Next Monday is county court day.

Last Sunday was an uncomfortably warm day.

The local creamery installed some new machinery, last week.

The foliage on the trees begins to indicate the approach of fall.

The rains this month ought to make a good crop of late potatoes.

Wm. Bentler, of Erlanger, was over in his machine, last Tuesday night.

The auto race at the Erlanger fair were a success as dust producers.

The Erlanger auto buses did a prosperous business during the fair last week.

Bear in mind that your presence is expected at the Florence fair this week.

For Sale—Nice Hampshire buck. Apply to Mrs. T. J. Walton, Burlington R. D. 1.

Thieves got six of Misses Sallie and Lizzie Rogers' nice fryers, one night last week.

Sheriff B. B. Hume's race mare, Mother, won her race at Toronto, Canada, last Monday.

The trustee office will be kept busy this fall enforcing the compulsory educational law.

The weather the past two weeks is calculated to make the tobacco of coarse growth.

Not much doing in this county the remainder of this week, as everybody will be attending the fair.

Mrs. James E. Smith was a very successful exhibitor of fancy needle work at the Erlanger fair last week.

Atty. S. Gaines is recovering from a severe attack of chiggers he contracted while fishing down on Gunpowder creek.

Lightning struck a tree in a pond near Mayfield, this State, and killed a thousand fish. This sounds fishy, don't it?

There was a big drop in the temperature last Monday night, bringing relief from the heat that prevailed all day.

H. B. Grant, for 35 years secretary of Kentucky Masonic Grand Lodge, died of pneumonia at his home in Louisville, last Monday.

A very lively electric storm visited this section about 11 o'clock, last Sunday night, and disturbed the slumbers of many people.

Miss Atha May Eddins entertained with a party, Tuesday night. A large number of the young people enjoyed the occasion.

Assessor Thomas G. Willis will be on the road again in a few days, his official work always beginning on the first day of September.

Blanton Pope's residence now occupies a site at the top of the hill back of where it used to stand. It was moved easily and expeditiously.

Mrs. James Brown, of Idlewild, was taken sick last Saturday and died on Sunday. She was the mother of Lawson Brown, of this neighborhood.

Hubert Conner, of Hebron, received from a party at Gilbert, Illinois, four very fine young Holstein cattle for which he paid a long price.

Lost—Or strayed from my farm on Middle creek a male sheep. Information as to its whereabouts is requested. Mrs. J. J. Walton, Burlington R. D. 1.

Lost—Between Bullittsville and Petersburg, lady's white sweater. Finder will please return to Mrs. Lucille Cropper, or call up 217 Con solidated Telephone.

The heating plant has been installed at the county infirmary, and the old people will be made more comfortable hereafter during excessively cold weather.

The Commencement Exercises of the Common School graduates will be held at Burlington, Thursday afternoon, September 5th, 1912. All are invited to be present.

The estimated damage to crops in England, resulting from continuous rains, is thirty-five million dollars, and it is predicted that by winter prices over there will reach famine figures.

Albert Conner, who was up to see if the electrical storm had done any damages about his premises last Sunday night, saw the light caused by the burning of the Easton barn over in Kenton county.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the school law requiring children within the common school age to attend school. In each county will be found a list of officers to see that the law is complied with.

THE ERLANGER FAIR.

Ideal Weather and A Large Attendance.

The Erlanger fair, had three ideal days, last week, and the attendance on those days was good, it being claimed that the crowd on Saturday was the largest in the history of the fair.

The horses exhibited in the several rings were not numerous but were of the highest quality, causing a spirited contest for the premiums.

The racing on Friday and Saturday afternoon resulted in close finishes and were enjoyed by the thousands of spectators, and were a bonanza for the book-maker to whom many of the unsophisticated appeared anxious to donate their hard earnings.

The auto race, a five mile dash for a $50 purse, was the last thing on the program on Friday and Saturday. J. Stephens machine, a Mercedes won both races, the highest rate of speed shown being between 45 and 50 miles an hour. These races were exciting and speed decidedly dangerous, although the drivers of the machines seemed utterly fearless.

Floral Hall was as attractive as usual, and was a great resort for the ladies who execute and admire fine needle work as well as for those who take pride in culinary products.

The small jewelry vendors, the baby racks and the African Dip were much sought and gathered in many throngs each day while the fellow who prepared the Frankforts and the force that served the liquid refreshments were overwhelmed with patronage and went home with inflated pocketbooks.

The refreshment stands received a liberal patronage, although the weather part of the time was not exactly to the proprietors' liking.

The fair was about the most successful in a financial way, of any the association has held.

Marking Good.
B. M. Gaines of Milwaukee, qualified as the twenty-third member of the 1912 Hundred Point Club on August 17, with 1203 net points. He will also represent his district on the Board of Directors. This is Mr. Gaines' fourth successive year to gain an entrance into the C. P.

Mr. Gaines has represented the N. C. R. since August 1904, when he was appointed as salesman at Dallas, Texas. Two months later he was appointed sales agent at Chicago and remained in that territory until January 26, 1911, when he was transferred to his present position.

Mr. Gaines is to be congratulated on again winning distinction in the N. C. R. service and at an earlier date than in previous years. His record stamps him as an able, industrious and progressive salesman.

The Florence Fair.

All roads will lead to the fair at Florence the remainder of this week, it being a time between seasons when the farmers generally are not rushed with their work, the best time during the year for them to take a few days off to mingle with the country fair and with many of their acquaintances they have not seen for a year or since the last fair.

The fair this year will be equally as good as any of the past, and with favorable weather the attendance will be large. There will be considerable livestock from up the country, and as the people in this part of the State are great admirers of fine horses, they should not miss the opportunity to see those which will be exhibited at Florence this week.

Vehicles and horses admitted to the ground free.

Farmers' Institute.

Prof. Dix has been in correspondence with Mr. Newman, Commissioner of Agriculture, who has promised to furnish three lectures, two men and a woman, for a Farmers Institute to be held in this county some time in the month of October. It is hoped that the farmers in this county will show more interest in the next Institute than they have in any of the past. The State has gone to a great expense to furnish able lectures for the county institutes the value of which the farmers can realize only by attending them. When the time and place is fixed for the Institute in this county let the farmers begin to prepare for it.

Teachers' Institute.

The Teachers Institute will convene in Burlington Monday, September 3, 1912, at 10 a. m. All teachers are expected to be present at that time.

Patrons are requested to furnish drinking cups for their children. The individual or family drinking cup must be used by direction of the State Board of Education.

We have an enforced attendance law. Teachers, trustees, patrons and friends of education are urged to assist us in keeping the children in school.

The road meeting on Saturday morning will be addressed by a number of good speakers of national prominence.

Last Monday night lightning struck and burnt the barn of Ambrose Easton over in Kenton county. Besides some farm implements and provender nearly all the material for a new residence which Mr. Easton intended to build this fall was stored in the barn, and it, together with the other contents of the building, was a total loss.

The scaffold on which Jesse Kirkpatrick and Thomas Pappet were working repairing a house in Pet esburg, belonging to Benjamin Crisler, fell last Monday afternoon. Pappet, who was sitting on the scaffold went down with it a distance of sixteen feet, breaking one of his ankles. Kirkpatrick, who was standing, caught hold of a gutter and escaped a fall.

The apportionment of the school fund among the counties has been completed by the Department of Education. The apportionment from the State amounts to $4 for each pupil, but to this is added the county's share of the dog tax and bonds, so that every county has more than $4 per capita. Boone will draw $107,431, which will make her per capita $4.14.

In this issue appears the preliminary list of the Boone County Harvest Home, which will be held this year on Saturday, September 14. The usual premiums with some special features compose the list, and the competition will be very spirited in all the rings. With a good day the usually very large crowd will be in attendance as people seem to enjoy themselves better at the Harvest Home than at any of the fairs.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed bids will be received by the undersigned until Wednesday, 10th, at noon for the erection of a school house at Big Bone Springs. Plans and specifications on file at Big Bone. Building to be completed on or before November 30, 1912. The right to reject any or all bids is reserved. Bids to be opened at Big Bone. Edgar C. Riley, Chairman, Building Committee.

THE JUDGE

CHAPTER XXI

The Judge Meets the Situation. The judge and Mr. Mahaffy's conversation of the former's rehabilitated credit had occupied the shank of the evening, the small hours of the night, and that part of the succeeding day which the southwest described as soon after morning; and as the stone jug, its which were gathered the spirit of the night confidential but selfish, the judge's and Mr. Mahaffy's conversation of the former's rehabilitated credit had occupied the shank of the evening, the small hours of the night, and that part of the succeeding day which the southwest described as soon after morning; and as the stone jug, its which were gathered the spirit of the night confidential but selfish,

The judge sighed deeply. He took up the jug and inverted it. A stray drop or so fell languidly into his glass. "Try squeezing it, Price," said Mahaffy.

The judge shook the jug, it gave forth an empty sound, and he sighed again, he attempted to peer into the glass, his watery eye as he tilted it toward the light.

"I wonder no Yankee has ever

"Try squeezing it, Price," said Mahaffy.

thought to invent a jug with a glass bottom," he observed. "That for?" asked Mahaffy. "You astonish me, Solomon," exclaimed the judge. "Coming with you do from that section which invented the wooden nutmeg, and an eight-day clock that has been known to run as much as four or five hours at a stretch. I am aware the Yankees are ingenious people; I wonder none of them ever thought of a jug with a glass bottom, so that when a body tips it up to the light he can see at a glance whether it is empty or not. You reckon Peggie has sufficient confidence to fill the jug again for that?"

But Mahaffy's expression indicated no great confidence in Mr. Peggie's confidence. "Credit," began the judge, "is proverbially shy; still it may sometimes be increased, like the muscles of the body and the mental faculties, by judicious use. Two ways regarded Peggie as a cheap mind. I hope I have done him an injustice." He put on his hat, and tucking the jug under his arm went from the house.

Ten or fifteen minutes elapsed. Mahaffy considered this a good sign; it didn't take long to say no, he reflected. Another ten or fifteen minutes elapsed. Mahaffy lost heart. Then there came a hasty step beyond the door, it was thrown violently open, and the judge precipitated himself into the room. A glance showed Mahaffy that he was laboring under intense excitement.

"Solomon, I bring shocking news, God knows what the next few hours may reveal!" cried the judge, mopping his brow. "Miss Malroy has disappeared from Belle Plain, and Hannah has gone with her!"

"Where have they gone?" asked Mahaffy and his long jaw dropped.

"Would to God I had an answer ready for that question, Solomon," answered the judge, with a melancholy shake of the head. He gazed down on his friend with an air of large tolerance. "I am going to Belle Plain, but you are too drunk. Sleep it, Solomon, and join me when your brain is clear and your legs steady."

Mahaffy jerked out an oath, and flung himself on his chair, stood up, and snatched up his hat.

"Your pistol into your pocket, come on, Price!" he said, and rushed toward the door.

He called to his wife, and she came to the door of the village

"There is mystery and rascality here!" said the judge.

"What do you know, Price, and where did you hear this?" Mahaffy shot the question back over his shoulder.

"At Peggie's; the Belle Plain over-haul had just fished the news into town."

Again they were silent, all their energies being absorbed by the physical exertion they were making. The road danced before their burning eyes, it seemed to be unrolling itself serpent-wise with hideous undulations. The judge was conscious that the judge, of whom he caught a blurred vision now at his right side, now at his left, was laboring painfully in the heat and dust, the breath whistling from between his parched lips.

"You're just ripe for apoplexy, Price!" he muttered, moderating his pace.

"Go on," said the judge, with stolid resolution.

Two miles out of the village they came to a roadside spring; here they paused for an instant. Mahaffy scooped up handfuls of the clear water and sucked it greedily. The judge dropped on his stomach and buried his face in the tiny pool, gulping up great thrills of water. After a long breathless instant he stood erect, with drops of moisture clinging to his nose and eyebrows. Mahaffy was a dozen paces down the road, hurrying forward again with relentless vigor. The judge shuffled after him. The tracks they left in the dust crossed and recrossed in the road, and presently the slanting lines of their advance straightened, the judge gained and held a fixed place at Mahaffy's right, a step or so in the rear. His impatient fancy began to deal with the situation.

"If anything happens to the child, the man responsible for it would better never been born—I'll pursue him with undiminished energy from this moment forth!" he panted.

"What could happen to him, Price?" asked Mahaffy.

"Good knows, poor little lad!"

"Will you shut up!" cried Mahaffy savagely.

"Solomon!"

"Why do you go building on that idea? Why should any one harm him—what earthly purpose?"

"I tell you, Solomon, we are the pivotal point in a vast web of crime. This is a blow at me—this is revenge, sir, neither more nor less! They have struck at me through the boy, it is as plain as day."

"What did the overseer say?"

"Just that they found Miss Malroy gone from Belle Plain this morning, and the boy with her."

"This is like you, Price! How do you know they haven't spent the night at some neighbor's?"

"The nearest neighbor is five or six miles distant. Miss Malroy and Hannah were seen along about dusk in the grounds at Belle Plain; do you mean to tell me you consider it likely that they set out on foot at that hour, and without a word to any one, to make a visit?" inquired the judge; but Mahaffy did not contend for this point.

"What are you going to do first, Price?"

"Have a look over the grounds, and talk with the slaves."

"Where's the brother—wasn't he at Belle Plain last night?"

"It seems he went to Memphis yesterday."

They plodded forward in silence; now and again they were passed by some man on horseback whose destination was the same as their own, and then at last they caught sight of Belle Plain in its grove of trees.

CHAPTER XXII

The Judge Takes Charge. All work on the plantation had stopped, and the hundreds of slaves—men, women and children—were gathered about the house. Among these moved the members of the dominant race. The judge would be attached himself to the first group, but he heard a whispered question, and the answer:

"Miss Malroy's lawyer."

Clearly it was not for him to mix with these outsiders, these curiosity seekers. He crossed the lawn to the house, and motioned the steps. In the doorway was big Steve, while groups of men stood about in the hall, the hum of busy purposeless talk pervading the place. The judge frowned. This was all wrong.

"Has Mr. Ware returned from Memphis?" he asked of Steve.

"No, sah; not yet."

"Then show me into the library," said the judge, with bland authority, surrendering his hat to the butler. "Come along, Mahaffy!" he added. They entered the library, and the judge motioned Steve to close the door. "Now, boy, you'll kind a great people to, withdraw—you may say it is Judge Price's orders. Allow no one to enter the house unless they have business with me, or as I send for them—you understand? After you have cleared the house, you may bring me a decanter of corn whiskey—stop a bit—you may ask the sheriff to step here."

"Yes, sah." And Steve withdrew.

The judge drew an easy-chair up to the flat-topped desk that stood in the center of the room, and seated himself.

"Are you going to make this the excuse for another drunk, Price? If so, I feel the greatest contempt for you," said Mahaffy sternly.

The judge winced at this. "You have made a regrettable choice of words, Solomon," he urged gently.

"Where's your feeling for the boy?"

"Here!" said the judge, with an eloquent gesture, resting his hand on his front.

"If you let whiskey alone, I'll believe you otherwise what I have said must stand."

The door opened, and the sheriff slouched into the room. He was chewing a long wheat straw, and his whole appearance was one of troubled weakness.

"Morning," he said briefly.

"Sit down, sheriff," and the judge indicated a meek seat for the official in a distant corner. "Have you learned anything?" he asked.

The sheriff shook his head.

"What you turning all these neighbors out of doors for?" he questioned. "We don't want people tramping in and out the house, sheriff. Important evidence may be destroyed. I propose examining the slaves first—does that meet with your approval?"

"Oh, I've talked with them; they don't know nothing," said the sheriff.

"No one don't know nothing."

"Please God, we may yet put our finger on some villain who does," said the judge.

Outside it was noted about that Judge Price had taken matters in hand—he was the old fellow who had been warned to keep his mouth shut, and who had never stopped talking since. A crowd collected beyond the library windows and fastened its eyes on the back of this hero's bald head.

One by one the house servants were ushered into the judge's presence. First he interrogated little Steve, who had gone to Miss Betty's door that morning to rouse her, as was customary. Next he examined Betty's maid, then the cook, and various house servants, who had nothing special to tell, but told it at considerable length; and lastly big Steve.

"Stop a bit," the judge suddenly interrupted the butler in the midst of his narrative. "Does the overseer always come up to the house the first thing in the morning?"

"Way, not exactly, sah, but he come up this morning, sah. He was talking to me at the back of the house, when the women run out with the word that Missy was done gone away."

"He joined in the search?"

"Yes, sah."

"When was Miss Malroy seen last?" asked the judge.

"She and the young gemman who fetched her were seen in the garden along about sundown. I seen them myself."

"They had had supper?"

"Yes, sah."

"Who sleeps here?"

"Just little Steve and three of the women; they sleeps at the back of the house, sah."

"No sounds were heard during the night?"

"No, sah."

"I'll see the overseer—what's his name?—Hicks? Suppose you go for him!" said the judge, addressing the sheriff.

The sheriff was gone from the room only a few moments, and returned with the information that Hicks was down at the bayou, which was to be dragged.

"Why?" inquired the judge.

"Hicks says Miss Malroy's been acting mighty queer ever since Charley Norton was shot—distracted like! He says he noticed it, and that Tom Ware noticed it."

"How does he explain the boy's disappearance?"

"He reckons she throwed herself in, and the boy tried to drag her out, like he naturally would, and got drawed in."

"Humph! I'll trouble Mr. Hicks to stop here," said the judge quietly.

"There's Mr. Carrington and a couple of strangers outside who've been asking about Miss Malroy and the boy; seems like the strangers knowed her and him back yonder in North Carolina," said the sheriff as he turned away.

"I'll see them." The sheriff went from the room and the judge dismissed the servants.

"Well, what do you think, Price?" asked Mahaffy anxiously when they were alone.

"Rubbish! Take my word for it, Solomon, this blow is leveled at me. I have been too forward in my attempts to suppress the carnival of crime that is raging through west Tennessee. You'll observe that Miss Malroy disappeared at a moment when the public is disposed to think she has retained me as her legal adviser when she agrees to drop the matter of Norton's murder. As for the boy, they'll use him to compel my silence and discretion." The judge took a long breath. "Yet there remains a point where the law is so clear that anybody could see it as plain as just a little more at the antecedents it might cause me to make a startling and radical move."

"Hicks says Miss Malroy's been acting queer since Charley Norton was shot."

Mahaffy was slowly but impressed by the vague insinuations in which the judge was dealing.

"There you go, Price, as usual, trying to convince yourself that you are the center of everything!" he said, in a tone of much exasperation. "Let's get down to business! What does this man Hicks mean by hinting at suicide? You saw Miss Malroy yesterday?"

"You have put your finger on a point of some significance," said the judge. "She bore evidence of the shock and loss she had sustained; and even from that she was quite as she has always been."

"Well, what do you want to see Hicks for? What do you expect to learn from him?"

"I don't like his insinuations on the idea that Miss Malroy is mentally unbalanced. It's a question of some delicacy—the law, sir, fully recognizes that. It seems to me he is over-anxious to account for her disappearance in a manner that can compromise no one."

Resolutions of Respect.

Union, Ky., Aug. 19 1912.

Whereas, The Master of Heaven and earth has seen fit to remove from our midst our sister, Mrs. Allie Wilson, leaving us as an order sadly bereaved, therefore be it Resolved,

That we extend to our brother, F. L. Wilson, and the little children left to grieve for a model wife and mother, our sympathy and with tenderness we assure them that as far as human hearts and hands are able we are ready to comfort and help them in their great sorrow. We feeling the inadequacy of our words, bid them listen to the voice of Jesus, who alone can utter words of peace and think of the dear one gone, as she sits on the right hand of her Father, wearing her well earned crown, and waiting for husband and children. To her venerable and loving grandmother we especially tender our deep sympathy and say to her that while she has been deprived of the ministrations of this faithful daughter in her declining years, yet we know that the God of Israel will be near to bless her.

With the father and brother and many near relatives, we console and would offer them paternal help.

Resolved, That these resolutions be inscribed in our Record-book a copy be sent to the family and a copy to the Boone Co. Recorder for publication.

A neighbor gave me several doses of Dr. King's New Discovery which brought great relief. The doctor said I was on the verge of pneumonia, but to continue with the Discovery, I did so and two bottles completely cured my chest. Use only this quick, safe, reliable medicine for coughs, colds, or any throat or lung trouble. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all dealers."

A Standard Barrel.

Saturday, August 3, President Taft signed the Sulzer apple barrel bill. This bill established a standard barrel and grade for apples when packed in barrels. The standard barrel will be of the following dimension: Length of barrel, twenty-eight and one-half inches; diameter of head, seventeen and one-eighth inches; distance between heads, 28 inches; circumference of bulge, sixty-four inches outside measurement. It should contain as nearly as possible 7,056 cubic inches. The grades provided for in the bill are: United States standard minimum size two and one-half inches; United States standard minimum size two and one-fourth inches and United States minimum size two inches.

TOLD IN JAPANESE ENGLISH

Comprehensive Essay on the British, as Written by Small Subject of the Mikado.

There is a large missionary school in Tokyo, Japan, where the teaching is in English. One of the pupils recently wrote a composition on "England," and we append some choice extracts:

"The England which occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman always works with a very powerful hands and the long legs, and even the emaciated maid and his chin is so strong as deserved iron. Being spread out from Europe to Australia to America his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countrymen boastfully say 'the sun are never sets on our dominion.' The testimony of English say that 'he that lost the common sense, he never had any benefit.' Though he had gained a complete world. The English are cunning men to establish a great empire of the paradise. As the Englishman always confide the object of the pure and the order to be holy and they reproach him if any of them are killed to death with the contention of other men."

APPEALED TO HOTEL CLERK

Fair Guest Applied for Object Not Usually Supplied by Hoteliers, but She Got It.

To be a successful hotel clerk you must have an even temper. There is no man under the sun who has so much to try his temper as a hotel clerk. The night clerk of a certain Baltimore hotel is a young man with the most polished manners. He is especially polite to the ladies. But a few evenings ago he nearly lost his equilibrium when a pretty guest asked him to loan her an alarm clock.

"I must get up very early tomorrow morning," said the fair guest; "can't you loan me an alarm clock—one that I can depend on?"

"I will have you called at any hour you wish," replied the clerk.

"That won't do. You might forget it, and besides, I have no watch, and if I wake up during the night I like to know the time."

The clerk suggested that there was a telephone in the room, but that would not do, so he called the housekeeper, who loaned the fair guest an alarm clock.

Not Really Naval Stores.

The term of turpentine, tar, pitch and resin as naval stores is a misnomer. It originated many years ago, when tar and pitch first were used to coat the bottoms of vessels to make them watertight and to cover the rigging of ships to preserve it from the action of the weather. All ships carried always a supply of tar among their stores, and hence the original of the term. Turpentine was used only by ship-builders and ship owners and others who had to do directly with shipping, and was a nautical term only. Then, when the products of the gum of the long-leaf pine came into general commercial importance, the term was accepted as a designation for all articles of commerce manufactured from that substance, and is maintained to this day, although the uses that created it have little to do with the interests of the trade.

First to Use Chloroform.

Chloroform as an anesthetic was first used on the 30th of September, 1846, by Dr. W. T. G. Morton, a dentist, of Boston, in a case of tooth extraction, and thereafter by him in many difficult operations. The news of the discovery reached England in December, 1846, and British dentists immediately began to use it. Sir James Simpson, a Scotch physician (1811-1870) was the first to use it in hospital practice and this he did in 1847. His discovery was considered independent of that by the Boston dentist and in 1866 he was knighted. He had a public funeral when he died and a statue of him in bronze stands in Edinburgh.

Drinking Water With Food.

It is a trifle disconcerting to be told that when the thrifty housewife expends from 30 to 25 cents per pound for the best cuts of beef about 60 per cent of the bulk of uncooked beef or mutton being water. The flesh of pigeons is about 70 per cent water, that of fowls and ducks 65 per cent, while a really fat goose may have as little as 58 per cent of water in its composition. The flesh of fish varies considerably in the quantity of water contained, the figures ranging, according to the kinds of fish, from 40 to 80 per cent.—Popular Mechanics.

Had One Resemblance.

One night, in a Texas town, John McCullough's company was playing "Ingomar," and young Sothorn was to be the leader of the barbarian army. During the day he and his companions had managed the town for coverings in which to appear on the stage. They secured some skins which had been imperfectly cured. In the scene where the barbarians stood aghast and almost forgot his lines. When the curtain fell he turned to the fur-covered battlement and said: "Boys, you don't look like a barbarian army, but I'm d—d if you are small like one."

VALUED COLORS HE LOVED

Patriotic Ancestry of Old Man Made Deep Impression on Soldiers From the Front.

There is so much that is painful and distressing about war that every soldier who has served at the front must bring back with him many memories that he would gladly forget. But there are gracious and touching incidents as well, one of which a Companion subscriber who fought through the Civil war thus recalls:

"Just after the second Battle of Bull Run and that of Chancellorsville, the Union army lay near Alexandria, and Fairfax Court House, a certain Massachusetts Battery was ordered back to Washington to help garrison the capital."

"On the outskirts of Alexandria the colors were raised, with the head of a little store and half cottage surrounded by an unpainted picket fence. As the halt was ordered, the door of the cottage opened, and old, white-haired man, came down the steps toward the road with his hand raised toward the flag was carried by the widow of the battery."

"The color-bearer released the staff from its socket and lowered it to the ground, and the old man, who had by this time come up to the line, drew the flag toward him, reverently raised it to his lips, turned, and without a word walked back into house."

The incident made a deep impression on the men who saw it. It meant more to those soldiers, who were bearing the brunt of a hard campaign, than a score of eloquent addresses on patriotism and the love of country. "Youth's Companion."

PERCENTAGE TO THE GOOD

Statement, However, Not Altogether Reassuring to the Owner of a Heavy Car.

The lightning was flashing and the thunder was crashing, and along with them were rain, hail, and a wind that threatened fairly to blow off the top of the universe. Hackley urged the car forward at a terrific pace, seeking shelter, and, at last, as he rounded a turn in the road the welcome sign, Garage, was to be seen a hundred yards ahead. He stepped in front of it, and the long, lank countryman in charge swung open the doors.

"Geel!" said Hackley, dubiously, as he looked inside and took in the sad fact that this, like many other so-called garages, was nothing but an old-time barn, transformed into its present glory by a coat of paint and a swinging sign. "How about that floor of yours, mister?"

"It's a darned good floor," replied the owner, chewing on a wisp of straw.

"No doubt," said Hackley, "but is it safe?"

"I reckon it is," said the proprietor, glancing proudly within. "I've had thirteen automobiles in here 'reddy this season, and no more—six—on 'em's fell threw."—Harper's Weekly.

Silver-Plated Tongue.

It was a matter of comment at a recent banquet in Savannah, says the Citizen, that the Chatham artillery punch was missing. There was some alarm over this until it was established that the recipe had not really gone the way of the secrets concerning Tyrian purple and Damascus steel.

Artillery punch is a solid punch. It veiled wallop in like that of a boxing glove with a brick in it.

Col. A. C. Davies, who was presiding at a dinner following the installation of a lodge of Elks, had a bowl of it brewed without consulting the company. He had told two or three prominent notables that he was going to cut upon them after dinner, and they had implored him to pass them by; their timidity was extreme and their command of language school-boyish. Would the colonel please ignore them? He would.

The dinner progressed and the punch came on at its conclusion. After two rounds had passed one of the after-dinner amateurs slipped around to the toastmaster's chair and whispered in his ear:

"Davies, why don't you ask me to speak?"

The First Cable.

The laying down of the first international cable was begun in 1857. The vessels, two American and two British, laid 300 miles of the cable, when it snapped, and the attempt was put off until 1866. In August of that year the junction between the two continents was completed by the laying down of 2,050 miles of cable from Valentia, Ireland, to Newfoundland. The engineer was Sir Charles Bright, who was knighted for his success. The first two messages were sent on August 5 and were from the queen of England to the president of the United States and his reply. But after sending 271 messages the cable proved a failure, and a perfect one was not secured until 1866.

Both Professionals.

Miss Mildred Devenant, the settlement worker and essayist, said of the summer girl at a dinner in Chicago: "The summer girl does not have a summer man, you see, under her."

Convinced, twirling the stem of a glass, then added deprecatingly: "I like to see a girl like you, like me, in a party to be small like one."

ANTHONY SOLDIER THE BEST

World's Records for Membership All His, and He Is Trained to Act on His Own Initiative.

If there is one, big, distinguishing trait of the United States regular, it is individuality. In every one of the great foreign military missions, particularly Germany and Japan, battalions and company officers and enlisted men are carefully trained not to think for themselves. They are used as mere chess pieces under the guidance of a master mind. In this country, where our military has yielded us an extraordinary self-reliant, cool thinking, intensive initiative product, it is only natural that our soldiers should be trained as are our civilians.

The United States army spends annually on rifle target practice five times the sum spent by any other army of an equal number of men. This applies, too, to our field and coast artillery. As a result, no better marksmen can be found than the American soldier and his cousin, the national guardsman, who is trained along the same lines. The United States army has control and accuracy record with rifle and big gun is today held by the American soldier.

The United States army is small, in accordance with the will of the people not to support a large standing military establishment. But what we have is almost 100 per cent efficient, the splendid nucleus of the big army of regulars, militia and volunteers which we should place in the field if occasion required. It is only in equipment—quartermaster, commissary, medicine and particularly ordnance stores—that our army is lacking.—Ladies'.

SHE COULD NOT REMEMBER

Absent-Minded Woman's Peculiar Reason for Wanting to Be Rung Up on the Phone.

Absent-minded persons sorely try the patience of girls in the New Rochelle telephone office. Not long ago a woman confessed herself subject to extreme forgetfulness and requested the day operator on her change to ring her up every morning at 9 o'clock. A week later she said: "Central, what was it I wanted you to call me for at 9 o'clock?"

"I don't know," said the girl. "You didn't tell me. You just asked me to call at 9 o'clock."

"Too bad," said the woman. "I know there was something I wanted to do every morning at 9 o'clock, but I can't for the life of me think what it was."

The 9 o'clock calls continued, however, and several days later the woman took central into her confidence again.

"I have found out why I wanted to be called," she said. "A friend had given me a canary and I wanted to make sure of remembering to feed it. The poor little thing is nearly starved. Hereafter when you ring won't you just say, 'Feed the bird,' and I'll go straight and do it."

Central promised, and the neglected canary is now a plump and contented bird.—New York Times.

Rousseau's Etiquette of Love.

Before Rousseau, love was a highly refined form of social intercourse, a species of gallantry conducted with self-restraint, and all the formalities of special etiquette; any extravagance, whether in feeling, in speech, or in action, was banished. But when Saint-Pierre, oppressed by his high-strung passions, came to the rock at Meilliere to pour forth in solitude the flood of his sentimental tears, all the witty refinements of eighteenth century gallantry, for good or for evil, were finally swept away; extravagance was free to lay down the law in love. It was Rousseau, who enabled Mirabeau, in his first letter to Julie Danvers (whom he had never seen), to declare, "I, also, am a lover, have emptied the cup of sensibility to the dregs, and could give a thousand lives for what I love."

It was Rousseau who laid down a new etiquette of love which every petty poet and novelist still adheres to.—Atlantic Monthly.

Patented Articles Must Be Marked.

We are all accustomed to see a patented article marked "Patented" with the date of the patent. It is doubtful, however, whether one in a hundred, or in five hundred, who notices the mark realizes its importance to the patentee. The statute on the subject makes it the duty of all patentees or those holding under or claiming the patent to mark their articles with the word "Patented," together with the date and year the patent was granted, and the same statute provides as a penalty for not marking that "in any suit for infringement by the party failing to so mark no damages shall be recovered by the plaintiff, except proof that the defendant was duly notified of the infringement, and continued, after such notice, to make, use or vend the article so patented."—Scientific American.

Ministerial Economy.

Considering his meagre salary, it was a mystery to economical parliamentarians how the minister could afford to contribute so liberally to the church's social affairs, but another financial expert finally explained that it was a good investment.

"The money he contributes makes these entertainments so attractive," he said, "that the young people fall in love and marry, and he makes it look many times over on the wedding day."

Here's The Plumb Bob
It's just another proof that Tubular Cream Separators are just up to the minute—miles ahead of any other. No other machine has it.

What's It For?
It enables you to level the Sharples Dairy Tubular Cream Separator in a minute—quicker than you could find the spirit level you must use to level all other separators. A glance at the plumb bob, hanging there on the back of the Tubular, will always tell you whether the Tubular remains level. In that way you get the very best work out of the Tubular, for all Separators should be kept level to do their best work.

Tubulars have dozens of exclusive fine points and are sold on the level. Bring the wife in. See how simple, perfect and different from others Tubulars are.

WANTED TALENT WELD TO BLAME

Educated People Responsible for the Situation.

OPPORTUNITIES NOT REALIZED

In an Awakening Address Delivered by Harry A. Sommers, of the Elizabethtown News Before the Kentucky Educational Association, the People of the Commonwealth Were Warmly Reminded of a Duty Long Neglected.

At a recent meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association at Louisville, Harry A. Sommers of the Elizabethtown News charged that the educated people of the commonwealth are chiefly responsible for the illiterate and that Kentucky has been asleep for fifty years on the public school situation.

Mr. Sommers spoke in part as follows on the subject of "The Press and the Public School":

I charge that the educated of the commonwealth are chiefly responsible for the illiterate, that the learned are responsible for the illiterate. We have been given talent which we have buried instead of using for our more unfortunate fellow men. We have marvelous opportunities, but we have not realized or accepted the responsibilities which go with the opportunity.

Kentucky, the first state in the South to establish free schools, has been asleep for nearly fifty years on public school education and now wakes to find herself lagging in the rear of most of her sister states in this important matter. We were asleep when we allowed our rural schools to retrograde. We were asleep when we did not keep the school space with the development and growth of the nation. We were asleep when we left the whole matter in the hands of the school teacher and neglected our responsibility to assist him and stand by him. We were asleep when we sent men to the legislature unit to grapple with this question and most generally indifferent to it.

Thank God we are awake now and before it is too late. Awake and on guard, and if we as sentinels for education on the watch towers of progress go to sleep until the school house is a thing of credit instead of a thing of reproach, until the stain of illiteracy is wiped out, we deserve the fate of any sentinel who goes to sleep at his post. A man who does wrong and does not know he has violated the law is not exempt from the penalty, but the man who knowingly violates the law is more culpable. While we were ignorant and indifferent to the lack of advancement in our school, we were nevertheless responsible, but now that we are fully aware of our unfortunate condition we are deeply responsible if we do not respond to it.

The precious jewels of the commonwealth are its children. The future of the state depends upon them and they depend on us. Are we going to palliate them with an education to fit them for life's duties and obligations and citizenship, or are we going to allow them to grow up in ignorance to become paupers and criminals? It is a burning question which appeals to mankind, which appeals to intelligence, which appeals to our hearts. Have we heard the cry which comes from the mountains and from the isolated sections all over Kentucky? I do not know how it has been ringing in our ears for ten years or more and neither my pen nor voice shall become silent in answering it until every educated man and woman in the state realizes our needs and recognizes the responsibility. As the aged H. Walker in his camp fire swore the infant Hannibal to eternal hatred for Rome, so I would swear you now by the intelligence which shines in your eyes, by the education which is in your veins and by the blood which is in your veins, to the cause of the illiterate. I would swear you now by the intelligence which shines in your eyes, by the education which is in your veins and by the blood which is in your veins, to the cause of the illiterate.

are given to the public schools. We have a right to demand that the state should be made responsible for the illiterate. We have a right to demand that the state should be made responsible for the illiterate. We have a right to demand that the state should be made responsible for the illiterate.

That the best way to create a local interest in the local school is a local tax and a local pride of this, it should be shown that all the best schools have a local tax and all the worst schools are without it.

That the district trustee should be as much interested in the teacher and his teaching as the teacher is in his school. That the school house should be as good and as attractive as any home in the district.

That when we know under the new school census where the illiterate children live, it will become the duty of the people of that district to see that these children are sent to school and provided clothing and shoes if the parents are too poor to provide.

That the teacher should be more commended for what he is able to accomplish and less criticized for what he is unable to do.

That moonlight schools for the adults will pay better than moonshine stills.

That the office of county school superintendent is the most important in the country.

That it is more important to educate all the people some, than a few of the people a great deal.

That we do not need to teach dead languages in the country except within the walls of a university.

That those things which will be of most value to a boy and girl after they leave school should be the things which should be taught first and best.

That the children's minds should not be puzzled over Greek roots when they do not know the difference between calamus root and poke root.

That the conjugation of the verb "amo" need not be taught in the school because the boys and girls learn it soon enough outside the school.

That the unknown quantities of algebra had better remain unknown than that a boy should remain ignorant of the soil quantities of his father's farm.

That the time spent in making indifferent performances on the piano could be better utilized in abolishing bad habits from the bad habits table.

That the public school ought to get in the newspaper and the newspaper in the public school.

While you may not agree with me in all of these things, you will certainly agree with me in most of them. The question is how are we going to create this public sentiment.

The school teacher is powerless to do it even when he does his best. He is handicapped by the very nature of the case. We must look to the educated people of this state. Men and women who will give their time and talent and means to create a better sentiment in the rural schools, and we must look to the press.

The newspaper and the public schools are the two greatest forces at work in this country for both progress and enlightenment.

The newspaper's influence depends upon the number of readers it has and the number of readers depends on how many people are taught to read. There must be a combination between the press and the professor, a united interest between the newspaper and the public school. If the press of this state would give half the thought and half the space to education that it does to politics the schools would be revolutionized in less than a decade. The press must first be made interested in this great question, then it must be educated to the needs of the schools, then shown how the needs may be supplied. The editor and the school teacher must be brought within closer touch with each other. This should be done through this organization.

Mind you, I am not talking about a movement through the press for the benefit of the teachers, but a movement for the benefit of the people. The school must be made the important thing and not the school teacher. The children's interest must be put in the forefront as the battle cry through the press for their welfare, and the welfare of the state. All great enterprises get before the public with the news bureau and there is no enterprise as great as the education of the masses. Most enterprises pay for publicity, but this is one of which the newspapers will require no pay. It takes real newspaper talent to conduct any kind of publicity bureau. It requires the talent of first interesting the reader with what it tells, next it must do more than interest it. It should get the reader in sympathy with the story, then it must so take hold of him that he wants a part in it. There should be selected a most capable man or woman with proper newspaper instinct to send a column once a week to every newspaper in Kentucky of sight the public school and the school teacher will be glad to get it.

The information should be gathered from the various schools all over the state by the teachers and sent to the head of their bureau. It should be facts and not argument. The facts can be so written that they will carry their own argument and also carry conviction. Such an educational press bureau established in this city or Frankfort could and would arouse more interest and create more public sentiment for the rural schools than any other one thing could do, because every week it would have a fresh and new line as to have an audience as this building will hold. With a press willing to help, I do hope that with an opportunity will not be so slow to escape.

and the judge, who had been sitting in the shadows, reached his left arm down on the desk and with his chin sunk in his palm, followed the scratcher's narrative with the closest attention.

"And General Quintard never saw him—never manifested any interest in him?" the words came slowly from the judge's lips; he seemed to gulp down something that rose in his throat. "Poor little lad!" he muttered, and again, "Poor little lad!"

"Never once, sir," he said, "the slaves to keep him out of his sight. We'll wonder, for you know how niggers will talk. We thought maybe he was some kin to the Quintards, but we couldn't figure out how. The old general never had but one child and she had been dead for years. The child couldn't have been here no-how."

The judge drummed idly on the desk.

"What implacable hate—what iron pride!" he murmured, and swept his hand across his eyes. Absorbed and aloof, he was busy with his thoughts that spanned the waste of years—years that seemed to glide before him in review, each bitter with its hideous memories of shame and defeat. Then from the smoke of these lost battles emerged the lonely figure of the child as he had seen him that June night.

"Poor Little Lad!" He muttered.

His ponderous arm stiffened where it rested on the desk, he straightened up in his chair and his face assumed its customary expression of battered dignity, while a smile at once wistful and tender hovered about his lips.

"One other question," he said. "Until this man Murrell appeared you had no trouble with Bladen? He was content that you should keep the child—your right to Hannibal was never challenged?"

"Never, sir. All my troubles began about that time."

"Murrell belongs in these parts," said the judge.

"I'd admire to meet him," said Yancy quietly.

The judge grimaced.

"I place my professional services at your disposal," he said. "You're a clear case of felonious assault."

"No, it ain't, sir—I look at it this way: it's a clear case of my giving him the damndest sort of a body beating."

"Sir," said the judge, "I'll hold you out that while you are about it."

Hicks had taken his time in responding to the judge's summons, but now his step sounded in the hall and throwing open the door he entered the room. Whether consciously or not he had acquired something of that surly, forbidding manner which was characteristic of his employer. A curved nod of the head was his only greeting.

"Will you sit down?" asked the judge. Hicks, signified by another movement of the head that he would not. "This is a very dreadful business!" began the judge softly.

"Ain't it?" agreed Hicks. "What you got to say to me?" he added petulantly.

"Have you started to drag the bayonet?" asked the judge. Hicks nodded. "That was your idea?" suggested the judge.

"No, it was," objected Hicks quickly. "But I said she had been actin' like she was plumb distracted ever since Charley Norton got shot."

"How?" inquired the judge, arching his eyebrows. Hicks was plainly disturbed by the question.

"Sort of out of her head," Mr. Ware said, too.

"He spoke of it?"

"Yes, sir; him and me discussed it together."

The judge regarded Hicks long and intently and in silence. His magnificent mind was at work. If Betty had been distracted he had not observed any sign of it the previous day. If Mr. Ware were better informed as to her true mental state why had he chosen this time to go to Memphis?

"I suppose Mr. Ware asked you to keep an eye on Miss Malroy while he was away from home?" said the judge.

Hicks, suspicious of the drift of his questioning, made no answer. "I suppose you told the house servants to keep her under observation?" continued the judge.

"I don't talk to no niggers," replied Hicks, "except to give 'em my orders."

"Well, did you give them that order?"

"No, I didn't."

The sudden and hurried entrance of big Steve brought the judge's examination of Mr. Hicks to a standstill.

"Maw, you know dat 'ar cochinman George—the big black fellow dat took delicious George ain't no more no more!" Steve was laboring under a jense excitement, but he ignored the presence of the overseer and addressed himself to Hicks in French. "What of that?" cried Hicks quickly.

"That war'n't no George, mind you, Maw, but dat was his team in de stable this mornin' and lookin' mighty nigh done up with hard driving."

"Yes," interrupted Hicks uneasily; "put a pair of lines in a nigger's hands and he'll run any team off its legs!"

"An' the harringe all scratched up from bel'n' thrashed through the bushes," added Steve.

"There's a nigger for you!" said Hicks. "He took theascal out of the field, dressed him like he was a gentleman and pampered him up, and now first chance he gets he runs off!"

"Ah!" said the judge softly. "Then you know this?"

"Of course I know—wa'n't it my business to know? I reckon he was off skyarking, and when he'd seen the mess he'd made, the trifling fool took to the woods. Well, he catches it when I lay hands on him!"

"Do you know when and under what circumstances the team was stolen, Mr. Hicks?" inquired the judge.

"No, I don't, but I reckon it must have been long after dark," said Hicks unwillingly. "I seen to the feeding just after sundown like I always do, then I went to supper," Hicks vouchsafed to explain.

"And no one saw or heard the team drive in?"

"Not as I know of," said Hicks.

"Mr. Catelton's done gone off to get a pack of dawgs—he 'lows hiks might be important to find what's come of George," said Steve.

Hicks started violently at this piece of news.

"I reckon he'll have to bring a right smart distance to find a pack of dawgs," he muttered. "I don't know of none this side of Colonel Bates' down below Girard."

The judge was lost in thought. He permitted an interval of silence to elapse in which Hicks' glance slid round in a furtive circle.

"When did Mr. Ware set out for Memphis?" asked the judge at length.

"Early yesterday. He goes there pretty often on business."

"You talked with Mr. Ware before he left?" Hicks shook his head. "Did he speak of Miss Malroy?" Hicks shook his head. "Did you see her during the afternoon?"

"No—maybe you think these niggers ain't enough to keep a man stirring," said Hicks uneasily and with a scowl. The judge noticed both the uneasiness and the scowl.

"I should imagine they would absorb every moment of your time, Mr. Hicks," he agreed amiably.

"A man's got to be a hog for work to hold a job like mine," said Hicks sourly.

"But it came to your notice that Miss Malroy has been in a disturbed mental state ever since Mr. Norton's murder? I am interested in this point, Mr. Hicks, because your experience is so entirely at variance with my own."

and the judge, who had been sitting in the shadows, reached his left arm down on the desk and with his chin sunk in his palm, followed the scratcher's narrative with the closest attention.

"And General Quintard never saw him—never manifested any interest in him?" the words came slowly from the judge's lips; he seemed to gulp down something that rose in his throat. "Poor little lad!" he muttered, and again, "Poor little lad!"

"What implacable hate—what iron pride!" he murmured, and swept his hand across his eyes. Absorbed and aloof, he was busy with his thoughts that spanned the waste of years—years that seemed to glide before him in review, each bitter with its hideous memories of shame and defeat. Then from the smoke of these lost battles emerged the lonely figure of the child as he had seen him that June night.

"Poor Little Lad!" He muttered.

His ponderous arm stiffened where it rested on the desk, he straightened up in his chair and his face assumed its customary expression of battered dignity, while a smile at once wistful and tender hovered about his lips.

"One other question," he said. "Until this man Murrell appeared you had no trouble with Bladen? He was content that you should keep the child—your right to Hannibal was never challenged?"

"Never, sir. All my troubles began about that time."

"Murrell belongs in these parts," said the judge.

"I'd admire to meet him," said Yancy quietly.

The judge grimaced.

"I place my professional services at your disposal," he said. "You're a clear case of felonious assault."

"No, it ain't, sir—I look at it this way: it's a clear case of my giving him the damndest sort of a body beating."

"Sir," said the judge, "I'll hold you out that while you are about it."

Hicks had taken his time in responding to the judge's summons, but now his step sounded in the hall and throwing open the door he entered the room. Whether consciously or not he had acquired something of that surly, forbidding manner which was characteristic of his employer. A curved nod of the head was his only greeting.

"Will you sit down?" asked the judge. Hicks, signified by another movement of the head that he would not. "This is a very dreadful business!" began the judge softly.

"Ain't it?" agreed Hicks. "What you got to say to me?" he added petulantly.

"Have you started to drag the bayonet?" asked the judge. Hicks nodded. "That was your idea?" suggested the judge.

"No, it was," objected Hicks quickly. "But I said she had been actin' like she was plumb distracted ever since Charley Norton got shot."

"How?" inquired the judge, arching his eyebrows. Hicks was plainly disturbed by the question.

"Sort of out of her head," Mr. Ware said, too.

"He spoke of it?"

"Yes, sir; him and me discussed it together."

The judge regarded Hicks long and intently and in silence. His magnificent mind was at work. If Betty had been distracted he had not observed any sign of it the previous day. If Mr. Ware were better informed as to her true mental state why had he chosen this time to go to Memphis?

"I suppose Mr. Ware asked you to keep an eye on Miss Malroy while he was away from home?" said the judge.

Hicks, suspicious of the drift of his questioning, made no answer. "I suppose you told the house servants to keep her under observation?" continued the judge.

"I don't talk to no niggers," replied Hicks, "except to give 'em my orders."

"Well, did you give them that order?"

"No, I didn't."

The sudden and hurried entrance of big Steve brought the judge's examination of Mr. Hicks to a standstill.

"Maw, you know dat 'ar cochinman George—the big black fellow dat took delicious George ain't no more no more!" Steve was laboring under a jense excitement, but he ignored the presence of the overseer and addressed himself to Hicks in French. "What of that?" cried Hicks quickly.

"That war'n't no George, mind you, Maw, but dat was his team in de stable this mornin' and lookin' mighty nigh done up with hard driving."

"Yes," interrupted Hicks uneasily; "put a pair of lines in a nigger's hands and he'll run any team off its legs!"

"An' the harringe all scratched up from bel'n' thrashed through the bushes," added Steve.

"There's a nigger for you!" said Hicks. "He took theascal out of the field, dressed him like he was a gentleman and pampered him up, and now first chance he gets he runs off!"

"Ah!" said the judge softly. "Then you know this?"

"Of course I know—wa'n't it my business to know? I reckon he was off skyarking, and when he'd seen the mess he'd made, the trifling fool took to the woods. Well, he catches it when I lay hands on him!"

"Do you know when and under what circumstances the team was stolen, Mr. Hicks?" inquired the judge.

"No, I don't, but I reckon it must have been long after dark," said Hicks unwillingly. "I seen to the feeding just after sundown like I always do, then I went to supper," Hicks vouchsafed to explain.

"And no one saw or heard the team drive in?"

"Not as I know of," said Hicks.

"Mr. Catelton's done gone off to get a pack of dawgs—he 'lows hiks might be important to find what's come of George," said Steve.

Hicks started violently at this piece of news.

"I reckon he'll have to bring a right smart distance to find a pack of dawgs," he muttered. "I don't know of none this side of Colonel Bates' down below Girard."

The judge was lost in thought. He permitted an interval of silence to elapse in which Hicks' glance slid round in a furtive circle.

"When did Mr. Ware set out for Memphis?" asked the judge at length.

"Early yesterday. He goes there pretty often on business."

"You talked with Mr. Ware before he left?" Hicks shook his head. "Did he speak of Miss Malroy?" Hicks shook his head. "Did you see her during the afternoon?"

"No—maybe you think these niggers ain't enough to keep a man stirring," said Hicks uneasily and with a scowl. The judge noticed both the uneasiness and the scowl.

"I should imagine they would absorb every moment of your time, Mr. Hicks," he agreed amiably.

"A man's got to be a hog for work to hold a job like mine," said Hicks sourly.

"But it came to your notice that Miss Malroy has been in a disturbed mental state ever since Mr. Norton's murder? I am interested in this point, Mr. Hicks, because your experience is so entirely at variance with my own."

and the judge, who had been sitting in the shadows, reached his left arm down on the desk and with his chin sunk in his palm, followed the scratcher's narrative with the closest attention.

"And General Quintard never saw him—never manifested any interest in him?" the words came slowly from the judge's lips; he seemed to gulp down something that rose in his throat. "Poor little lad!" he muttered, and again, "Poor little lad!"

"Never once, sir," he said, "the slaves to keep him out of his sight. We'll wonder, for you know how niggers will talk. We thought maybe he was some kin to the Quintards, but we couldn't figure out how. The old general never had but one child and she had been dead for years. The child couldn't have been here no-how."

The judge drummed idly on the desk.

"What implacable hate—what iron pride!" he murmured, and swept his hand across his eyes. Absorbed and aloof, he was busy with his thoughts that spanned the waste of years—years that seemed to glide before him in review, each bitter with its hideous memories of shame and defeat. Barrymore's "business" to squirm and to wall.

"Oh, if my hands were free," he would repeat several times, "as he tried vainly to break the ropes which held him fast. The villain would approach and snarl his fingers right under Barrymore's nose."

"Loosen my hands, you devil!" Barrymore would exclaim.

One night at this great and exciting moment in the scene Barrymore had just finished his dare to the villain to loosen his hands when the traditional gallery god yelled out in sharp, clear voice:

"Why don't you kick him in the shin, Barry; your feet shan't feed."

Barrymore cured the part from that moment until his dying day.

SLEDs USED IN THE YUKON

Not Constructed Along Lines of Beauty, but for Hard Work They Are Perfection.

The Yukon sled, while not a thing of beauty, is built to stand all kinds of hard wear, or, as the Irishman said, "It will last forever, and after that can be used for firewood." The sled is about eight feet long, is made of any kind of hard wood, lies close to the ground, costs from $10 to $14, and makes a trail sixteen inches in width. Another pattern is known as the basket sled, and it is to the Yukon sled what a three-masted schooner is to a good barge. In length it is from eight to fifteen feet, is made of birch, oak or hickory, cuts a trail twenty-two inches in width, costs from $40 to $120, is raised a foot or more from the runners, and, in the best examples, is lashed together with rawhide. The basket sled, as its name implies, is fitted with a basket, into which the load is placed, and from the back of the basket a pair of handles project, to be used in guiding the sled on the trail. It often happens that a Yukon sled will be fitted with a home-made basket, in imitation of its more aristocratic brother. In very cold weather wooden runners are best, but in ordinary circumstances steel or brass runners are used.—Wide World Magazine.

Delicate Scales.

In the personal laboratory of Sir William Ramsay, at University college, London, is a new pair of scales so delicately adjusted that they will weigh a seven-thirtieth part of an ounce. The room is in semi-darkness. So delicate are these wonderful scales that their balance is disturbed by the alteration of temperature caused by the turning on of an electric light at the other end of the room. The operator has to leave them for an hour in darkness—after he has tipped from the room so that his footfall should not set up any vibration—and then read them swiftly before any change in the temperature has had time to affect them. The scales, only a few inches long, appears a mere cobweb of glass with its frail supports. It is not made of glass, however, explains Sir William, but of silica, which expands and contracts under the effect of heat far less than glass.

Public Schools.

In antiquity the masses of the people grew up in ignorance of things literary. Public education—the education that exists for the masses of the people—began, practically, with John Calvin's rule in Geneva, from which time popular education had steadily gained ground. The free school system had its beginning in Great Britain, about the year 1780, with Robert Raikes and his Sunday school movement. It was not until 1860, however, that the free public schools began to get itself firmly rooted in the British Isles. In this country from the start the idea of universal education was championed by Jefferson and other leaders among us, and the idea has never ceased to be fundamental with us, as absolutely necessary to the prevention of the liberty on which the government is founded.

Luminous Metal Discovered.

For generations the peasants of Cornwall have handed down a legend that at night there may be seen a faintly luminous metal among the rocks brought from the mines of the county. A British scientist has proved that this story is by no means based on imagination. A specimen of the mineral antimony, which is also found in Wales, was sent to him from Portugal because of its shining character. He finds that it closely resembles artificially prepared salts of uranium, and that its luminosity is due to spontaneous radioactivity. The light it sends is stronger than that of all other known substances. Upon parting with its substance the antimony loses its luminosity.

Twilight Thoughts.

The gloom of the past week has been prophetic of the approach the "melancholly days," messengers of their advent we read in the few leaves that are fluttering to the ground. Seedtime and harvest time, budding and blossoming, rest and recreation will soon be over. We put away the summer pleasure and greet the autumns with adoration. As in the spring when nature lay open at the page of joyful expectation and our souls thrilled with the touch of life, so now our heart throbs with a new feeling and inspiration in work whatever it may be. Vacationists are returning, school homes and schools are being unbarred, windows thrown open for the impouring of humanity. A few more days and the streets will hum with the voices of the school girls and boys. In the exuberance of a happy summer, we can find an outlet in well doing. Only a short time ago we listened with rapture to the joy-bells heralding the approach of Springtime. We hear now the sighing breezes, the requiem of the dying summer. Let it not be the melody of lost hope, or hampered plans, but the soul call to the great duties that await us. The seasons appeal peculiarly to the physical make-up. Some take grievously to heart the death of the flowers and the flight of the birds, while others revel in the sadness of the autumn, and take a new lease upon life. What difference does it make whether it is the voice of the Springtime, or the chill of winter, just so we behold God in all and have our hearts made warm by Heavenly Love.—Ex.

Hitting It Up.

Reports of the Internal Revenue Collector show that more than 100 cigarettes for each inhabitant of the United States are smoked annually in this country, to say nothing of cigars and pipes, and that the consumption of whiskey and rum is about a gallon and a half per capita, and of beer about two-thirds of a barrel. Every business man knows that there are now more total abstainers, and more moderate users of intoxicants, among his acquaintances than there were ten or twenty years ago. Competition eliminates the unfit, or reduces the rewards of their labor, and puts a high premium upon the degree of maintained physical and mental efficiency, that, during the course of a life of the average length, cannot be reasonably hoped for by the individual who drinks intoxicants or uses tobacco intemperately. Therefore a high premium is set upon temperance and upon abstinence from both tobacco and whisky. It is observable that an increasing number of young men figure upon that reward and refrain from making their stomachs and nerves "following after strong drink" which in the end "biteth like an adder and stingeth like a serpent" and "biting" their heads and fangs against tobacco in immoderate quantities.

How, then, is the increase in the total consumption of intoxicants and tobacco to be accounted for? It must be that those who do not have to enter into the competitive struggle for meat and bread, and feel that they can, upon that account, follow the lusts of the flesh without bothering about the impaired efficiency of the human machine; and those who indulge to the degree that "appetite suggests" without thinking about it up in liver and brain than ever before.—C-3.

Money For the 1909 Tobacco Pools Now Ready For Distribution.

Mr. J. C. Hughes, president of the Boone County Board of Control of the Burley Tobacco Society, informed the Recorder by telephone early Wednesday morning that the checks for the money due the Boone county tobacco growers on account of the 1909 pool, had been expressed to him from Lexington the day before, and said the distribution would be made at the office in Walton on next Friday and Saturday at which time he desired that all the warehouse receipts be presented. Mr. Hughes stated, further, that Boone county is getting about the best distribution of any county in the State. The money that the growers of this county will receive next Friday and Saturday will gladden the hearts of many. Get your warehouse receipt ready to be on hand.

FORTUNE MINING CO.

The following from a Prescott, Arizona, paper, reads well for those here who have stock in the Fortune Mining Company. "Associate Justice of the Supreme Court H. D. Ross, who returned yesterday from an inspection of the workings of the Fortune Mining Company on Big Bug creek, is enthusiastic over the property, and after an examination of every underground point under development, believes that ultimately one of the biggest gold and copper mines in this field will be the outcome. Judge Ross states that the long tunnel which has been driven for 452 feet is carrying ore from the mouth to the face, and the great depth being reached insures a permanent producer of the future." He was impressed with the economical disposition of the funds being made, and linked to the agreeable condition was the large amount of development in evidence. Another feature with which he was pleased was the local location of the group, so far as future transportation by railroad was to be considered, the track of the Poland railway passing within a few feet of the point where the tunnel was started. Timber is abundant on the ground, and with the attractive mineral conditions prevailing, in strong ore bodies exposed, he sees no reason why the property should not be a heavy and profitable producer.

A species of graft has developed in unexpected quarters. In several localities in Kentucky it has been discovered that the census school returns have been padded. The Supt. of Public Instruction says the exposure of the fraud has already saved more than $200,000 dollars to the State, and before the investigation is ended this sum will probably be more than doubled. He says that dead people, unborn children and people living in other States and in foreign countries have been put on the school census returns. Steps will be taken at once to bring each case before the grand jury of the county where the padding was done and the guilty parties will be vigorously prosecuted.—Georgetown Times.

Walton school will open for the next session on Monday next at 8 o'clock. The patrons of the school are invited to attend and hear some plans for the year. The new law on attendance will be enforced this year and the patrons are invited to hear some phases of it discussed.

Miss Norville Bedinger, of Bakersfield, California, is spending a couple of weeks here at her old home with relatives and friends. Miss Bedinger is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Bedinger, and went to California a year ago, where she has been employed as a teacher in the public schools at a handsome salary.

Miss Mamie Gregory who resides with Dr. W. W. Evans, underwent a difficult surgical operation last Friday night to remove a severe internal trouble. Dr. Chas. A. Langdale of Cincinnati, assisted by Drs. B. K. Menefee and J. G. Slater, performed the operation, and it was very successful.

Checks for the 1909 Boone Co. pooled tobacco will be received this week. In the matter of grade price Boone is at the head of the list, and her final distribution will be a little above 20 per cent. This is due to the 2nd grading of tobacco and the superior handling. Other counties are receiving as low as 15 per cent, owing to their having their tobacco graded and valued too high.

Dr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Baker, of Louisville, and Miss Alpha Hance, of Big Bone Springs, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. G. Slater, last Tuesday. The visiting party are touring the Bluegrass section of Kentucky this week in Dr. Baker's automobile, and Miss Hance joining them at Big Bone. Dr. Baker, while postmaster at Louisville, was in very poor health, but since retiring from politics has grown strong and well again.

The relatives of those buried in the Carpenter cemetery at Richmond, are showing their kind remembrance by erecting an iron fence around the entire cemetery. G. B. Powers, representative of the Stewart Iron Works, of Cincinnati, being the lowest bidder was awarded the contract. The work of erecting will be begun as soon as possible as those interested are very desirous of getting the work completed before freezing weather begins. A force will be put to work grading and removing the old fence at once and when the new fence is completed it will be as inviting as any cemetery could.

The Walton Graded school will open for the current year next Monday morning, Sept. 28th, at eight o'clock with appropriate exercises, to which the patrons and friends of the school are cordially invited. An extraordinary effort will be made to increase the efficiency of the school over the very successful term of last year, and to this the co-operation of all is needed in the work. The pride with conscientious work on the part of teachers and citizens, and we feel that a mere suggestion of every one to do their very best will meet with a most hearty response as that is the way the public spirited citizens of Walton do things generally.

Judge B. P. Menefee, of Crittenden, spent last Saturday here. Some of the citizens, who are opposed to the fifty cent town tax are having him investigate the legality of the proposition with a view to resisting the payment of the tax, claiming that it is higher than the law warrants. The question of testing the legality of the tax of fifty cents ad valorem on the property of Walton, is based chiefly that most of the money is to be employed to making a first-class thoroughfare of the main street running the entire length of the town, which is in reality the Covington and Lexington turnpike, and owned by that corporation, and the contention is that the town has no right to improve the highway with the public money as the said highway is owned and operated by a private corporation for profit—toll being charged on the road, though of course not in the town. However the turnpike company puts up about as much as the town authorities intend to expend and the main object on the part of both is to make a first class street thru the town. The usual tax for the town purposes is twenty cents and it has been increased to 50 cents for this year only to provide for the improvement, and next year the rate is to be reduced to twenty cents. A great many have cheerfully paid the tax believing it is right and is the only way a good street can be obtained, and over one thousand dollars has already been paid in.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Colonel Fentress.

He had not forgotten his ghost as had seen in Mr. Mahaffy that day he went to the house on business for Charley Fentress. Working or idling—principally the former—the ghost, otherwise Colonel Fentress, had preserved a place in his thoughts, and now as he stood solidly by the driver's seat, Fentress' big white horse on the hill with Mahaffy, Cavendish and Yancy trailing in his wake, memories of what had once been living and vital crowded in upon him. Some sense of the wreck that littered the long years, and the shame of the open shame that had swept away pride and self-respect, came back to him out of the past.

He only paused when he stood on the porch before Fentress' open door. He glanced about him at the wide fields, bounded by the distant timber lands that hid the bottoms at the great log barns in the hollow to his right; at the huddle of white-washed cabins beyond; then with his big fist he reached in and pounded on the door. The blows echoed loudly through the silent house, and an instant later Fentress' tall spare figure was seen advancing from the far end of the hall.

"Who is it?" he asked.
"Judge—Price—Colonel Fentress," said the judge.

"Judge Price," unceremoniously, and still advancing.

"I had flattered myself that you must have heard of me," said the judge.

"I think I have," said Fentress, pausing now.

"He thinks he has!" muttered the judge under his breath.

"When you come in it was more a question than an invitation."

"If you are at liberty," the colonel bowed. "Allow me," the judge continued. "Colonel Fentress—Mr. Mahaffy, Mr. Yancy and Mr. Cavendish."

Again the colonel bowed.

"Will you enter the library?"

"Very good," and the judge followed the colonel briskly down the hall.

When they entered the library, Fentress turned and took stock of his guests. Mahaffy he had seen before; Yancy and Cavendish were of course strangers to him, but their appearance explained them; last of all his glance shifted to the judge. He had heard something of those activities by means of which Shocum Price had striven to distinguish himself, and he had a certain curiosity respecting the man. It was immediately satisfied.

The judge had reached a certain shabbiness seldom equaled, and but for his mellow, effluent personality might well have passed for a common vagabond; and if his dress advertised the state of his finances, his face explained his habits. No misconception was possible about either.

"May I offer you a glass of liquor?" asked Fentress, breaking the silence. He stepped to the walnut center-table where there was a decanter and glasses. By a gesture the judge declined the invitation. Whereupon the colonel looked surprised, but not so surprised as Mahaffy. There was another silence.

"I don't think we ever met before," observed Fentress. There was something in the fixed stare his visitor was bending upon him that he found disconcerting, just why, he could not have told.

That fixed stare of the judge's continued. No, the man had not aged—he had grown older certainly, but age had not come ungracefully. He became the glossy broadcloth spotless linen he wore. Here was a man who could command the good of his life, using them with a rare temperance. The room itself harmonized with his character; plain but rich in its appointments his library and his of the well-ordered cases ranged be in the main scholarly and intellectual.

"How long have you lived here?" asked the judge abruptly. Fentress seemed to hesitate; but the judge's glance, compelling and insistent, demanded an answer.

"Ten years."

"You have known many men of all classes as a lawyer and a planter?" said the judge. Fentress inclined his head. The judge took a step nearer him. "People have a great trick of coming and going in these western states," said the judge, "I have known him in aid of these new lands."

A deadly earnestness lifted the judge's words above mere rudeness. Fentress, cold and distant, made no reply. "For the past twenty years I have been looking for a man by the name of Gatewood—David Gatewood." Disciplined as he was, the colonel started violently. "Ever heard of him, Fentress?" demanded the judge with a savage scowl.

"What's all this to me?" The words came with a gasp from Fentress' twitching lips. The judge looked at him woody and frowning.

"I have reason to think this man Gatewood came to west Tennessee," he said.

"If so, I have never heard of him."

"Perhaps not under that name at any rate, you are going to hear of him now. This man Gatewood, who between ourselves was a damned scoundrel"—the colonel winced—"this man Gatewood had a friend who threw money and business in his way—a planter he was, as was Gatewood. A sort of partnership existed between the pair."

"It proved an expensive enterprise for Gatewood's friend, since he came to trust the damned scoundrel more and more as time passed—even large sums of his money were in Gatewood's hands."

Fentress' countenance was like stone, as expressionless and as rigid.

By the door stood Mahaffy with Yancy and Cavendish; they understood that what was obscure and meaningless to them held a tragic significance to these two men. The judge's heavy face, ordinarily lathered and debauched, but infinitely good-natured, bore now the markings of deep passion, and the voice that rumbled forth from his capacious chest came to their ears like distant thunder.

"This friend of Gatewood's had a wife?" The judge's voice broke, emotion shook him like a leaf, he was tearing open his wounds. He reached over and poured himself a drink, sucking it down with greedy lips. "There was a wife," he whispered about on his heel and faced Fentress again. "There was a wife, Fentress—" he fixed Fentress with his blazing eyes. "A wife and child. Well, one day Gatewood and the wife were missing. Under the circumstances Gatewood's friend was well rid of the matter—he should have been grateful, but he wasn't, for his wife took his child, a daughter; and Gatewood a trifle of thirty thousand dollars his friend had 'intrusted to him'."

"There was another silence."

"At a later date," said this man, who had been betrayed by his wife and robbed by his friend. He had taken out of the race—drunk had done for him—there was just one thing he seemed to care about, and that was the fate of his child, but maybe he was only the man who was. He wondered if she had lived, and married—"Once more the judge paused."

"What's all this to me?" asked Fentress.

"Are you sure it's nothing to you?" demanded the judge hoarsely. "Understand this, Fentress, Gatewood's treachery brought ruin to at least two lives. It caused the woman's father to hide his face from the world; it wasn't enough for him that his friends believed his daughter dead; he knew differently, and the shame of that knowledge came into his mind. It cost the husband his place in the world, too—in the end it made of him a vagabond and a penniless wanderer."

"This is nothing to me," said Fentress.

"Wait!" cried the judge. "About six years ago the woman was seen at her father's home in North Carolina. I reckon Gatewood had cast her off. She didn't go back empty-handed. She had run away from her husband with a child—a girl; after a lapse of twenty years she returned to her father with a boy of two or three. There are two questions that must be answered when I find Gatewood: what became of the child; are they living or dead; did the daughter grow up and marry and have a son? When I get my answer it will be time enough to think of Gatewood's punishment!"

The judge leaned forward across the table, bringing his face close to Fentress' face. "Look at me—do you know me now?"

But Fentress' expression never altered. The judge felt back a step.

"Fentress, I want the boy," he said quietly.

"What boy?"

"My grandson!"

"You are mad! What do I know of him—or you?" Fentress was gaining courage from the sound of his own voice.

"You know who he is and where he is. Your business relations with this man Ware have put you on the track of the Quintard lands in this state. You intend to use the boy to gather them in."

"You're mad!" repeated Fentress.

"Unless you bring him to me inside of twenty-four hours I'll smash you!" the judge. "Your name isn't Fentress, is it?"

"No, it isn't."

"Then what is it?"

"It is Gatewood."

"Gatewood?"

put your own coat on a few stripes and here! I'll tell you the name of the friend you've been—the fellow who stole I'll strip you and turn you out of these doors as naked as when you entered the world!" The judge seemed to have above Fentress' head, the man had shot out of the deep debauchement. "Choose! Choose!" he thundered, his shaggy brows bent in a menacing frown.

"I know nothing about the boy," said Fentress slowly.

"By God, you lie!" stormed the judge.

"I know nothing about the boy," said Fentress, and he took a step toward the door.

"Stay where you are!" commanded the judge. "If you attempt to leave this room to call your niggers I'll kill you on its threshold!"

But Yancy and Cavendish had stepped to the door with an intention that was evident, and Fentress' thin face cast itself in haggard lines. He was feeling the judge's terrible capacity, his unexpected ability to deal with a superior situation. Even his haughty gaze at his friend in wonder. He had only seen him spend himself on trifles, with no further object than the next meal or the next drink; he had believed that as he knew him so he had always been lax and loose of tongue and deed, a noisy tavern hero, but now he saw that he was dealing with a superior situation. Even his haughty gaze at his friend in wonder. He had only seen him spend himself on trifles, with no further object than

"I tell you I had no hand in carrying off the boy," said Fentress with a sardonic smile.

"I look to you to return him. Strip yourself, Gatewood, or by God, I'll hold you to a reckoning with your own hands!"

The sentence remained unfinished, for Fentress felt his overwrought nerves snap, and, giving way to a sudden blind fury, struck at the judge.

"We are too old for rough and tumble," said the judge, who had disappeared astonishing agility in avoiding the blow. "Furthermore we were once gentlemen. At present I am what I am, while you are a hound and a blackguard. We'll settle this as becomes our breeding." He poured his Repeals Attack of Death.

May It Level.

A good bottom board which can be will do for the bottom. In setting it the only care necessary is to have it level on top.

trance in the summer is left full 1/2 inch deep and the width of the hive.
In spring and fall entrance stops are used to close it to a scant 1/2 inch by 3 to 8 inches, according to the strength of the colony.

To make it, cut two 4-inch strips, a,
with the top or short side the length of the hive and the bottom 4 inches longer. Cut a strip the same width for the back and long enough to reach across the hive, less the thickness of the two sides.

Nail strips inside of side pieces at the right height to bring the bottom up to where you set the desired bee space. Another board should be nailed across the front to come flush with the bottom boards and form an alighting board. A is side with cleat in position, b is bottom board complete, c entrance stop.

variety. Set the plant on the south side of the stake, about four inches from it, and train same to stake as it grows, tying with binder twine or cloth strings, which are preferable.
Many times when the vines are very rank two branches will start to grow from the top, but clip one off, allowing only one to grow to a height of five feet, then clip the top, and keep them clipped, which will hasten the ripening. And convert all the strength of the vine into fruit.

When the plants are eight or ten inches high, little runners or shoots will appear in the forks. Here, writes
P. Borsely in the Farm and Home, where the whole secret lies. These runners tap the main vine and turn all the strength into vines instead of tomatoes. When they appear pinch them off and allow only one main vine to grow. The fruit buds or blossoms will also appear in the same fork, but do not disturb them. Keep clipping the runners every time you find them when you cultivate them. The fruit will be nice, early, clean, handy to eat, a great improvement over the runners.

HEAVY WAGON JACK

Material Required for Simple Extremely Handy Implement
Is in Quite Small.

Three pieces of wood, three bolts, nuts and one piece of wire will make the jack of material required for a very simple and handy wagon jack, says the Homestead.
The piece of 1 by 4 hardwood, 3 feet long, is the main part. Cut one piece of 1 by 4 hardwood, 2 feet long for lever, one piece 1 by 4 wood, with notched piece of 1/2 inch wire 18 inches long for the base.

The lever is secured to the upright by a half-inch bolt 18 inches long.
The piece with the notched end fits the lever with a 1/2 inch

The Use of Paper.

People have long been familiar with the fact that there are paper car wheels and buckets and various implements of convenience, and that paper can be employed both as a means of retaining heat. Cooking in paper bags is now very common. A paper manufacturer stated that his firm is experimenting with a kind of paper which can be used for making clothes which can be sewed and held together by buttons.
Paper towels are already made in Germany. Paper hats have been a fashion for some time.
In place of washable cotton-sunbonnets and caps children can have each day a new paper hat, costing a few cents, taking one item off the laundry bill. Paper shirts and handkerchiefs have come into vogue. Substitutes for table covers, the cloths and other linen are being produced in paper.—N. Y. Advocate.

PRESSURE IN OCEAN DEPTHS

Enormous Force That It Would Seem Nothing Could Be Able to Resist.

An impression, as the term indicates,
is the direct opposite of an explosion.
The conditions most favorable for the production of an impression exist at great depth in the sea. At 3,500 fathoms the pressure is, roughly speaking, about two and a half tons to the square inch, a pressure that is several times greater than that exerted by steam upon the pistons of a powerful engine.

An interesting illustration of the enormous force of this deep-sea pressure was afforded on one occasion when a government vessel was engaged in marine exploration. A thick glass tube several inches in length and full of air was hermetically sealed at both ends, wrapped in flannel and placed in one of the wide copper cylinders employed to protect deep-sea thermometers. When they are sent down with the sounding apparatus. Holes were bored in this cylinder so that water might have free access to the interior round the glass. The case was then lowered to a depth of 2,000 fathoms and drawn up again.

The cylinder was raised and bent inward, just as if it had been crumpled inward by a violent squeeze.
The glass tube itself, within the flannel wrapper, was reduced to a fine powder. The tube, it would seem as it slowly descended into the depths, held out long against the pressure, but at last, suddenly, gave way, and was crushed by the violence of the action to a fine powder.

Trade conditions in the Azores are peculiar. The islands are small, and at best only a limited business can be done. As to lumber or timber, all of which is from the United States, the islands are supplied principally from cargoes of wrecked and damaged res-sels. At least for the past four years this has prevailed, and during the first two weeks of January more than 150, 000 feet of lumber were discharged from a large steamer that encountered hurricane weather on its way from Mississippi to Europe and on to St.
Michael's. The lumber was discharged and was sold at the low price of cents per foot. Consul Edward A. Meyer, St. Michael's.

Mount-Pele Eruption.

It will never be known how many human lives were lost in the recent eruption. It is generally understood that between 40,000 and 50,000 people perished. Mount-Pele was a volcano about 5,000 feet high. Great masses of lava were thrown suddenly upon the surrounding people in a cent-fort complete. Escape was impossible, and the force of the eruption was lying in the contiguous area almost swamped by the eruption of the air waves. Of the last number lost only 5,000 or 6,000 white people.

The three surviving officers of the last election are County Clerk, W. H. Gatewood; Sheriff, R. D. Smith, and Jailer, Z. D. Lusby.—News.

THE COUNTERPART.

That we are creatures of environment goes without question. That every sane, sensible man will, for a time at least, adjust himself to the conditions that exist, also goes without question. If a man who abhors loud, boisterous and disorderly conduct, is thrown among men of this kind, he will adjust himself to the situation by keeping silent, and although silence may seem to give consent, it does not. In this case for he watches for his chance and proves to the contrary. For a man of refined, sensitive nature to be thrown into a typical "mud" camp with noisy women, church or school house in sight, with no law only unwritten law, with rough, reckless men by the hundreds, means that he must either more or less into the spirit of conditions in order that his life may be preserved. If he has a mission it must be quietly tucked away in "the pigeon hole" of his memory until circumstances permit of its being brought to light for every observing and thoughtful citizen believes there is a time for all things. To put the question that transforms a typical mining camp into a place of even ordinary respectability cannot be done by human power alone, so when God in his infinite wisdom, touches the key of inspiration and sets in motion the machinery that runs toward things men's hands are turned to their hearts respond to the touch. To believe that this is God's country and with all its resources for making good conditions and bad conditions, its life, its last and its future, requires faith of the indelible kind, but let us of men have this faith and prove it. To believe that every city or town where crime and villainy abounds has its counterpart in other cities and towns, where the law of crime and villainy are in evidence requires some faith too, but seeing the country will convince any one of the truth of this. The writer has in mind a little "city" of the south.

A steamboat arrived at Frankfort a few days ago, loaded with fish nets and traps captured by the State Game Warden and deputies in a raid along the Kentucky river. This is a good beginning. The stream of the State need protection badly against illegal fishermen and every good citizen ought to lend a helping hand in the way of enforcing the law.—Georgetown Times.

As Maine flopped back to the Republicans in its State election held last Saturday the Democrats are getting no consolation out of the result. The only straw at which they can grab in that State is that the Bull Moose are reported as declining—they will vote their own ticket in November.

Rev. S. J. Bradley, who served the Petersburg circuit as pastor for the last four years, has been sent to Alexandria, Campbell county, by Rev. J. B. Nelson will supply the Petersburg circuit.

Resolutions of Respect.
Against the great power has entered our path, we covered the shen cords that bound our beloved brother, Mr. T. Wilson, to this life. He was gathered as a sheath of ripened grain, as a leaf in the autumn that falls from the tree. The Master called and his spirit went to him who gave it.

While we are again reminded of our utter helplessness and uncertainty in life, but the certainty of death we are also reminded of the wonderful power of the Omnipotent God, who works in ways that seem mysterious and strange, yet it is all for our good and future welfare. He takes the Sparrow, fall, and we bow in humble submission to his will.

Mr. T. Wilson, who has been an active member of the Council No. 1, of the A. O. U. W. for about 10 years, where he moved from the Council No. 100. He died this life Aug. 20, 1912, at a very old age, leaving a wife and three children, a son, three daughters and a son-in-law. His loss is a great one to his family and to the community.

Respectful sympathy is extended to the family and to the community. We are sure that the Master will give them the best of all.

delicate refined courtesies of polite society but never any loud and unnecessary talk. The men were frank and business in speech, yet quiet and reserved. The women preserved their dignity upon all occasions with that excellent tact and courtesy that only the true woman knows how to use. The resulting laughter and sparkling conversation of the students was so tempered and softened by the refined surroundings that one failed to notice any harshness or discord. The environment is indeed a creative power for good or evil. People looking for a quiet refuge from the strenuous life can find in Florence, Ala., the ideal conditions that sane morals, religion and municipal government bring.

Charlie White and Miss Irene Cook, of Petersburg, surprised their many friends here by the announcement that they were married last Saturday at Lawrenceburg, the 29th inst. Their many friends here wish them a long and happy married life.
The large crowd that came out to the game Saturday to witness the double header between the locals and the champion of the Traction League, of Cincinnati, was not disappointed for the visitors were the best club that has played here this season. Old Pap pitched the first game and was in old time form and strong in the pinch. This game resulted in a score of 3 to 4 in favor of the locals and was a ten inning contest. Sandford pitched the second contest and those who came out to see our only league player perform was not disappointed for Eddie had the visitors on his wagon from start to finish, they getting only four bingles off his delivery; with 17 strikeouts to his credit. He also showed that he has control of the ball by giving only one pass in the game. The opposing pitcher in this game was a good one, too, as he only allowed the locals five hits, two of them being two batters by Sandford. Ryle also hit for two bases while Brady and Rogers each got a single. Thirteen of the locals were in the pinch. This game resulted in a score of 3 to 4 in favor of our boys. The features of this game were Sandford's pitching and batting and Rogers' long running catch of a long fly in right field. The manager of the local club request me to say that they hereby challenge the winner of the Burlington-Petersburg series for a series of three games, date and place to be arranged by the managers of the clubs.

The Neumeister Bros. have demonstrated the value and profit of fine fruit growing in this section by the care and attention given their orchards, and have now some of the finest fruit exhibited anywhere. Their apples are the rivals of those from Hood River, Oregon, production in size and quality, and they will realize a far greater profit on the products of their orchards than from any other source of the farm. They look after their trees, prune and spray, and make fruit culture what it should be. It is a most successful and profitable investment. It would be well for many of the farmers to visit their orchards and get a few pointers as to how to make fruit growing pleasant and profitable.

PERSONAL MENTION.
Mr. J. W. Duncan has been very ill the past week.
Sheriff B. B. Hume spent a few days the past week in Louisville.
Florin Holton, of Petersburg, was transacting business in Burlington, yesterday.
Grover Snyder and wife, of Aurora, are visiting relatives in Burlington and vicinity.
Newton Sullivan was in Cincinnati, yesterday, on business pertaining to his store.
Miss Shirley Tolin is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Powell and Miss Dora Rich, in Danville, Illinois.
Mrs. Samuel Johnson, of Ashy Fork, was among the Monday business visitors to Burlington.
A. B. Renaker and wife and C. C. Hughes and wife were in the city shopping last Friday afternoon.
Mrs. Dix and son, Roll, are now citizens of Burlington, occupying the Willis property back of the P. E. Smith residence.

Jacob Crigler, of Hebron, came over last Friday afternoon to witness the game of foot ball between Burlington and Erlanger.
Carl Smith and Rex Berkshire are representing Burlington lodge at the K. of P. Grand Lodge in session at Louisville this week.
Miss Kathryn Clements, of Erlanger, and her sister, Mrs. Fuller, of Chicago, were calling on Burlington friends last Tuesday. Mrs. Fuller will return to her home next week.
D. M. Snyder and wife, of Erlanger, and Mrs. Fannie Snyder and daughter, of Petersburg, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Carpenter several days the past week.
C. G. Smith, of Hebron neighborhood, was in Burlington, last Friday, the first time, for a year. He shows plainly that the illness which he pulled through last summer was very severe.

Mrs. E. K. Stephens and Miss Graham Roberts, of Walton, were guests of Burlington friends and relatives several days the past week. Mrs. Graham is one of the popular and obliging operators at Walton telephone exchange.
Congressman A. B. Rouse last Friday, where he received a cordial welcome by his Pendleton county constituents who recognize his unusual ability as a representative of the people. He showed no delicacy in calling when they want anything looked after in Washington.
Omer Porter, a United States Marine, located at Washington, D. C., arrived at home last Thursday morning on fifteen days furlough. He is a corporal and was sent to Cuba, where he spent several weeks during the recent trouble on that island. He appears to like the service so far as he has had any experience.

County Attorney N. E. Riddell, A. B. Renaker and J. C. Revell, of Burlington, and J. Garner Renaker, of Florence, left Tuesday at noon to attend a meeting of the State Bankers' Association at Louisville this week. Mr. Riddell will also look in upon the K. of P. Grand Lodge which is in session in that city this week.
Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Tanner, of Gunpowder, were callers at this office last Friday morning. Mrs. Tanner is a daughter of the late venerable D. T. Riddle, who was a subscriber to the Recorder since within the mind of the publisher runs not to the contrary, Mrs. B. C. Tanner has the address changed to that of her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Tanner have a delightful home at Gunpowder.

Messrs. Harry Perkins and wife, of Covington, and Frank Perkins and wife, of Erlanger, were callers at the Boone House, last Sunday, having come to Burlington to visit the town which was the home of the men's father many years ago, and to once more look upon the last resting places of some of their relatives in the cemetery north of the town. Harry Perkins was born in Burlington 27 years ago.

James Blyth and wife, of Glendora, California, are here visiting his relatives. They had been in New York visiting Mr. Blyth's relatives and on their return trip home stopped off here for a visit with Mr. Blyth's relations. Mr. Blyth went to Nebraska in 1887, where he married. He spent several years, moving from Nebraska to Southern California, and is now located at Glendora, which is about twenty-seven miles from Los Angeles. Mr. Blyth has prospered in his far off western home and owns a valuable ranch. He had not visited his old Kentucky home for twenty-two years, and there were but few faces that he could recognize at first sight, many of whom he had associated with when a resident of the town having been called to their reward, while the young people have grown up and, consequently, their faces are no longer familiar. Mr. Blyth looks well and has changed very little since last here, a few gray hairs being the most noticeable change in his appearance. His old acquaintances were glad to meet him again, and wish for him continued prosperity in his adopted home.

DESTROYED BY FIRE

Odd-Fellows Building at Hebron Burned to the Ground.

Walter Garnett's very large general store at Hebron was destroyed by fire last Friday night. The building was a two story frame and belonged to Viola Lodge of Odd-Fellows, which used the second story as a hall. The fire was discovered about eleven o'clock by Mrs. Wash Tanner, who lived near the building but before assistance arrived nothing could be done, owing to the town having no apparatus with which fight the flames. The only things that were saved by Mr. Garnett were a few barrels of flour and a small bunch of wire fencing that were in a small building near the store.

Mr. Garnett fortunately carried $2000 insurance in an old line company but it will not begin to meet the amount of their loss, as they were doing a big business and kept a large stock on hand. A considerable amount of invoice of new goods late Thursday afternoon.
The Odd-Fellows had $1,200 insurance on their building, but the contents of their hall, but it will fall far short of covering the loss which was total. It had not been long since the lodge had a considerable amount of regalia and hall furniture. There are about 60 members of the lodge, mostly young and energetic men, who doubtless will erect a larger building making of the second story a much more commodious hall and better adapted to lodge purposes.
At a meeting of the Odd-Fellows held last Saturday night it was decided to rebuild at once on the site of the old building, and to erect a modern store room over which will be a commodious and well arranged hall for the lodge.

As Sommer Sees Kentucky.

Harry Sommer, editor of the Elizabethtown News, makes out his hope sheet on the result in Kentucky this fall as follows:
"The question is how will the Republicans vote between Taft and Roosevelt? Recently we had opportunity to get a full and fair expression of opinion from every congressional district in the State. In the Third, Ninth and Tenth districts Taft will get more votes than Roosevelt. In the Second, Fourth and Eighth districts they will be practically a standoff between the two. In the other districts Roosevelt will lead Taft considerably. Especially in the Eleventh. It looks now like Roosevelt will get 110,000 votes and Taft 90,000. If these figures are borne out there is no material change between now and election day. We will have a plurality over Roosevelt of 115,000 and over Taft of 135,000 and a majority over both of 25,000."

F. W. Kassabow, of Aurora, was over last Monday and contracted with James Slayback to put in foundations and set stones at the head of the graves of Mrs. Asa Cason and Miss Genie Cason. The latter was a daughter of Mr. Alfred Cason and has been dead several years. Both graves are in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery.

About seventy-five people attended the Riddell reunion held last Sunday at the home of Jas. A. Riddell in the Hebron neighborhood. A sumptuous dinner was served at the noon hour and a most enjoyable day was spent by all notwithstanding the uncomfortable weather.

The Coffee Social given on the afternoon and evening of the 28th, for the benefit of St. Paul's church by Mrs. Battie Long assisted by her daughter, Mrs. George Smith, at their beautiful home near Florence, was well attended and a grand success in every particular.

The Burlington ball team will find their opponents, the Petersburg team, a pretty lively aggregation again next Saturday, and to win out they will have to be on their toes all the time.

L. H. Busby, of Erlanger, was in Burlington yesterday. He sold out one county seat. They say he is one of the Erlanger business men who has not time to eat a square meal.

Postmasters are now required to separate each incoming mail into the several classes of matter and to count and weigh the pieces. This work began October 1st and will continue two months.

It is understood that the foot ball team from Erlanger that defeated Burlington High School team last Friday does not claim to be a High School team.
A State Bank Examiner arrived in Burlington, Tuesday, and began an examination of the books of the two local banks.

The Parcel Post.

With the adjournment of Congress and the passing of the Parcel Post law whereby the mails will be used to carry the packages that the Express Companies are now making millions of dollars transporting, the people are anxious to see it begin and just what effect it will have on the business of the community. There have been hundreds of letters written for and against this law but Congress has decided that it is best for the people so the only thing now is to put it in effect and watch results.

The following summary of the provisions of the new law, which will become effective Jan. 1, 1913, has been given out by the Congressional Committee so the people can see what it will cost to see this means of sending and receiving packages.

Any article is mailable if not over eleven pounds in weight nor more than 72 inches in length and girth combined not likely to injure the mails or postal equipment.

Milk Famine Threatened.

R. D. Collins, president of the Fayette County Dairyman's Association says the entire state is threatened with a milk famine on account of the shortage of dairy cows. He attributed the cause of the shortage to the fact that dealers and farmers are keeping but few cows on hand, because of the law requiring the tuberculin test for all dairy cows, and also said that the present high price of beef makes the value of cows greater for slaughtering purposes than for dairy use. Collins said he had been trying to buy more cows for his herd, but that he had been unable to do so, and that he had been unable to get milk from Louisville dealers.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guaranteed by all dealers.

The fact that the women of Lexington are this fall to have the new privilege of voting in school elections, and that an active campaign is being waged by leading women to bring out a full vote of the sex, has brought into the notice of how the additional voters can all be registered in the one day now allowed by law, and in which therefore it is taken at the time of the registration officers in each precinct to handle the male voters. The leaders among women claim that at least one-half and possibly two-thirds of the women eligible to vote in this city will desire to register, and they therefore have called upon the city Council to provide at least one and maybe two additional days for registration this year.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggist's opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Enos Lillard, of Saratoga, Ind., "and wonder it the best on the market." For sale by J. W. From every section of Kentucky comes the announcement that crops are about all that can be desired. The farmers are approaching the winter with an assurance that they seldom enjoy and instead of the constant buying of food for the livestock they will have plenty and some to spare. It has been just a while since crops throughout the State were so abundant. When the farmer is prosperous and satisfied everybody else is benefited thereby.

Hang up the broom it will last longer.

Burley Tobacco Growers Boost Your Own Brands

We, as you know, are using your choicest tobacco in the brands of Strater Bros.' Branch, and you know that nobody grows better tobacco than you do. You know how we manufacture, so you know that these brands are perfection. Now we want you to help us sell these brands this year even better than our best previous years. The reasons you should so help are as follows:

You Are Part Owner

The fact that you grow the tobacco makes you part owner of all these brands. Every time that one sells you profit. Every word that you say in favor of any help to increase those sales. Every brand that you buy for your own use helps make those profits better. All our interests—your interests and ours—are pooled in these several tobacco. It is logic that you should bend all of your efforts, however small, in the selling.

The United Power of 40,000 Buyers

40,000 men in a section wield an enormous buying influence. If all ask for these brands when they buy tobacco there results a gigantic sale. And big sales are the best advertising known.

To Dealers! Dealers throughout the United States know these famous tobaccos. They are Nation-wide sellers—popular brands. They are helping these dealers to prosper. They are made from the pick of the famous crops of 40,000 growers. Every one of these growers is boosting them all. So are all of their friends. This method is bringing the profits to dealers to those who sell these brands. Are they working for you? Here are the mild, fragrant smoking brands—GOLDEN GLOW—PENNY POST—FULL PAY—ON THE SQUARE—TORCHLIGHT—STRATER'S NATURAL LEAF. Put them into your stock. See how they sell.

"I Am Well"

writes Mrs. L. R. Barker, of Bud, Ky., "and can do all my housework." For years I suffered with such pains, I could scarcely stand on my feet. After three different doctors had failed to help me, I gave Cardui a trial. Now, I feel like a new woman.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

A woman's health depends so much upon her delicate organs, that the least trouble there affects her whole system. It is the little things that count, in a woman's life and health. If you suffer from any of the aches and pains, due to womanly weakness, take Cardui at once, and avoid more serious troubles. We urge you to try it. Begin today.

NIGHT RIDERS.

Issuance of Warrants Being Freely Talked.

Henderson, Ky., Sept. 25.—The issuance of warrants is being freely talked in the alleged night rider trouble which is reported to have occurred Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning near Zion, about eight miles from this city.

Some eighteen or twenty members of the Stemming District Tobacco Association claim they were returning from a tobacco meeting near Anthonston and that they had to pass through Zion to get to their homes near Spottsville. They say in a signed statement that when within a mile and a half of Spottsville they were confronted by J. Stokes Taylor and several others from Zion, who leveled their guns on them and told them to halt, which they did. They told them they were unarmed and on a peaceful mission, according to their sworn statement.

Mr. Taylor in his signed statement says that he had been informed that they had been to his house looking for him and that they told him they would get him yet. Mr. Taylor states that these men terrified the people of the Zion neighborhood, and that in justice to himself and neighbors he had the right to do what he did.

On the other hand, the men who composed the party claim that there is a remedy for what they term a "gross outrage." They say that they told Mr. Taylor that they had not been near his farm. Taylor is the originator of the Henderson County Tobacco Association, a separate and distinct organization from the other herein mentioned.

No damage was done to any individual or property. The statement is made that the Stokes Taylor party fired off their guns in the air when they were nearly upon the party of alleged marauders.

Mr. Taylor's concluding statement follows: "We acted upon the appearances and representations of those who appeared to know the facts. I certainly will be glad to be assured that this party of horsemen had no wrong intentions and their mission was a peaceful one. And I hope that the alarm occasioned by their appearance and conduct in Zion was the result of misapprehension of their purposes."

The Young Ones Making Good.

The Maysville Woman's Club last spring offered a prize of $5 for the most improved back yard. At the same time the club distributed flower seeds to all applicants, for the purpose of helping along the good work.

The club has just awarded the prizes to the winner of the five-dollar premium is a 12-year-old boy. The result doubtless will surprise some of the people of Maysville. The civic beautification idea has not lacked advocates in that city. Many individuals urged it in theory, but when the showdown came it was found that a 12-year-old boy led all the rest in putting it into practice. The boy won the prize in open competition and he deserves it. He also deserves commendation for the energy and application which he devoted to the task. In the meanwhile there are some older heads in Maysville which ought to be bowed in chagrin if not in admiration.

It is a fortunate state of affairs that the boys and girls in Kentucky are showing a disposition to do things in the way of improvement which are being sadly neglected by their elders. Whether it be the growing of a crop of corn, the betterment of a schoolhouse or the beautification of a back yard the younger element of our population is taking the lead. Some of our so-called old folks are unduly prejudiced in favor of old ways and do not take kindly to innovations. They think old times were better in many respects, and they are wrong ninety-nine times out of a hundred, but it doesn't matter to argue them out of their belief. The better plan is to leave them to their opinions and to appeal to the better element of the boys and girls having more of the world before them, are looking more to the future and less to the past.

All the boys and girls are not up-to-date and all the fathers and mothers of advanced years are not out of date by any manner of means. None the less must we look mainly to the boys and girls to keep the wheels of progress moving and to make Kentucky a better State in which to live.

The big financiers declare that business, by which they mean big business, is looking up noticeably. This is presidential election year and the people are in the midst of political excitement. Business can hardly fail to be good with such large crops all over the country. The farmer makes business of all kinds; if his crops are large business is good; if his return is only average, business is slow; if poor, business drags and many bankruptcies occur. Manufacturing concerns try to keep their crops going to do before they plan for material and output, and wholesale dealers and jobbers do the same before laying in their stocks. All depends upon the farmer's success. No wonder that Congress and the legislatures are constantly planning to make farming more successful.

The Parcels Post.

The following is taken from the last issue of the R. F. D. News, the official paper of the Rural Free Delivery carriers:

"Live chickens, ducks and geese, as well as eggs and general farm and garden products, will be admitted for transportation by parcels post of other merchandise, when it is instituted on January 1. This has been decided by the special commission which is preparing the regulations by which to govern the parcels post service. The schedule is to be so arranged that city dwellers may get fresh eggs and butter, chickens, and other produce direct from the farms by mail. This will be an important feature of the parcels post. Eggs and chickens are produced and sold by the posts of European nations, and the same conditions will apply here. Not only will the government carry these things, but an indemnity will be provided for their loss or damage in transit. Farmers will be able to supply their trade in the city direct without even hitching up a team, and making the journey to town. This will save them the major expense of marketing goods, as well as saving time and money both to the consumer and producer. It is possible the parcels post will prove to be a novel means of cutting the high living cost."

Beware of the Man With The Orchard Scheme.

It is understood that the Department of Agriculture will soon issue a report in which a warning will be sounded against orchard investment schemes that put out promises of profit far in excess of what the department experts regard as warranted.

Many inquiries have reached the Department regarding orange, apple, and other enterprises where the orcharding is to be done by proxy, and in some cases the claims of profits are alluring to the extreme. These investment plans have flooded the country and have aroused considerable interest, and it is quite possible that the Postoffice Department may take a hand in the matter for the purpose of suppressing the literature of fraudulent propositions.

If you have young children you have perhaps noticed that disorders of the stomach are their most common ailment. To correct this you will find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets excellent. They are easy and pleasant to take, and mild and gentle in effect. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

The last session of Congress appropriated $100,000 for experiments in delivering mail by postmen from postoffices of the 3rd and 4th class, the amount to be expended not to exceed $1,800 at any office. This takes in offices of towns of over one thousand. Not all of the cities of this class will get this delivery at the start, but if it is a success all will get it eventually.

To be sweet and clean it is desirable that the cow stable be whitewashed at least twice a year.

Sick headache is caused by a disordered stomach. Take Chamberlain's Tablets and correct that and the headaches will disappear. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

Here's The Plumb Bob

It's just another proof that Tubular Cream Separators are just up to the minute—miles ahead of anything. No other machine has it.

What's It For?

It enables you to level the Sharples Dairy Tubular Cream Separator in a minute—quicker than you could find the spirit level you must use to level all other separators. A glance at the plumb bob, hanging there on the back of the Tubular, will always tell you whether the Tubular remains level. In that way you get the very best work out of the Tubular, for all Separators should be kept level to do their best work.

Tubulars have dozens of exclusive fine points and are sold on the level. Bring the wife in. See how simple, perfect and different from others Tubulars are.

Tom Maxwell, who lives on the S. J. Crutcher farm, about five or six miles below here, had an unusual fishing experience last week. He had caught a small cat fish from the river, and finding it smaller than he cared to take home, left it tied on the line and threw it back in the river.
It remained over night and next morning when Maxwell went down to the river and started to pull out the line he was surprised at the resistance which met his efforts. Finally getting it clear of the water, he found instead of the small fish he had left there, an enormous yellow catfish weighing 35 pounds. The big fellow, coming along, had found the other fish and swallowed it. Accordingly he was securely fastened to the line, and was brought ashore, killed and cut up into divers steaks and roasts for the Maxwell family.—

MADE AT HOME.

Our belief is that the Panama Steel Range is the best range ever produced by any foundry for the money.

THE PRICE is the result of our ability in handling many of them, and the foundries many years of range-building experience, they having acquired in their time knowledge of minimizing the cost of production.

We feel satisfied that this range will give you the required service. We have seen this range built, and know that durable materials are put into it, and skilled stove builders employed to build them.

THE PANAMA would be a good value at $30.00. Our price at $24.75 makes the Panama the best range value on earth. Why not become the pleased owner of a PANAMA RANGE?

When Greencastles Were Unknown

Kitchen work was a drudgery. The invention of the No. 432 Greencastle has brought about a new era in housekeeping. It possesses the embodiment of every possible feature to lessen housework. It is different from any other Kitchen Cabinet on the market. It is different not alone in its many exclusive features, but its construction as well.

FEATURES

Large White Enameled China Compartment, will hold a 100-piece dinner set. Removable full tilting sanitary flour hopper, feeds from back. Detachable ant-proof swinging sugar jar, with aluminum cover. Exclusive roll-front door feature, opens instantly and may be left closed while work is being done on zinc top. Non-rustible zinc top, slides on bearings. Dust-proof partition below top, prevents crumbs and dust getting into base. Spacious utensil compartment, equipped with sanitary shelves and racks. Divided cutlery drawer, long linen drawer and mouse and insect-proof bread and cake box.

CONSTRUCTION.

Best selected seasoned lumber goes into the construction of the Greencastle. Every corner properly jointed, and will remain solid for years later. Every detail, large and small, is built to the greatest convenience of the housewife.

THE PRICE.

The reasonable price of the Greencastle is another example of an economical management on the part of the factory. We are therefore, able to offer you a complete GREENCASCADE at $28.50

Local Happenings.

Next Monday is county court day.

There is a very large crop of Kiefer pears this year.

No milk is now being received by the local creamery on Sunday.

Remember the Democratic speaking in Burlington, next Monday.

Supt. Riley is having a directory of the Boone county schools printed.

The schools in this county appear to have made a good beginning.

Sunday broke the record for autos coming to and passing thru Burlington.

Wanted—Farm hand—white or black. Apply to H. C. Duncan, near Bullittsville.

Mont Slayback caught for Petersburg in its game of ball with Lawrenceburg, last Sunday.

It is sincerely hoped this fall will not be a repetition of last fall in the matter of weather.

The largest crop of hickory nuts in years is now on the trees, and beech nuts are also an unusually large crop.

The frost last Monday night was a killer in some places, but so far no damage to corn or tobacco has been reported.

The very pronounced prospects for frost last Sunday night caused many tobacco growers to spend Sunday cutting tobacco.

The picnic at the Harvest Home grounds last Saturday afternoon was well attended, and a most enjoyable time was had by all.

Quite a number of good looking young ladies accompanied the Petersburg ball team on its visit to Burlington last Saturday afternoon.

A veterinary's ambulance in which was a lame mule being taken to the Buchert farm west of Burlington passed thru town Sunday.

Raymond Jackson brought to this office, last Monday morning, a pawpaw that measured 10 inches in circumference. Pawpaws are unusually large this fall.

A great many farmers in the southern part of this county have erected silos which they will fill this fall. The silo is becoming very popular the country over.

The first frost of the season in this locality was seen last Friday morning. There was not enough to damage vegetation any.

Kenneth Kirkpatrick, was painting a roof on a one story building last Friday afternoon, when he lost his hold and fell to the ground, a distance of about fifteen feet.

C. C. Hughes has spent the larger part of his vacation with briar smokes and grub-hoe cleaning up his land. He is beginning to take on the appearance of this every day farmer.

F. A. Robinson, representing Perin Bros., millers, Cincinnati, was a caller at this office last Saturday morning. He sells the local merchants considerable flour which they consider a very fine article.

Winter clothing has been mustered into service again. Those who have to buy fall and winter goods are referred to the advertisements in the Recorder for information as to where to make their purchases.

Hon. Charlton Thompson, of Covington, will address the Democrats in Burlington next Monday county court day at one o'clock. Mr. Thompson is a member of the legislature and said to be a good stump.

William Hughes presented the writer with a liberal supply of rice, luscious pawpaws, one day last week. They were of the genuine old time variety that will melt in the mouth. The pawpaw is a health giving fruit.

If the foot ball season lasted as long as that of base ball and the game was played as often by the teams at the close of the season half of those who began the season would be dead and the other half would be maimed for life.

Edgar Berkshire and wife had a very successful day last week fishing down on Woolper creek. Besides numerous other fish several very fine bass were caught. The artificial bait known as the spinner was used successfully for bass.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience. Viz., Mrs. P. H. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)"

SECOND GAME.

Burlington Smashed Ruth Like A Hod of Coal Falling On A Ripe Tomato.

The second of a series of three games between the Burlington and Petersburg base ball teams was played at the local park, last Saturday afternoon. Black was in the box for Burlington and scarcely allowed the Burgers a look-in. After the second inning the visitors had only faint hopes that something might happen that would put them in the game, and not until the seventh inning did a Burger get to see one base and he went from first on a passed ball. The only Burger who saw third scored in the ninth inning after Black had loosened up a little. Up to the ninth inning the game was a close one, but a visitor did chance to reach first Black would tighten up and there he remained. Burlington gave their pitcher good support, but a little swifter fielding on two occasions would have reduced the number of hits made by the Burgers to three. In the preliminary practice, Burlington did not begin to shine with the visitors but throughout the game they outclassed the boys from the burg. They touched base at one time, and pulled off several startling base running stunts. The score was 9 to 1 in favor of Burlington. Hits—Burlington 9, Petersburg 5; struck out by Black 10, by Ruth 8. Three base hits—Tolin; two base hits—Conner two, Kiopp.

The third game of the series will be played at Bellevue next Saturday afternoon, and it is apt to be won by one club as the other.

COVINGTON MERCHANTS

Are Turning the Trade Back to Their City.

Covington business men are having success in their effort to turn back to their city the trade that rightly belongs to them. It had been so long since the public's attention was called to Covington as a trade center when the business men of today began their effort to reclaim the business since allowed to slip away from the city, that they find it an up hill work, but their persistency along that line is being rewarded. Covington merchants have nice stores which are well kept by efficient and pleasant clerks and many of those who, in the last two years, have been induced to shop in Covington are surprised at the ample stocks they find, and are pleased with the prices which are as low as elsewhere when the stock is of the same grade. Covington merchants are doing the largest business along their line ever done in this city, and the result has been brought about by a united effort on the part of those who recognize that they have a good territory from which to draw trade, and that they can acquire that trade by handling the proper stock and making prices that are in keeping with those of other cities.

Teachers' Meeting.

The Teachers' Meeting of the Big Bone and Rabbit Hash Magisterial District was called to order by vice-president, Miss Minnetta Stephens.

After a short prayer by Superintendent Edgar C. Riley the following program was rendered:

Miss Georgia Pitcher had an interesting paper showing the had given the subject thought.

Supt. Riley made a short talk on the subject which was interesting and instructive.

Agricultural in the School, was handled by Johnst Northcutt in such a way as to show that it was necessary to be taught in the public schools, but as yet, very few teachers were prepared to teach it.

English in Higher Grades was introduced by Supt. Riley and discussed by the teachers present.

Miss Minnie Stephens read a paper on Sanitation.

On account of the absence of a few teachers all the subjects chosen were not discussed.

A number of patrons were present, showing that interest is manifested in the cause of Education.

Erlanger 60—Burlington 0.

Erlanger High School foot ball team came over last Friday and defeated Burlington High School team 60 to 0. Burlington never looked dangerous, only approaching any ways near to the goal once when it claimed and was allowed a touch. Coacher Tolin was unfortunate in that two of his men, Reuben Hager and Walton Dempsey, upon whom he depended for much of his work, were injured early in the game and were not able to take part thereafter. They collided in making a play and Dempsey received a considerable scalp wound while Hager was rendered daffy, for a little while following the accident. The Erlanger team had it over the Burlington boys at every point and put up a runaway contest. Burlington expects to put up a very much improved game before the season closes.

In the death of Mrs. Jemima Tanner, the Gunpowder settlement has lost another very old citizen. Mr. D. T. Crigler, in his 94th year having died here only a few weeks ago. Mrs. Tanner was 87, and a most excellent lady. She was the widow of W. A. Tanner, who died many years ago. Mrs. Tanner's maiden name was Uls, one of the county's oldest and most prominent families. The funeral took place Tuesday at Hope.

PRIMARY LAW.

Both Parties Must Nominate Their Candidates at the Same Time.

Following are the main features of the compulsory primary election law which becomes effective March 5th. It does not apply to school trustees of towns of fifth classes, nor presidential electors, but does include United States Senators. Primaries are to be held on the first Saturday in August in each year for the purpose of nominating candidates to be voted for at the ensuing November election but nominations by political parties to fill vacancies at special elections to be held at some special date other than the regular November election are to be made as determined by the governing authorities of the parties. If vacancy occurs within seventy days before regular November election, the party governing authority may also in this instance determine the manner of nominating. Should a nominee die within seventy days of his election, his party may select the method of naming his successor.

The law applies to those parties which at the last presidential election polled at least 20 per cent of the total vote cast, and therefore effects only the Democratic and Republican parties.

Any person may become a candidate in the primary, who files, at least 30 days before the primary, the required nomination papers, signed by not less than 5 per cent of the total vote of his party in the district or counties in which he is to run, except that in districts having more than one county such per cent of the votes in half the counties only is required, and in Railroad Commissioners, districts, said per cent is required in only one-fourth of the counties. For State offices, only two per cent of the voters of at least ten counties are required.

Before his name is placed on the primary ballot, a candidate must sign an agreement to the effect that he will not withdraw if nominated and that he will qualify if elected at the November election.

The County Clerk is required to publish the names of all the candidates not less than twenty days before the primary.

Both parties nominate their candidates at same identical time and place, the same officers are conducting both. The officers are to be divided the same as at regular elections, with respect to political affiliation and are appointed by the county Board of Election Commissioners.

The voter must announce his party to the officers, whereupon the clerk issues him the ballot of his choice.

The returns are canvassed by the same Board.

The State bears all the expense, precisely as it does in regular elections.

Missouri Tobacco Crop.

Missouri is making some progress in tobacco growing, despite the fact that many of the Kentuckians who went to that State during the night rider days have come back home with a poor opinion of Missouri tobacco prospects.

The Missouri Bureau of Labor Statistics has issued a bulletin which conveys the intimation that in 1911 Missouri marketed 1,340,000 pounds of tobacco, "which was nearly twice as much as was ever marketed in the State in any other year." The Bulletin continues:

"The tobacco production of Missouri during the past few years has more than kept pace with the increase in other farm crops of the State, no other crop having shown such a marked increase in acreage production and value.

"The figures given are based on returns received from railroad and express companies, and do not take into account thousands of pounds produced in the State and used locally.

"The effort on the part of the manufacturers to encourage the growing of tobacco in Missouri has met with splendid success. It is predicted that within a few years the production will increase many times over, as the crop is a highly profitable one, and there are yet thousands of acres of land in the State capable of producing a high grade tobacco which are awaiting the coming of the experienced tobacco grower.

back along the shore until he gained a point opposite the clearing. He whistled shrilly three times, and after an interval of waiting heard the splash of oars and presently saw a skiff steal out of the gloom.

"Who's there?" It was Bess who asked the question.

"Carrington," he answered.

"Lucky you ain't met the other man!" she said as she swept her skiff alongside the bank.

"Lucky for him, you mean. I'll take the oars," added Carrington, as he entered the skiff.

Slowly the clearing lifted out of the darkness, then the keel boat became distinguishable; and Carrington checked the skiff by a backward stroke of the oars.

"Hello!" he called.

There was no immediate answer to his hail, and he called again as he sent the skiff forward. He felt that he was risking all now.

"What do you want?" asked a surly voice.

"You want Slosson?" quickly prompted the girl in a whisper.

"I want to see Slosson!" said Carrington glibly and with confidence, and once more he checked the skiff.

"Who are you?"

"Murrell sent you," prompted the girl again, in a hurried whisper.

"Murrell!" And in his astonishment Carrington spoke aloud.

"Murrell!" cried the voice sharply.

"Who's There?" It Was Bess Who Asked the Question.

"Sent me!" said Carrington quickly, as though completing an unfinished sentence. The girl laughed nervously under her breath.

"Row closer!" came the sullen command, and the Kentuckian did as he was bidden. Four men stood in the bow of the keel boat, a lantern was raised aloft and by its light they looked him over. There was a moment's silence broken by Carrington, who asked:

"Which one of you is Slosson?"

And he sprang lightly aboard the keel boat.

"I'm Slosson," answered the man with the lantern. The previous night Mr. Slosson had been somewhat under the influence of corn whiskey, but now he was his own cheerful self, and rather jaded by the passing of the hours which he had sacrificed to an irresponsible responsibility. "What word do you fetch from the captain, brother?" he demanded.

"Miss Malroy is to be taken down river," responded Carrington.

Slosson swore with surpassing fluency.

"Say, we're five able-bodied men taking our needs to oblige him! You can get married a damn sight easier than this if you go about it right—I've done it lots of times." Not understanding the significance of Slosson's allusion to his own matrimonial career, Carrington held his peace. The tavern-keeper swore again with unimpaired vigor. "You'll find mighty few men with more experience than me," he asserted, shaking his head.

"But if you say the word—"

"I'm all for getting shot of this!" answered Carrington promptly, with a sweep of his arm. "I call these pretty close quarters!"

Still shaking his head and muttering, the tavern-keeper sprang ashore and mounted the bank, where his slouching figure quickly lost itself in the night.

Carrington took up his station on the flat roof of the cabin which filled the stern of the boat. He was remembering that day in the sandy barony road—and during all the weeks and months that had intervened, Murrell, working in secret, had moved steadily toward the fulfillment of his desires! Unquestionably he had been the spark of the attack on Norton, had inspired his subsequent murder, the man's sinister and mysterious power had never been suspected. Carrington knew that the horse-theives and slave stealers were supposed to maintain a loosely knit association; he wondered if Murrell were not the moving spirit in some such organization.

"If I'd only pushed my quarrel with him," he thought bitterly.

He heard Slosson's shuffling step in the distance, a word or two when he spoke gruffly to some one, and a moment later he saw Betty and the boy, their forms darkly silhouetted against the lighter sky as they moved along the top of the bank. Slosson, with one superfluous gallantry, helped his captives down the slope and aboard the keel boat, where he looked them in the cabin, the door of which fastened with a hasp and wooden peg.

"You're boss now, pardner!" he said, joining Carrington at the steering oar.

"Well cast off then," answered Carrington.

Thus far nothing had occurred to mar his plans. If they could but quit the bayou before the arrival of the man whose place he had taken the rest would be, if not easy of accomplishment, at least within the realm of the possible.

"I reckon you're a river-man?" observed Slosson.

"All my life."

The line had been cast off, and the crew with their setting poles were forcing the boat away from the bank. All was quietly done; except for an occasional order from Carrington no word was spoken, and soon the unwieldy craft glided into the sluggish current and gathered way. Mr. Slosson, who clearly regarded his relation to the adventure as being of an official character, continued to stand at Carrington's elbow.

"That have we between here and the river?" inquired the latter. It was best, he felt, not to give Slosson an opportunity to ask questions.

"It narrows considerably, pardner, but it's a straight course," said Slosson. "Black in yonder, ain't it?" he added, pointing ahead.

The shores drew rapidly together; they were leaving the lake-like expanse behind. In the silence, above the rustling of the trees, Carrington heard the first fret of the river against its bank. Slosson yawned prodigiously.

"I reckon you ain't needing me!" he said.

"Better go up in the bow and get some sleep," advised Carrington, and Slosson, nothing loath, clambered down from the roof of the cabin and stumbled forward.

The ceaseless murmur of the rushing waters grew in the hush as the keel boat drew nearer the hurrying yellow flood, and the beat of the Kentuckian's pulse quickened. Would he find the raft there? He glanced back over the way they had come. The dark ranks of the forest walled the clearing, but across the water a dim point of light was visible. He fixed his position as somewhere near the head of the bayou. Apparently it was a lantern, but as he looked a ruddy glow crept up against the skyline.

From the bow Bunker had been observing this singular phenomenon. Suddenly he bent and roused Slosson, who had fallen asleep. The tavern-keeper sprang to his feet, and Bunker pointed without speaking.

"Mebby you can tell me what that light back yonder means?" cried Slosson, addressing himself to Carrington, as he spoke he snatched up his rifle.

"That's what I'm trying to make out," answered Carrington.

"Hell!" cried Slosson, and tossed his gun to his shoulder.

What seemed to be a breath of wind lifted a stray lock of Carrington's hair, but his pistol answered Slosson in the same second. He fired at the huddle of men in the bow of the boat and one of them pitched forward with his arms outspread.

"Keep back, you!" he said, and dropped off the cabin roof.

His promptness had bred a momentary panic, then Slosson's bull-like voice began to roar commands; but in that brief instant of surprise and shock Carrington had found and withdrawn the wooden peg that fastened the cabin door. He had scarcely done this when Slosson came tramping aft supported by the three men.

Calling to Betty and Hannibal to escape in the skiff which was towing across the Kentucky rushed toward the bow. At his back he heard the door creak on its hinges as it was pushed open by Betty and the boy, and again he called to them to escape by the skiff. The fret of the current had grown steadily and from beneath the wide-fung branches of the trees which here met above his head, Carrington caught sight of the star-specked arch of the heavens beyond. They were issuing from the bayou. He felt the river snatch at the keel boat, the buffeting of some swift eddy, and saw the blunt bow swing off to the south as they were plunged into the black shore shadows.

But what he did not see was a big muscular hand which had thrust itself out of the impenetrable gloom and clutched the side of the keel boat. Coincident with this there arose a perfect babel of voices, high-pitched and shrill.

"Sho—I bet it's him! Sho—t's Uncle Bob's nerry! Sho, you can hear 'em! Sho, they're shootin' guns! Sho!"

Carrington cast a hurried glance in the direction of these sounds. There between the boat and the shore the dim outline of a raft was taking shape. It was now composed by a variety of pale gray smoke that faded from before his eyes as the darkness lifted. Turning, he saw Slosson and his men clearly. Surprise and consternation was depicted on each face.

The light increased. From the flat stone deck of the raft ascended a tall column of flame which rendered visible six pimply figures, low-headed and wonderfully vocal, who were tolling like mad at the huge sweeps. The light showed more than this. It showed a lady of plump and pleasing presence smoking a cob-pipe while she fed the fire from a tick stuffed with straw. It showed two bark shanties, a line between them decorated with the never-ending Cavendish wash. It showed a rooster perched on the ridge-pole of one of these shanties in the very act of crowing lustily.

Hannibal, who had climbed to the roof of the cabin, abated for help, and Betty added her voice to his.

"All right, Nerry!" came the cheerful reply, as Yancy threw himself over the side of the boat and grappled with Slosson.

"Uncle Bob! Uncle Bob!" cried Hannibal.

Slosson uttered a cry of terror. He had a simple but sincere faith in the supernatural, and even with the Scratch Hiller's big hands gripping his throat, he could not rid himself of the belief that this was the ghost of a murdered man.

"You'll take a dog's licking from me, neighbor," said Yancy grimly. "I been saving it for you!"

Meanwhile Mr. Cavendish, whose proud spirit never greatly inclined him to the practice of peace, had prepared for battle. Springing aloft he knocked his heels together.

"Whoop! I'm a man as can slide down a thorny locust and never get scratched!" he shouted. This was equivalent to setting his triggers; then he launched himself nimbly and with enthusiasm into the thick of the fight. It was Mr. Bunker's unfortunate privilege to sustain the onslaught of the Earl of Lambeth.

The light from the Cavendish hatch continued to brighten the scene, for Polly was recklessly sacrificing her best straw tick. Indeed her behavior was in every way worthy of the noble alliance she had formed. Her cob-pipe was not suffered to go out and with Connie's help she kept the six small Cavendishes from risking life and limb in the keel boat, toward which they were powerfully drawn. Despite these activities she found time to call to Betty and Hannibal on the cabin roof.

"Jump down here; that ain't no fit'n' place for you-all to stop in with them gentlemen fightin'!"

An instant later Betty and Hannibal stood on the raft with the little Cavendishes flocking about them. Mr. Yancy's quest of his nerry had taken an enduring hold on their imagination. For weeks it had constituted their one vital topic, and the fight became merely a satisfying background for the interesting restoration.

"Sho, they'd got him! Sho—he wasn't no bigger than Richard! Sho!"

"Oh!" cried Betty, with a fearful glance toward the keel boat. "Can't you stop them?"

"What fo'?" asked Polly, opening her black eyes very wide. "Bless yo' tender heart!—you don't need to worry none, you got them strange gentlemen licked like they was a parcel of children! Connie, you-all mind that fire!"

She accurately judged the outcome of the fight. The boat was little better than a shambles with the havoc that had been wrought there when Yancy and Carrington dropped over its side to the raft. Cavendish followed them, whooping his triumph as he came.

STATE NEWS.

Bedford, Sept. 26.—Over three-fourths of the tobacco in this county has been housed. The crop is a large one and the quality is unusually good. The weather for the past two weeks has not been favorable to curing but the earlier cuttings show very bright colors. Much of the crop is new ground tobacco. The corn crop is a fine one, but a great part of it is late and an early frost would do much damage.

The largest number of weighing mules ever seen in LaGrange was here Monday. The grades were fair, but prices asked were high. Not over 25 sold, and brought from sixty-five dollars to ninety dollars. Fully 100 were not sold. There were quite a number of big mules on the market, nearly all of good grade. About a dozen sold at prices ranging from one hundred and fifty dollars to $100.—Oldham Era.

Hopkinsville, Sept. 26.—After his trial on the charge that he shot with intent to kill his son-in-law, J. D. Cluck, had begun in Circuit Court here, R. W. Poilard escaped during the noon recess. His bondman, Urie Poilard, of Princeton, had agreed to continue as his surety during the trial and the bond of $200 has been ordered forfeited. Notwithstanding Poilard's disappearance, the trial went on and the jury returned a verdict finding him guilty.

When the people can be made to understand that it actually costs more in time and money to travel over a poor road than it does to travel over a good one, they will be less inclined to begrudge the expense of good roads, and what is more important still, will be willing and anxious to put the business of road making into the hands of intelligent men who understand the business. Poor roads are the expensive things that curse the country districts.—Oldham Era.

Sharpsburg, Sept. 16.—The crops of this county are in a flourishing condition. There never was such a corn crop raised here before as the present crop. The ears are large and heavy and several on each stalk. The rest of the land had last year by the drought coming on at the season the crops were just starting, was of great benefit. The bumper tobacco crop. Great fear is felt among the farmers that they will not have barn room for it all. Tobacco cutting is going on rapidly.

Lexington, Sept. 26.—Tuesday, October 29, has been fixed as the opening date for the sale of loose leaf tobacco on the Lexington market. The date fixed for the opening of the market is at least one month earlier than last year, due to the early maturing of tobacco and favorable weather for curing the crop, which has prevailed with but little intermission. Many farmers are engaged in stripping their crops and with favorable seasons for such work, will be well along by the opening day of the market.

Cadiz, Sept. 26.—Trigg County Committee of the Planters' Protective Association held a meeting here yesterday and it was ascertained that only about one-third of the tobacco in this county has been pledged to the association this year, and they instructed County Chairman J. J. Patterson, who has gone to Clarksville to attend a meeting of the directors that unless 50 per cent. of the tobacco of the eight counties in the Black Patch was pledged to the association to vote against a continuance of the organization. The books for this year will close next Tuesday.

Frankfort, Sept. 25.—Hereafter State banks in Kentucky may not hold stock in other corporations as an investment, though they may take it temporarily as collateral security. This order has been mailed out by State Banking Commissioner T. J. Smith, who secured an opinion from Attorney General Garnett. The order will not cause embarrassment to those banks which have money so invested, as the order says: "A reasonable time will be given banks to dispose of such holdings."

This provision was made after consultation between Commissioner Smith and Attorney General Garnett so that no losses might be incurred by reason of the necessity of disposing of the stocks at the market price, should there be no immediate demand for them.

The reason for the order is that such investments are in their nature speculative, and while there has been no reckless disregard of caution discovered on the part of the banks, and many such investments are safe and remunerative, it is impossible for the department to supervise such investments and discern between the safe and unsafe risks. So the general principle was laid down that all must refrain from the practice in the future.

Another order states: "Many banks have a custom of allowing their cashiers a stated sum, and he in turn employs his assistants. This will not be permitted in the future, and all employees must be chosen by the directors and their salaries paid by the bank."

J. W. Coppeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. He is not willing to pay a five dollar doctor's bill. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

Rowan County School Plans.

In a communication published in Thursday's Courier Journal Mr. John B. McFerran called attention to the progressive and comprehensive school programme laid down for 1913 by Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, superintendent of schools for Rowan county. For the benefit of other school officials and for the information of school patrons and the public generally this programme is worth repeating. It is as follows:

Aims for the Rowan county schools for 1913:

First—Every child in the county enrolled in school.

Second—Six weeks' term of moonlight schools for adults in each district.

Third—Average attendance of 70 per cent. in day schools and 50 per cent. in night schools.

Fourth—An average of two graduates from each school.

Fifth—Each schoolhouse and yard made so attractive as to invite and hold the children.

Sixth—Domestic science and agriculture taught in some form in each school.

Seventh—A school improvement league in each district.

Eighth—A library in each district accessible twelve months in the year.

Ninth—A fruit club organized in each district.

Tenth—Arbor day observed and trees planted in each school yard.

Eleventh—Fifty yards of model road built in front of each schoolhouse.

Twelfth—An American flag over each schoolhouse.

Mrs. Stewart's excellent work in Rowan county has attracted wide-spread attention, so much in fact that other States have made her handsome offers of school positions. Her salary in Rowan county is not large and it would be no difficult matter for her to secure employment in other sections of the State or outside of it, which would be much more remunerative, but she is intensely interested in her work at home and is making no other plans to continue it with the same earnestness and enthusiasm that she has put forth heretofore. Her program for 1913 is a big one. It may well be doubted if she is able to carry it out in its entirety, but if she should succeed only in small part she will have accomplished a great deal for the uplift and advancement of Rowan county.

To whatever extent Mrs. Stewart is successful in realizing upon the ambitious schedule of endeavor she has laid down it may, safely be assumed that the schools of Rowan county will make progress in 1913 as they have under her ministrations in the past; not ordinary day progress, but advancement absolutely marvelous such as is typified in the success of the moonlight schools, if these things can be done by a woman superintendent in a little mountain county, working for less than a living salary, who can gauge the possibilities of similar effort in all our counties and in any considerable number of them? Mr. McFerran rightly says it is possible to carry out such a program in greater or less degree in every county in the State. He might have added that conditions in most of the counties are more favorable for effective action than in the little county wherein Mrs. Stewart has made so conspicuous a success.

The county superintendent who feels that he is handicapped in this work or has insuperable difficulties to contend with should look at Mrs. Stewart's program for 1913 and take new hope. It is an inspiration to educational labor which should have its effect throughout the Commonwealth.—C. J.

Almost A Miracle.
One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man according to W. B. Holclaw, Clarendon, Texas, was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Croup with excellent results. Its quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at all dealers. (Advertisement.)

PLATTSBURG.

Owen Beamon went to Erlanger last week to get lumber to put a side on his barn. Nick Oberding, of Lawrenceburg, was on this neighborhood buying logs last week. A. C. Porter in hauling logs to have lumber sawed with which to build a new barn. Ray Botts says that the sign by which he predicts that we are going to have a severe winter has never been known to fail. It is reported that Baldon saw mill will put the Baldon saw mill in operation as soon as he completes the work of filling silos. Nearly all the tobacco in this neighborhood was housed under the most favorable weather conditions of any crop for a number of years. Ray Botts went to Petersburg, last Saturday to visit his sister, Mrs. Kate Cox and children, who left that day for Chicago, where they will make their future home. Since Owen Beamon made it so interesting for the chicken man a couple of weeks ago this neighborhood is having its first rest for several weeks from the maudlin of that stripe. The organ which was purchased a few years ago by the Woolper Sunday School and placed in the Woolper school house, is about to become the cause of a controversy between some of the patrons of the public school.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggist's opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Enos Lollar, of Saratoga, Ind., "and consider it the best on the market." For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and B. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

GUNPOWDER.

Mrs. Susan Aylor is seriously ill. Mrs. M. R. Tanner has not improved any since our last report. Late crop of tobacco is about all in the barn in good condition. Jack rooster nipped some of the corn near the water courses last week on Sunday. Lon Acre has 34 potatoes that weigh 60 pounds. That is some taters. Lewis Weaver, of Georgetown, was a caller at our burg the first of last week. A little daughter of Lewis Clegg and wife had the misfortune to get her arm broken last week. Dr. Furnish, of Covington, was called to see a sick child of Mrs. Clegg and wife, one day last week. Hurb Rouse our greatest pedestrian broke his record last week when he walked 23 miles in about three hours. Mrs. Rouse and family, of near Limaburg, were guests of his parents, J. W. Rouse and wife, last Sunday. J. H. Tanner and wife, head of the Bartell and Cora Blankenbaker visited P. J. Allen and wife last Sunday. Lewis Weaver cut a heavy crop of clover off of one acre of ground last week. He brought up and planted it to potatoes and dug 260 bushels. Lewis is making good. Harry Rouse and family, Misses Lizzie and Lillian, of Lexington, attended Aunt Jennie Tanner's funeral on Tuesday of last week. They came down in their auto.

Mrs. Emma Tanner, whose death occurred on the 29th ult., was born August 23, 1825, having reached the advanced age of 87 years, one month and six days. She was married to W. A. Tanner Nov. 22, 1842. He preceded her to the grave just eleven years, both of them having died on the 29th of September. L. H. Buehler, their adopted son, celebrated his birthday anniversary on the date of their death. Aunt Mimma was a noble woman and an ardent worker for every body, which was thoroughly demonstrated by the large congregation that assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to her memory. Her long her age and infirmities deprived her of some of the pleasures of this world and she spent many lonely hours at her window, wondering why she was left here, and she was perfectly reconciled to go when the summons came. A very impressive funeral service was conducted at her home by Rev. McMillan, pastor of Big Bone Baptist church, after which the remains were buried by her husband in the family burying ground on the farm. One sister, Mrs. Della Utz, and a host of other relatives and friends, survive to mourn her departure.

FLORENCE.

Miss Corneen Stephens was the Sunday guest of Miss Nannie Corbin. Mrs. Elmore and Mrs. Tanner, of Erlanger, spent Tuesday with Mrs. David Brown. Mrs. G. A. Ryle and son, Manly, were guests of Mrs. John R. Walton, Sunday. Quite a delightful dance was given by the St. Paul Dancing Club, Friday evening. Miss Anna Walter, of Walnut Hills, visited her mother and sister, Miss Florence, Sunday. Mrs. Chas. Tanner entertained her mother, Mrs. Lucy Tanner and sister, Mrs. Cora Blankenbaker, Saturday. Mrs. Ruey Moffett has returned from Texas and is with her father, Dr. Ben Dulancy, for a while. Mrs. John Hampton will have a sale at her home Saturday, Oct. 12th. She will sell fencing and carpenter tools, household goods and other things too numerous to mention. Owen Bradford and wife had a Sunday guests, Mr. Tom Bradford and family, Lute Bradford, wife and baby, Omer McCrander and family and Mrs. Geo. Bradford and daughter. PT. PLEASANT.

Chas. Younge and family visited in Ludlow, Sunday. Quite a lot of corn is being cut since the recent frosts. The filling of silos is quite popular in this neighborhood. Several from this neighborhood attended the Hamilton, O. fair last week. Ladies Aid will meet at the home of Mrs. Malchus Southern, Wednesday, Oct. 16. Everybody invited. The following were our pleasant guests last Sunday, Mrs. Lillian Bartell and Cora Blankenbaker, of Florence; J. H. Tanner and wife and B. A. Floyd and wife, of Gunpowder. Ira Walton and wife attended the Georgetown, Ohio, fair last Friday, while on their way to visit his father, J. H. Walton and family, of Hamersville, where they spent the evening until Sunday evening. The Plan of Washington.

The site that had been selected on the Potomac for the capital was thick woods, naked fields and treacherous swamps. It was Washington's ambition to make out of this wilderness a new city which should be a metropolis as well as a capital, a second London or Paris. There were no city planners in those days, as there are now. President Washington chose Major L'Enfant for the task. L'Enfant had rebuilt the New York city hall and in Philadelphia had erected on the house of Robert Morris, financier of the Revolution, the first mansard roof ever seen in America.

There were only 4,000,000 people in the United States then, out it was Washington's wish that the new capital should be laid out for a future population of at least 800,000. L'Enfant worked on his plans for many months. He studied the plans of old world cities and freely sought advice of the founders of the republic. The city plan that he evolved still stands unique in world architecture. Its partial realization is seen in the Washington of today; its completion will be the Washington of history's tomorrow.

L'Enfant's original plans are preserved in the Congressional library. They were enthusiastically received at first, but were so far ahead of their time as to be considered impracticable. Only within recent years have they been resurrected. Then they were found to be so comprehensive, so simple and intelligent, that, though they were drawn more than a century ago, the modern city builders could see nothing in which they could be improved.

But L'Enfant died an embittered and disappointed man. There was much friction between him and his associates. He became unmanageable and was removed from office. The work was placed in the hands of Major Andrew Eliott, a bright young Pennsylvanian who had been one of his subordinates. Eliott proceeded to develop and carry out L'Enfant's ideas, and to him much credit also is due.

Until he died L'Enfant haunted the halls of congress, pouring his alleged grievances into the ears of all who would listen to him. He spurned the compensation that the government offered him and lived on the bounty of others. In 1869 his remains were transferred from their former resting place in Arlington cemetery with full military honors, and a memorial was unveiled over them. It is a marble canopy on which is carved the original plan of Washington and overlooks, from a grove on the hillside, the city of his dreams. Egerton Fuller in Harper's Weekly.

The Cry For More Cars.

Every year, just at this time, there is a cry from one end of the country to the other, for cars and more cars to haul the crops. Why is it that the farmer is the only producer who must market of this year's products within the space of a few weeks, bringing about congested traffic on the railroads, scarcity of cars for all other shippers, a tight money market and all other evils? Because the roads of the country generally are bad. The crops must be moved before the weather breaks up and roads get bad. The crops must be hauled to the railroad stations and elevators before mud gets too deep, and it becomes practically impossible to do any heavy hauling. In the poor apology for roads, it will not belong before the hauling of the grain to the railroad stations and elevators will be a physical impossibility in the majority of agricultural districts, and will remain an impossibility until after the spring rains next year have passed and have comparatively dry weather. Then the farmer will be busy with planting and plowing and getting ready for next year's harvest and he will have no time to give to marketing this year's. Many economists see in this situation a relation between the high prices the working man pays his grocer and baker and the dirt roads of the farmer which are impassable in heavy hauling after the fall break-up. Bad roads are the greatest economic waste of the nation, as well as the most inexcusable. H. B. in Indiana Farmer.

Remarkable Tobacco Crop.

Some remarkable tobacco was received at the Home Tobacco Warehouse this week, says the Louisville Times. It was the first of the new Burley crop from Jefferson county, Indiana, directly across from Trimble Co. Kentucky, where such excellent quality of the weed is grown.

Two hogheads were sold at $11.75 and $9.30 respectively large prices for the tobacco, but not so surprising when the quality is considered. This is very early for this crop. Its color and quality was much better than expected. The prices obtained are the highest on the first hogheads for a number of years. Last year the first hoghead sold for only $5.60. The entire crop from the Jefferson county, Indiana, district will be much better than usual this year, as indicated by the first hogheads received at the local breakers. Tobacco men are enthusiastic over the outlook for one of the best crops in years.

The Origin of Life Again.

Of the three questions, whence, why and whither, in regard to himself, which have chiefly occupied man's attention since he became self-aware, he has begun to think and wonder, the whence has remained most of all an insoluble mystery. Of the why, while the answer to many may seem incomplete and unsatisfactory, there is a reason in the development and exercise of the human faculties and affections, and with the resultant gratification and enjoyment which it may be hoped will become universal and comparatively free from the qualifying and counter-acting experiences which raise the question whether they are worth while. To the whither there is an answer, whether it be final or not. We and all the generations yet unborn are bound for a quiet resting place in the ample bosom of deep sleep, the teeming myriads who have gone before.

In regard to the whence men have speculated and disputed from the first, and various theories were evolved, those of the Orient being more subtle and philosophical than our Western ones, where it has been a fundamental doctrine that, however the material universe may have been constituted, the origin of life was due to a distinct creative fiat and act of the Almighty. Just what life is it is difficult to say. It appears to be traced back, as far as we have been able to go, to the power in its lowest form inherent in or communicated to a germ cell infinitesimally small to appropriate to itself, absorb and assimilate inert matter about it, and to grow and develop into higher forms. The question of its origin which, except to a few bold heretical thinkers, was considered as finally settled by the claims of religion and the decrees of theology, was revived by the followers of Darwin and has been kept constantly alive since. Spontaneous generation was suggested, thoroughly tested by Huxley and abandoned. Still the scientists kept on devising and exploring, and finally one of them succeeded, it is claimed, in artificially fertilizing the egg of a simple form of marine life, which was a long step in advance, but did not tell us how the life came to be.

Now the claim has been put forward by the President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in his opening address at its recent meeting, that life is a chemical phenomenon brought about under the same fixed laws of evolution which have been followed in building up the universe in which we live and of which we are a part.

Heretofore has been advanced the view as the most philosophical and most consonant with reason and ascertained fact that the fiery vapor which, slowly concentrating and cooling, formed the terrestrial globe on which we dwell contained the potentiality of everything that has since appeared in it or upon it, just as wrapped up in the little seed is the wonderful beauty and fragrance of the rose. If the British scientist is correct—and he does not claim to have established his theory by irrefragable evidence—life began with a single drop of water, and from that cell advanced through myriad differentiations and millions of ages, not per saltum, which is not Nature's way, but very slowly, step by step, up to man. The putting forward of such a theory or its establishment should not be a cause of apprehension or alarm to the theologians. It is merely a question of method. That life had a very simple beginning very far back many admit. That the entire chemical origin does not explain it or account for it or derogate in any way from the power that produced it, is a wonder and mystery of a man with all his faculties, going back to a chemically formed cell, is just as great as though he had been instantaneously spoken into existence complete as Adam. In either case there must have been a great, intelligent formative power back of him.

We should not be afraid of the truth, nor try to prevent it from coming to the light. What the truth can harm no one and ought to be welcomed by every one. The chemical theory of life may not be true. It is a case for suspended judgment. But it should not be denounced as infidel doctrine. Those who assume that attitude are liable to find themselves in the untenable position of the persecutors of Galileo and Bruno.—Enquirer.

To 40,000 Burley Tobacco Growers Stockholders in Strater Bros.' Branch Factory

Here are ten brands of tobacco. All of you know their worth, for you supply the leaf. It comes from your own tobacco farms. Most of you smoke or chew one of these brands, for they represent the cream of your crops. You know of none better, none richer, and you know that each sale brings a profit to you. You are partners in each of these brands. Here's a way to increase your profits on each.

40,000 Partner-Salesmen

We want 40,000 more salesmen and you, Mr. Grower, are one that we want. We want you to work with us, to help sell these brands, and thus increase your revenue from them. Your cooperation, individually, can result in gigantic sales. Here's how it works out.

Let Each Man Tell Ten Friends

Let each of your growers tell ten friends what you know of Strater Bros.' Branch Brands, the brands for which you grow the leaf. Always keep one of these brands in your pocket and give to these friends to try. Explain that the leaves were the pick of your crop and that no other crops are grown. Point out the reasons why these brands of tobacco should be every smoker's and chewer's choice since it is your choicest growth. 40,000 men, each telling ten friends, will thus get a powerful sales message to nearly 400,000. If each of those friends tell five others, nearly 2,000,000 men are affected. Think what an increase this would make on these brands in one section. You are selling to us. We are selling to them. So let us work jointly to sell the utmost that we can.

Tell Dealers, Too

Tell dealers, too, when you buy these brands, what you know of their quality. Let them know of their nation-wide popularity, how they repeat, and how they make friends of consumers. BE A BOOSTER OF BURLEY GROWERS' BRANDS, thus boosting the sales and your profits.

TO ALL DEALERS WHO SELL TOBACCO.

These brands of tobacco are famous sellers as all who sell them know. They are made from the best, from the cream of the crop, from forty thousand farms. They form the greatest repeaters known, steady sources of profit. Put them into your stock for a trial and see what they do. You will sell them for years if you sell them one week.

Prevention of Diphtheria.

To the Health Officials, Physicians and People of Kentucky: The unusual prevalence of diphtheria in many sections of the State makes it the duty of this Board to again call attention to the best known methods of preventing the occurrence and spread of this disease.

1. Diphtheria is both contagious, and is distinctly a preventable disease, being easily limited to the first case or cases. When it gets away from the primary cases and makes its escape upon the community somebody is to blame. The sooner we accept this as a sanitary maxim the sooner we shall begin to do our duties as individuals and communities.

2. On account of its frequency and fatality this disease is of far more importance to the people of Kentucky than smallpox, yellow fever or cholera.

3. When a child has sore throat, and especially if diphtheria is in the neighborhood, it should be immediately separated from other children until a competent physician has seen it and decided whether or not it is affected with a contagious disease. 4. If diphtheria, strictly isolate the case at once, in an up stairs room if possible, and as disconnected as practicable from the living and sleeping apartments of other children. No one except the physician and nurse should enter the room, and they should take every precaution not to carry the infection to others.

5. The board urges the hygienic use of a standard antitoxin, such as Alexander's in at least 5,000-unit doses, as soon as the disease is recognized, or seriously suspected, and that this dose should be repeated or doubled within twelve hours unless marked improvement has taken place. If cases are seen after the first twenty-four hours use from 7 to 25,000 units the first dose, depending upon the severity. It recommends that immunizing doses of 1,000 units be used for all children, and especially for all inexperienced relatives acting as nurses who have been seriously exposed.

6. Placard the house, and keep all other children, all having the care of children, and all who go where children are away from it. Notify the health officer of the town or county within twenty-four hours, as the law requires, and he will co-operate with the physician and family to keep the disease from spreading.

7. The discharges from the mouth and nose, which especially contain the germs of the disease, should be received on soft cloths and burned, and other discharges should be disinfected, and all refuse from the sick room burned. All utensils used in feeding the sick should be washed separately from other dishes, and should remain some time in boiling water. 8. Disinfect all bed and body clothing, and other like things, as soon as removed, by immersion for at least six hours in a solution of chloride of lime, four ounces to the gallon of water. They may then be wrung out and put in the wash. Remember, however, that no disinfectant in the sick room can do away with the necessity for abundant fresh air and sunlight.

9. The isolation of the patient should continue for ten days after all trace of the disease has disappeared, and until he has had a disinfecting bath and been clad in garments which he has not been in the sick room. No person from a house where there is diphtheria should be permitted to go into public assemblies, and no child from a house where this disease has prevailed should be allowed to attend school without a certificate from the health officer that it is safe to do so.

10. After complete recovery, or death, always thoroughly disinfect the room and its contents, preferably with nascent formaldehyde, or where this is not available, by burning 3 pounds of sulphur, moistened with alcohol, for each 1,000 cubic feet of space, previously stopping all openings, and dampening the floor, bedding and clothing and leaving the room tightly closed for 12 hours. The room should then be thoroughly ventilated, and all ledges, woodwork, etc., washed with strong soap and rinsed with a disinfecting solution.

Faithful Workers.

The department of agriculture has on its rolls 33,000 employees who do not receive a cent of salary. These are the crop reporters who have volunteered to furnish the department with monthly reports on the crop conditions in their localities—they make the reporting system of the agricultural department the best in the world. There are nearly 8,000 regular country correspondents and nearly 30,000 township correspondents, whose reports form the basis of the department's statistics. Fourteen of these correspondents have been steadily at work for 50 years and more than 100 of them have been working regular reports for 35 years. When a man will work steadily, year in and year out, without receiving a cent of pay he certainly deserves some recognition from the nation, and it has been suggested that the four veteran correspondents ought at least to be voted the thanks of Congress.

If you have young children you have perhaps noticed that disorders of the stomach are their most common ailment. To correct this you will find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets excellent. They are easy and pleasant to take, and mild and gentle in effect. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

STATE NEWS.

The State prison at Frankfort has been designated as a Reformatory and the prison at Eddyville as Penitentiary.

Mayville.—A petition is being circulated in this county calling for an election on the liquor question and is being numerously signed. The election will probably be held next spring.

Henderson.—S. H. Kimmel, who was appointed county road engineer by Judge S. A. Young, under the new law, qualified today by executing bond. The Fiscal Court fixed his salary at $2,200 a year.

Mustardville.—Clarence Burd accidentally shot and wounded Harkins, son of Wm. Harkins, near Leno, while hunting. Burd saw the bushes moving and supposing it to be a squirrel fired, leaving several shot in Harkins' body.

Owensboro.—There are numerous cases of diphtheria in Owensboro and the surrounding country, and in many instances it is proving fatal. Some of the county schools have been forced to close on account of the disease.

Henderson.—A judgment was handed down by Judge Henson in the Circuit Court in favor of the plaintiff in the case of the city of Henderson against Henry Kraver for about $7,500 for back taxes for five years on a stock of liquor, which includes the regular tax penalty of 10 per cent. and interest of 8 per cent.

Mt. Sterling.—400 head of export cattle have just been bought from the Bigstaff estate by Chas. McDonald, buyer for the S. & S. Company, of New York. The cattle will weigh 1,450 pounds each and brought in the neighborhood of 75 cents a pound. It is the biggest sale in one bunch made in Central Kentucky this year. The cattle will be shipped in November.

Carlisle.—An order issued by the Board of Health directs the reopening of all schools in Nicholas county which were closed by the board because of diphtheria, provided the disease no longer exists among the pupils. Eight schools were closed in the western section of the county, where there was an epidemic. No new cases have been reported.

Carlisle.—Carlisle's new city hall and city building, which has been under construction here during the summer, is nearing completion, and the fire department is moving into its new quarters. The new building, which has been erected of pressed brick and Bedford stone at a cost of $10,000, is one of the most modern in this section, and is located opposite the Nicholas county courthouse.

Frankfort.—After being out one minute, a jury returned a verdict in favor of the 38 defendants in the $50,000 night rider damage suit of C. H. Crouch against Mark Connelly and others, of Owen county. The defendants published an affidavit charging Crouch with a malicious falsehood in his statement that Poplar Grove Union of the Society of Equity had passed a resolution to burn barns, whip nonpollers and commit other outrages.

Henderson.—The district board of the Stemming Tobacco Association, embracing the counties of Henderson, Union, Webster, Hopkins and Crittenden after canvassing the vote, announced that 75 per cent of the crop has been pledged and that accordingly the pool will be continued. The time for closing the books has been extended to October 20th. Strong efforts have been made this year to keep the pool going. The organizations have been formed, and many who have been members refuse to pool again.

Shelbyville.—A verdict of $5,000 was returned this afternoon in favor of Mrs. Lizzie M. Johns against the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company in a suit based on the death of her husband, Thomas Johns, a fireman for the Louisville & Nashville, who was killed in the Long Run wreck on January 16. The attorneys for the defendants have admitted negligence and submitted the case to the jury at the conclusion of the testimony for the plaintiff. This is said to be the largest verdict returned in a similar case in this State. An appeal will be taken on the ground of excessive damages.

Why People Leave the Farm.

Richmond Pantagraph. When the 1910 census figures showed that forty Kentucky counties stretching out across the Bluegrass region had lost in population, although every county seat had gained, people wondered why it was. One explanation or cause seems to be that farms are being consolidated into large boundaries. In Fayette, the heart of the Bluegrass, there are vast estates. James Haggin, of New York, has 10,000 acres in his Elmendorf stock farm. L. V. Harkness owns 4,000 acres, David M. Look, 1,072 acres, W. E. D. Stokes 550 acres, Frank Clemmens 6,200 acres, J. H. Graves 4,000 acres, John E. Madden 2,000 acres, Clarence Leake 86 acres. And these are not all of the large estates.

Here's The Plumb Bob

It's just another proof that Tubular Cream Separators are just up to the minute—miles ahead of any other. No other machine has it.

What's It For?

It enables you to level the Sharples Dairy Tubular Cream Separator in a minute—quicker than you could find the spirit level you must use to level all other separators. A glance at the plumb bob, hanging there on the back of the Tubular, will always tell you whether the Tubular remains level. In that way you get the very best work out of the Tubular, for all Separators should be kept level to do their best work.

Tubulars have dozens of exclusive fine points and are sold on the level. Bring the wife in. See how simple, perfect and different from others Tubulars are.

The Plan of Washington.

The site that had been selected on the Potomac for the capital was thick woods, naked fields and treacherous swamps. It was Washington's ambition to make out of this wilderness a new city which should be a metropolis as well as a capital, a second London or Paris. There were no city planners in those days, as there are now. President Washington chose Major L'Enfant for the task. L'Enfant had rebuilt the New York city hall and in Philadelphia had erected on the house of Robert Morris, financier of the Revolution, the first mansard roof ever seen in America. There were only 4,000,000 people in the United States then, but it was Washington's wish that the new capital should be laid out for a future population of at least 800,000. L'Enfant worked on his plans for many months. He studied the plans of old world cities and freely sought advice of the founders of the republic. The city plan that he evolved still stands unique in world architecture. Its partial realization is seen in the Washington of today; its completion will be the Washington of history's tomorrow.

L'Enfant's original plans are preserved in the Congressional library. They were enthusiastically received at first, but so far ahead of their time as to be considered impracticable. Only within recent years have they been resurrected. They were found to be so comprehensive, so simple and intelligent, that, though they were drawn more than a century ago, the modern city builders could see nothing in which they could be improved. But L'Enfant died an embittered and disappointed man. There was much friction between him and his associates. He became unmanageable and was removed from office. The work was placed in the hands of Major Andrew Ellicott, a bright young Pennsylvanian who had been one of his subordinates. Ellicott proceeded to develop and carry out L'Enfant's ideas, and to him much credit also is due.

Until he died L'Enfant haunted the halls of congress, pointing his alleged grievances into the ears of all who would listen to him. He spurned the compensation that the government offered him and lived on the bounty of others. In 1909 his remains were transferred from their former resting place in Arlington cemetery with full military honors, and a memorial was unveiled over them. It is a marble canopy on which is carved the original plan of Washington and overlooks from a green hillside, the city his dreams—Egerton Fuller in Harper's Weekly.

The Cry For More Cars.

Every year, just at this time, there is a cry from one end of the country to the other, for cars and more cars to haul the crops. Why is it that the farmer is the only producer who must market of this year's products within the space of a few weeks, bringing about congested conditions on the railroads, scarcity of cars for other shippers, a tight money market and all other evils? Because the roads of the country, generally are bad. The crops must be moved before the weather breaks up and roads get bad. The crops must be hauled to the railroad stations and elevators before mud gets too deep, and it becomes practically impossible to do any heavy hauling in the poor apology for roads. It will not be long before the hauling of the grain to the railroad stations and elevators will be a physical impossibility in the majority of agricultural districts, and will remain an impossibility until after the spring rains next year have passed and have comparatively dry, warm weather has returned. By then the farmer will be busy with planting and plowing and getting ready for next year's harvest and he will have no time to give to marketing the high priced crops. The working man pays his grocer and baker and the dirt roads of the farmer which are impassable to heavy hauling after the fall break-up. Bad roads are the greatest economic waste of the nation, as well as the most inexcusable.—H. B. in Indiana Farmer.

Remarkable Tobacco Crop.

Some remarkable tobacco was received at the Home Tobacco Warehouse this week, says the Louisville Times. It was the first of the new Burley crop from Jefferson county, Indiana, directly across from Trimble Co. Kentucky, where such excellent quality of the weed is grown. Two hogheads were sold at $11.75 and $9.30 respectively large prices for the tobacco, but not so surprising when the quality is considered. This is very early for this crop. Its color and quality was much better than expected. The prices obtained are the highest on the first hogheads for a number of years. Last year the first hoghead sold for only $5.60. The entire crop from the Jefferson county, Indiana district will be much better than last year, as indicated by the first hogheads received at the local breaks. Tobacco men are enthusiastic over the outlook for one of the best crops in years.

The Origin of Life Again.

Of the three questions, whence, why and whither, in regard to himself, which have chiefly occupied man's attention since he became conscious of self and began to think and wonder, the whence has remained most of all an insoluble mystery. Of the why, while the answer to many may seem incomplete and unsatisfactory, there is a reason in the development and exercise of the human faculties and affections, and affections, with the resultant gratification and enjoyment which it may be hoped will become universal and comparatively free from the qualifying and counter-acting experiences which raise the question whether they are worth while. To the whither there is an answer, whereas it is final or not. We and all the generations yet unborn are bound for a quiet resting place in the simple and serene sleep the teeming myriads who have gone before.

In regard to the whence men have speculated and disputed from the first, and various theories were evolved, those of the Orient being more subtle and philosophical than our Western ones, where it has been a fundam. doctrine that, however the material universe may have been constituted, the origin of life was due to a distinct creative fiat and act of the Almighty. Just what life is it is difficult to say. It appears to be traced back, as far as we have been able to go, to the power in its lowest form, inherent in or communicated to a germ cell infinitesimally small to appropriate to itself, absorb and assimilate matter and matter about it, and to grow and develop into higher forms. The question of its origin, which, except to a few bold heretical thinkers, was considered as finally settled by the claims of religion and the decrees of theology, was revived by the followers of Darwin and has been kept constantly alive since. Spontaneous generation was suggested, thoroughly tested by Huxley and abandoned. Still the scientists kept on delving and exploring, and finally one of them succeeded, it is claimed, in artificially fertilizing the egg of a simple form of marine life, which was a long step in advance, but did not tell us how the life came to be.

Now the claim has been put forward by the President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in his opening address at its recent meeting, that life is a chemical phenomenon, that it is a chemical process, a same fixed laws of evolution which have been followed in building up the universe in which we live and of which we are a part.

Heretofore has been advanced the view as the most philosophical and most consonant with reason and ascertained fact that the fiery vapor which, slowly concentrating and cooling, formed the terrestrial globe on which it dwelt, contained the potentiality of everything that has since appeared in it or upon it, just as wrapped up in the little seed vesicle is the wondrous beauty and fragrance of the rose. If the British scientist is correct—and he does not claim to have established his theory by irrefragable evidence—life began with a single cell from the first, and advanced through myriads of differentiations and millions of ages, not per saltum, which is not Nature's way, but very slowly, step by a step, up to man. The putting forward of such a theory or its establishment should not be a cause of apprehension or alarm to the biologists. It is merely a question of method. That life had a very simple beginning very far back many admit. That it was of chemical origin does not explain it or account for it or derogate in any way from the power that produced it. The wonder and mystery of a man, with all his faculties, going back to a chemically formed cell, is just as great as though he had been instantaneously spoken into existence complete as Adam. In either case there must have been a great, intelligent formative power back of him.

We should not be afraid of the truth, nor try to prevent it from coming to the light. What is truth can harm no one and ought to be welcomed by every one. The chemical theory of life may not be true. It is a case for suspended judgment. But it should not be denounced as infidel doctrine. Those who assume that attitude are liable to find themselves in the unenviable position of the persecutors of Galileo and Bruno.—Enquirer.

The Danger After Grip lies often in a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The great need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. It should not be denied as infidel doctrine. Those who assume that attitude are liable to find themselves in the unenviable position of the persecutors of Galileo and Bruno.—Enquirer.

Prevention of Diphtheria.

To the Health Officials, Physicians and People of Kentucky: The unusual prevalence of diphtheria in many sections of the State makes it the duty of this Board to again call attention to the best known methods of preventing the occurrence and spread of this disease.

1. Diphtheria is both contagious, and is distinctly a preventable disease, being easily limited to the first case or cases. When it gets away from the primary cases and makes its escape upon the community somebody is to blame. The sooner we accept this as a sanitary maxim the sooner we shall begin to do our duties as individuals and communities.

2. On account of its frequency and fatality this disease is of far more importance to the people of Kentucky than smallpox, yellow fever or cholera.

3. When a child has sore throat, and especially if diphtheria is in the neighborhood, it should be immediately separated from other children until a competent physician has seen it and decided whether or not it is affected with a contagious disease.

4. If diphtheria, strictly isolate the case at once, in an up stairs room if possible, and as disconnected as practicable from the living and sleeping apartments of other children. No one except the physician and nurse should enter the room, and they should take every precaution not to carry the infection to others.

5. The board urges the hygienic use of a standard antitoxin, such as Alexander's in at least 5,000-unit doses, as soon as the disease is recognized or seriously suspected, and that this dose should be repeated or doubled within twelve hours unless marked improvement has taken place. If cases are seen after the first twenty-four hours use from 7 to 25,000 units the first dose, depending upon the severity. It recommends that immunizing doses of 1,000 units be used for all children, and especially for all inexperienced relatives acting as nurses who have been seriously exposed.

6. Placard the house, and keep all other children, all having the care of children, and all who go where children are, away from it. Notify the health officer of the town or county within twenty-four hours, as the law requires, and he will co-operate with the physician and family to keep the disease from spreading.

7. The discharges from the mouth and nose, which especially contain the germs of the disease, should be received on soft cloths and burned, and other discharges should be disinfected, and all refuse from the sick room burned. All utensils used in feeding the sick should be washed separately from other dishes, and should remain some time in boiling water.

8. Disinfect all bed and body clothing, and other like things, as soon as removed, by immersion for at least six hours in a solution of chloride of lime, four ounces to the gallon of water. They may then be wrung out and put in the wash. Remember, however, that no disinfectant in the sick room can do away with the necessity for abundant fresh air and sunlight.

9. The isolation of the patient should continue for ten days after all trace of the disease has disappeared, and until he has had a disinfecting bath and been clad in garments which have not been in the sick room. No person from a house where there is diphtheria should be permitted to go into public assemblies, and no child from a house where this disease has prevailed should be allowed to attend school without a certificate from the health officer that it is safe to do so.

10. After complete recovery, or death, always thoroughly disinfect the room and its contents, preferably with nascent formaldehyde, or where this is not available, by burning 3 pounds of sulphur, moistened with alcohol, for each 1,000 cubic feet of space, previously stopping all openings and dampening the floor, bedding and clothing and leaving the room tightly closed for 12 hours. The room should then be thoroughly ventilated, and all ledges, woodwork, etc., washed with strong soap and rinsed with a disinfecting solution.

Faithful Workers.

The department of agriculture has on its rolls 33,000 employees who do not receive a cent of salary. These are the crop reporters who have volunteered to furnish the department with monthly reports on the crop conditions in their localities—they make the reporting system of the agricultural department the best in the world. There are nearly 8,000 regular country correspondents and nearly 30,000 township correspondents, whose reports form the basis of the department's statistics. Four of these correspondents have been steadily at work for 50 years and more than 100 of them have been working regular reports for 35 years. When a man will work steadily, year in and year out, without receiving a cent of pay he certainly deserves some recognition from the nation and it has been suggested that the four veteran correspondents ought at least to be voted the thanks of Congress.

If you have young children you have perhaps noticed that disorders of the stomach are their most common ailment. To correct this you will find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets excellent. They are easy and pleasant to take and will aid and relieve in effect. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

STATE NEWS.

The State prison at Frankfort has been designated as a Reformatory and the prison at Eddyville as Penitentiary.

Mayeville.—A petition is being circulated in this county calling for election on the liquor question and is being numerously signed. The election will probably be held next spring.

Henderson.—S. H. Kimmel, who has appointed county road engineer by Judge S. A. Young, under the new law, qualified today by executing bond. The Fiscal Court fixed his salary at $2,200 a year.

Munfordsville.—Clarence Burd accidentally shot and wounded Harkins, son of Wm. Harkins, near Lonoke, while hunting. Burd saw the bushes moving and supposing it to be a squirrel fired, leaving several shot in Harkins' body.

Owensboro.—There are numerous cases of diphtheria in Owensboro and the surrounding country, and in many instances it is proving fatal. Some of the county schools have been forced to close on account of the disease.

Henderson.—A judgment was handed down by Judge Henson in the Circuit Court in favor of the plaintiff in the case of the city of Henderson against Henry Kraver for about $7,500 for back taxes for five years on a stock of liquor which includes the regular tax penalty of 10 per cent, and interest of 8 per cent.

Mt. Sterling.—400 head of export cattle have just been bought from the Bigstaff estate by Chas. McDonald, buyer for the S. & S. Company, of New York. The cattle will weigh 1,450 pounds each and brought in the neighborhood of 75 cents a pound. It is the biggest sale in one bunch made in Central Kentucky this year. The cattle will be shipped in November.

Carlisle.—An order issued by the Board of Health directs the reopening of all schools in Nicholas county which were closed by the board because of diphtheria, provided the disease no longer exists among the pupils. The schools were closed in the western section of the county, where there was an epidemic. No new cases have been reported.

Carlisle.—Carlisle's new city hall and city building, which has been under construction here during the summer, is nearing completion, and the fire department is moving into its new quarters. The new building, which has been erected of pressed brick and Bedford stone at a cost of $10,000, is one of the modern in this section, and is located opposite the Nicholas county courthouse.

Frankfort.—After being out one minute, a jury returned a verdict in favor of the 38 defendants in the $50,000 night rider damage suit of C. H. Crouch against Mark Connelly and others, of Owen county. The defendants published an affidavit charging Crouch with a malicious falsehood in his statement that Poplar Grove Union of the Society of Equity had passed a resolution to burn barns, whip nonpayers and commit other outrages.

Henderson.—The district board of the Stemming Tobacco Association, embracing the counties of Henderson, Union, Webster, Hopkins and Crittenden after canvassing the vote, announced that 75 per cent of the crop has been pledged and that accordingly the pool will be continued. The time for closing the books has been extended to October 20th. Strong efforts have been made this year to get the tobacco growers' organizations have been formed, and many who have been members refuse to pool again.

Shelbyville.—A verdict of $5,000 was returned this afternoon in favor of Mrs. Lizzie M. Johns against the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Company in a suit based on the death of her husband, Thomas Johns, a fireman for the Louisville & Nashville, who was killed in the Long Run wreck on January 16. The attorneys for the defense company admitted negligence and admitted the case to the jury at the conclusion of the testimony for the plaintiff. This is said to be the largest verdict returned in a similar case in this State. An appeal will be taken on the ground of excessive damages.

Richmond Pantagraph. When the 1910 census figures showed that forty Kentucky counties were straggling out across the Bluegrass region had lost in population, although every county seat had gained, people wondered why it was. One explanation or cause seems to be that farms are being consolidated into large boundaries. In Fayette, the heart of the Bluegrass, there are vast estates. James Haggins, of New York, has 10,000 acres in his Elmendorf stock farm. L. V. Harkness owns 4,000 acres, David M. Look, 1,072 acres, W. E. D. Stokes 550 acres, Rankin Clemmens 6,200 acres, J. H. Graves 4,000 acres, John E. Madden 2,000 acres, Clarence LeBus 800 acres. And these are not all of the large estates.

Here's The Plumb Bob

It's just another proof that Tubular Cream Separators are just up to the minute—miles ahead of any other. No other machine has it.

What's It For?

It enables you to level the Sharples Dairy Tubular Cream Separator in a minute—quicker than you could find the spirit level you must use to level all other separators. A glance at the plumb bob, hanging there on the back of the Tubular, will always tell you whether the Tubular remains level. In that way you get the very best work out of the Tubular, for all Separators should be kept level to do their best work.

Tubulars have dozens of exclusive fine points and are sold on the level. Bring the wife in. See how simple, perfect and different from others Tubulars are.

FARMERS INSTITUTE.

Five Splendid Lecturers Will instruct The Farmers of Boone County

Next Wednesday and Thursday.

Sixty or more farmers of Boone county have petitioned the Commissioner of Agriculture to hold an Institute at Burlington and have pledged themselves to attend. The attendance at these Institutes has never been what it ought to be, the interest has been increasing in recent years. This year the best talent will be here that was ever sent to Boone county. Only a limited number of counties in the State will have the Institutes this year, the available funds being used to make those that are held, as good as possible. Boone is one of the favored counties.

Farmers do not allow this excellent opportunity to pass you by. The problem that confronts us as an agricultural people will be discussed. These things mean better crops, better farms, better stock, more money in your pocket. They mean more business like methods and improved conditions in many ways.

Come to the Institute October 16th and 17th at the school building. Ladies invited.

This is a repetition of the Grown-up Day had last year, but on a larger scale. Bring your dinners and be school boys and school girls again for two days.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Raft Again.

Yancy and Cavendish threw themselves on the sweeps and worked the raft clear of the keel boat, thus the turbulent current seized the smaller craft and whirled it away into the night; as its black bulk receded from before his eyes the Earl of Lambeth spoke with the voice of authority and experience.

"It was a good fight and them fellows done well, but not near well enough." A conclusion that could not be gainsaid. He added, "No one ain't but them that had ought to have got hurt. Mr. Yancy's all right, and so's Mr. Carrington—who's mighty welcome here." The earl's shock of red hair was bristling like the mane of some angry animal and his eyes still flashed with the light of battle, but he managed to summon up an expression of winning friendliness.

"Mr. Carrington's kin to me, Polly," explained Yancy to Mrs. Cavendish. His voice was far from steady, for Hannibal had been gathered into his arms and had all but wrecked the stolid calm with which the Scratch Hiller was seeking to guard his emotions.

Polly smiled and dimpled at the Kentuckian. Trained to a romantic point of view she had a frank liking for handsome, stalwart men. Cavendish was neither, but none knew better than Polly that where he was most lacking in appearance he was richest in substance. He carried scars honorably earned in those differences he had been prone to cultivate with less generous natures; for his scheme of life did not embrace the millennium.

"Thank God, you got here when you wanted," said Carrington.

"We was some pushed for time, but we done it," responded the earl modestly. He added, "What now?—do we make a landing?"

"No—unless it interferes with your plans not to. I want to get around the next bend before we tie up. Later we'll all go back. Can I count on you?"

"You shorly can. I consider this here as sociable a neighborhood as I ever struck. It pleases me well. Folks are up and doing hereabout."

Carrington looked eagerly around in search of Betty. She was sitting on an upturned tub, a pathetic enough figure as she drooped against the side of one of the shanties with all her courage quite gone from her. He made his way quickly to her side.

"Lal!" whispered Polly in Chillis and Feyer's ear. "If that pore young thing yonder keeps a widow it won't be because of any encouragement she gets from Mr. Carrington. If I ever seen marriage in a man's eye I seen it in his this minute!"

"Bruce!" cried Betty, starting up as Carrington approached. "Oh, Bruce, I am so glad you have come—you are not hurt?" She accepted his presence without question. She had needed him and he had not failed her.

"We are none of us hurt, Betty," he said gently, as he took her hand.

He saw that the suffering she had undergone during the preceding twenty-four hours had left its record on her dried face and in her heavy eyes. She retained a shuddering con-

The keel boat had merged into the gloom.

"No, no—but we can't get the raft back upstream against the current, so the best thing is to land at the Bates' plantation below here; then as soon as you are able we can return to Belle Plain," said Carrington.

There was an interval broken only by the occasional sweep of the great steering oar as Cavendish coaxed the raft on toward the channel. The thought of Charlie Norton's murder rested on Carrington like a pall. Scarcely a week had elapsed since he quitted Thicket Point, and in that week the hand of death had dealt with them impartially, and to what end? Then the miles he had traversed in his hopeless journey up-river translated themselves into a division of time as well as space. They were just as much further removed from the past with its blight of tragic terror. He turned and glanced at Betty. He saw that she held their steady look of wistful plea that was for the dead man; yet in spite of this, and in spite of the bounds beyond which he would not let his imagination carry him, the future, enriched with sudden promise, unfolded itself. The deep sea of recovered hope spread within him. He knew that there must come a day when he would dare to speak of his love, and she would listen.

"It's best we should land at Bates' place—we can get teams there," he went on to explain. "And, Betty, wherever we go we'll go together, hand in hand. Carrington doesn't look as if he had any very urgent business of his own, and I reckon the same is true of Yancy, so I am going to keep them with us. There are some points to be cleared up when we reach Belle Plain—some folks who'll have a lot to explain about the death of the state's attorney. And I intend to see that you are not left alone until—I have the right to take care of you for good and all—that's what you want me to do one of these days, isn't it, darling?" and his eyes, glowing and infinitely tender, dwelt on her upturned face.

But Betty shrank from him in involuntary agitation.

"Oh, not now, Bruce—not now—we mustn't speak of that—it's wrong—it's wicked—you mustn't make me forget him!" she cried brokenly, in protest.

"Forgive me, Betty, I'll not speak of it again," he said.

"Wait, Bruce, and some time—Oh, don't make me say it," she whispered, "or I shall hate myself!" for in his presence she was feeling the horror of her past experience grow strangely remote, only the dull ache of her memories remained, and to these she clung. They were silent for a moment, then Carrington said:

"After I'm sure you'll be safe here, perhaps I'll go south into the Choctaw Purchase. I've been thinking of that recently; but I'll find my way back here—don't misunderstand me—I'll not come too soon for even you, Betty. I loved Norton. He was one of my best friends."

"But you know—and I know—dear, the day will come when no matter where you are I shall find you and not lose you!"

Betty made no answer in words, but a soft and eloquent little hand was slipped into his and allowed, to rest there.

Presently a light wind stirred the dead dense atmosphere, the mist lifted and enveloped the shore, showing them the river between piled-up masses of vapor. Apparently it ran for the first time since Carrington had looked upon such another night, but this was a different world the gray fog was unmasking—a world of hopes and dreams, and rich content. Then the thought of Norton—poor Norton—who had had his world, too, of hopes and dreams, and such content.

The calm of a highly domestic existence had resumed its interrupted sway on the raft. Mr. Cavendish, associated in Betty's memory with certain ear-splitting manifestations of ferocious rage, became in the bosom of his family low-voiced and gentle and hopelessly impotent to deal with his five small sons; while Yancy was again the Bob Yancy of Scratch Hill, violence of any sort apparently had no place in his nature. He was deeply absorbed in Hannibal's account of those vicissitudes and cast his eyes on him during their separation. They were now seated before a cheerful fire that blazed on the hearth, the boy very close to Yancy, with one hand clasped in the Scratch Hiller's, while about them were ranged the six small Cavendishes sedately sharing in the reunion of uncle and nephew, toward which they felt they had honorably labored.

"And you wasn't dead, Uncle Bob?" said Hannibal with a deep breath, viewing Yancy unmistakably in the flesh.

"Never once. I been floating peacefully along with these here titled friends of mine; but I was some anxious about you, son."

"Add Mr. Slosson, Uncle Bob—did you smack him like you smacked Dave Blount that day when he tried to steal my money and smothered my childish sense of justice demanded reparation for the wrongs they had suffered."

Mr. Yancy extended a big right hand, the knuckle of which was skinned and bruised.

"He weren't no bad man I ever felt obliged to hit with my fist, Nevvy; it appeared like he had teeth all over his face."

"Sho'—where's his hide, Uncle Bob?" cried the little Cavendishes in an excited chorus. "Sho'—did you for-allusion to Slosson had revived their memory of it.

"We he begged so piteous to be allowed to keep his hide, I hadn't the heart to strip it off," explained Mr. Yancy pleasantly. "And the winter's comin'—at this moment I can feel a chill in the air—don't you all reckon he's going to 'fo' to keep the cold out? Sho', you mustn't be bloody-minded!"

"What was 'it about Mr. Slosson's hide, Uncle Bob?" demanded Hannibal. "What was you agoin' to do to that?"

"Why, Nevvy, after he beat me up and throwed me in the river, I was some peevish 'fo' a spell in my feelings for him," said Yancy in a tone of gentle regret. He glanced at his bruised hand. "But I'm right pleased to be able to say that I've got over all them uncharitable thoughts of mine."

"And you seen the Judge, Uncle Bob?" questioned Hannibal.

"Yes, I've seen the Judge. We was together for part of a day. Me and him gets on fine."

"Where is he now, Uncle Bob?"

"I reckon he's back at Belle Plain by this time. You see we left him in Raleigh along after noon to 'tend to some business," said Yancy, and he never seen a gentleman of his weight so truly spry on his legs—and all about you, Nevvy; while as to mind! Sho'—why, words fowed out of him as naturally as water out of a branch."

Of Hannibal's relationship to the Judge he said nothing. He felt that was a secret to be revealed by the judge himself when he should see fit.

"Uncle Bob, who'm I going to live with now?" questioned Hannibal anxiously.

"That pint's already come up, Nevvy—him and me's decided that there won't be no friction. You-all will just go on living with him."

"But, wha' about you, Uncle Bob?" cried Hannibal, lifting a wistful little face to Yancy's.

"Oh, me?—well, you-all will go right on living with me."

"And what will come of Mr. Mah-hay?"

"I reckon you-all will go right on living with him, too."

"Uncle Bob, you mean you reckon we all are going to live in one house?"

"I fow it will have to be fixed that-a-ways," agreed Yancy.

Continued

The Cut-Out Proposition.

There is beginning to be talked especially in Owen and Woodford counties, a proposition to "cut-out" the 1913 tobacco crop. If the growers conclude to raise no tobacco, and do not raise any, they are within the rights. Co-operation and organization for the benefit of any class of producers is a privilege that the law accords to everybody. Those who determine to cut out must remember, however, that the grower who declines to do so and goes ahead and raises a crop is within his rights, and is entitled to protection under the law, from coercion or damage from those who see the matter in a different light.

Experience has taught that the independent growers, the men who did not cut out or go into the pool, "got the grapes" while the men who did cut out and went into the pool had to hold. We have no disposition to advise against a cut-out, if the growers are unanimously in favor of it. It is lawless and coercion that we fear in the event efforts are made to influence the growers, generally, not to raise a crop next year.

Stand for your rights, but accord the same privilege to every other man. "Cut out" the 1913 crop, so far as you are concerned individually, or as an organization, if you please, but if you come across men who decline to agree with your views, recognize their rights. Advise with them, argue with them, plead with them, but don't try to force them. The Lord knows and so does every man that the tobacco troubles of the past cost Kentucky more in money and reputation than all the tobacco grown in the State for tobacco grown in the State for a number of years would be worth. To organize or to cooperate is right. Coercion and lawlessness is wrong.—Sheiby Record.

(Winchester Democrat.)

Mr. Monte Fox, of Danville, one of the best cattle buyers in the Bluegrass section, was in Winchester a short while a few days ago and commented on the great falling off to Clark county's quantity and quality of cattle. Mr. Fox said that the only reason he could give was that the Bluegrass crop had proven a better investment. He said the counties in the Bluegrass, that a few years ago held the topnotches in fat cattle, were going back, and instead of buying the best quality of stuff and finishing it right the scrubs were being purchased, with the result, that high prices were not forthcoming in this section any more.

Put's End To Bad Habit.

Things look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a sluggish liver, filling the system with bilious poison, that Dr. King's New Life Pills would cure. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end "the blues." Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. 25c at all dealers. (Advertisement.)

sciousness of the unchecked savagery of those last moments on the keel boat; she was still hearing the oaths of the men as they struggled together, the sound of blows, and the dreadful silences that had followed them. She turned from him, and there came the relief of tears.

"There, Betty, the danger is over now and you were so brave while it lasted. I can't bear to have you cry!"

"I was wild with fear—all that time on the boat, Bruce," she faltered between her sobs. "I didn't know but they would find you out. I could only wait and hope—and pray!"

"I was in no danger, dear. Didn't the girl tell you I was to take the place of a man Slosson was expecting? He never doubted that I was that man until a light—a signal it must have been—on the shore at the head of the bayou betrayed me."

"Where are we going now, Bruce? Not the way they want—"

And Betty slipped out into the black void where Protect Your Friends.

The birds are the best friends that the farmer has. Why? Because they labor daily in the fields, destroying the insects that destroy or feed upon the tender plants of the fields. Have you a friend that will labor in your fields daily destroying these insects just for his board and clothing? No, indeed; you cannot place your eye upon but one friend that will do this for you. That is the little birds which are being slaughtered by you in large numbers. Why do you not try to protect these friends who are so faithful to you, when they ask you for no pay for services rendered you in your fields, destroying insects that injure your plants, simply ought to. Do you realize that they are worth hundreds of times more to you as insect destroyers because you have not stopped to think over the matter as you than their flesh in worth to you in a bird pie or in some other way?

Farmers, it is time to wake up to the fact that these little friends must have better protection. Why? Because they are needed more and more every year. As people increase and the clearing of more lands increases, the insects are bound to increase very rapidly, because they feed mostly from the farmers' fields. As insects increase, why should not the birds increase also? Simply because they haven't had the protection that they ought to have had. Some of the species of birds that used to be found in large numbers are now very scarce. They have not received any mercy from the hunter, and because the laws are not strict enough on this one special thing.

Every farmer should feel it his duty to urge his lawmaker to do all in his power to pass a law that would give his little friends in feathers better protection. A law should be passed in states having no such law, prohibiting the killing of these birds under a heavy penalty and imprisonment for violation thereof. If this were done, you would see a great improvement in crops and fewer insects. Good enforcement depends largely on farmers.

New Postage Stamps.

When the new parcels post system becomes operative Jan. 1, 1912 new stamps will be placed on sale in postoffices for affixing to packages. These stamps will be larger than the ordinary postage stamps. Arrangements already made by Postmaster General Hitchcock for their engraving and manufacturing provide for a series of an even dozen to distinctive as to color and size as to prevent possible confusion with other stamps.

"The 12 stamps will be issued in three series or designs. In the first series modern methods of transporting mail will be illustrated. The mail car of a railway train will be shown on another; an ocean steamer on another; the third will have a motor wagon on the type used in the Postal Service, and the fourth will show a mail-carrying aeroplane. Postal employees will be shown at work in the second series. The figures will be those of railway mail clerks, postoffice clerks, city letter carriers and rural free delivery carriers. The third series will represent four industrial zones, showing the principal sources of products that will be transported most extensively by parcels post.

By December 1st the stamps will probably be ready for distribution to the 50,000 postoffices in the country.

America May Feed Europe.

In all probability America will be required to feed Europe this winter, according to Dr. L. O. Howard, Chief of the Bureau of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture, who has just returned to Washington after a two months absence. Dr. Howard said that one of the most striking features of his trip was the successive rains and floods that were damaging crops abroad. In England from Liverpool to London, he said, the country was a continual succession for lakes where grain fields should have been. In Germany the conditions were as bad or worse, in many cases the wheat heads sprouting on the stalks and the grains sending rootlets into the stems. Acres of wheat, rye, oats and barley are absolutely ruined. The conditions in France are not quite so bad, but the general European loss has been heavy.

Midway Clipper.

Thomas F. Dunlap & Son have just finished cutting a field of forty-five acres of corn, one-third of which had tons of stable manure fresh from the barn, not leached, and one-ton of phosphate to each acre of fifteen acres, or one-third of the field. That part of the field which had no fertilizers, they estimate, will yield five barrels less to the acre than the other third. They also made the same application to ten acres of tobacco land with fine results.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. It is not better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. K. Kelly (Advertisement.)

The best feed for laying hens is said to be meat scraps and sprouted oats. Oats are cheap now and a supply should be laid in for winter use.

Typhoid Fever.

Typhoid fever is an infectious disease caused by the typhoid bacillus which, entering the body in food stuff, passes through the stomach into the intestines. Here it grows and, when an opportunity presents itself, passes through the intestinal wall into the blood stream by which it is carried to all parts of the body. In this way, the entire body of the typhoid patient is teeming with typhoid germs. All of the excreta, such as saliva, vomitus, urine, and feces contain typhoid germs.

The infected excreta is the means for carrying typhoid germs from the patient to the outside world. In the excreta typhoid germs live from a few days to several months. Freezing retards their growth but does not kill them. Sunlight kills the germ only when the germs are directly exposed to the light. In the dried excreta, germs may live from one to two months. Owing to the resistance of germs in excreta to cold and dryness, the excreta becomes a menace to the family of the patient to the neighbors, and to the community.

Back to the Farm.

"Back to the Farm" will solve the high cost of living of which general complaint is being heard all over the country. We find it so right here in Central Kentucky. For nearly a third of a century the cities have been growing at the expense of the rural districts. Every time a man and his family move to town the number of consumers increase and the number of producers decrease. The lure and glare of the cities have enticed the boys from the farm and farm labor is scarce. More men are needed in the country to grow crops and work upon the farm. Never in history of the country were money making opportunities more plentiful than in the rural districts. City life is unsatisfactory to him or her whose younger days were spent upon the farm. The smoke, the noise, the dust, and confusion and hub-bub of the street car and vehicle in endless number grate upon their nerves and they yearn for the seclusion the quietude, the fresh air, sunshine and exercise of the hill-side and valley and the rest and retreat of shade tree and lawn. "Back to the Farm," where the

Don't Strip Tobacco too Early.

The Lexington Tobacco Association in a letter to the growers says:

In view of the fact that for several years past there has been a good deal of tobacco stripped and offered too early and for the welfare of the farmers that they may get the full value of their labor we wish to call attention to the following:

First do not strip your tobacco until the stems are thoroughly spritzed with water. If it is made it impossible to dry and also prevents its selling for its full value.

Second, under no circumstances spritz tobacco to make it case, it injures it and prevents it being dried through a drier and forces the selling price down far below its real worth.

Third, be careful to strip your tobacco and grade it so that each hand will contain only leaves of the uniform grade and color. Fourth, do not tie the hands too large so that they can be dried out in going through the drier and be sure to have the hands tied tightly so that the leaves will not drop out.

Almost A Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Texas, was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 150 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results. Its quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. The pretty bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodford R. Miller, and is an very excellent young lady of many attractive qualities. The young couple will probably make their home at Lexington, where the groom is employed. The best wishes of many friends are tendered the happy young couple.

Last Monday a very sad accident occurred at the Rice farm owned by Wm. L. Johnson, where by W. Dulaney Johnson had a large part of his foot cut off in an ensilage cutter, and may be a cripple for life. He, with some others, was busy filling a silo and in cutting up the ensilage he endeavored to push in with his foot part of the accumulated corn stalks and missed a nail which and the fore part of his foot came in contact with the rapidly revolving knives propelled by steam power, and in an instant four of his toes were cut off and the foot badly lacerated. Drs. G. C. Rankins and A. N. Jones were summoned by telephone and dressed the wound and advised John to bring as well as could be expected. He is the youngest son of Wm. Lee Johnson, and a very fine young man, and his misfortune is greatly regretted by his large circle of friends.

PLAN CUT OUT 1913 TOBACCO

Organization Formed in Kentucky To Increase Price Of Tobacco

APPEAL TO OTHER STATES

To Co-operate With Growers of Kentucky in Their Effort to Obtain Living Prices for the Product of their Land and Labor.

An Appeal to Farmers:

On October 1st, there met in the Phoenix Hotel, Lexington, Ky., a small band of farmers from less than a dozen counties. They met for the purpose of discussing a cut out of the 1913 tobacco crop.

On account of the busy season many large producing counties were not represented, but several of them sent encouraging messages. After due deliberation it was agreed to organize the "Burly Protective Society" and to push the cut out movement for all it is worth.

Mass conventions were advised for the various counties on Saturday, October 12, and a general convention of the growers at Lexington, Ky., was ordered for Wednesday, October 16th. The county mass conventions are to select delegates to represent them at the general convention on the 16th.

A committee, composed of representatives from Bath, Franklin, Scott and Owen counties, was selected for the purpose of preparing "An Appeal" to growers, and the following is the result of their labors:

An Appeal To Farmers.

Never since the tobacco question became an acute issue has the situation presented a more serious or menacing front to growers than the one they are now facing. For the first time since 1906 the farmers are wholly unorganized. A pool, for the present, is out of the question. Single handed and alone they must face the enemy, combined, tactful and greedy, and incensed by the highest law of the land to continue their game of wolf while dressed in the garb of sheep.

There is no protection for the farmer other than that which he himself provides. Although he is numbered by the tens of thousands, and the buyers can be numbered by the fingers on one hand, yet this mighty host must bow in humble submission before the mighty oligarchy, and accept the crumbs from its hands.

If the market were free and competitive, if the law of supply and demand had not been suspended by the trust arbitrarily fixing prices, the growers could have some reasonable assurance of a fair dealing and living prices. But there is no such market, and the law of supply and demand is nothing but a shadow.

Let us look the facts squarely in the face. Here are just a few:

The 1905 crop averaged less than 7 cents.

In 1906 first pool organized.

In 1907, over 62,000,000 pounds added to first pool.

In 1908, crop practically cut out.

In November, 1908, Burley Tobacco Society sells its entire holdings at 17 cents. Mind you, this was after the cut out of that year.

In 1909, over 100,000 pounds pooled—more than both pools of 1908 and 1907.

In 1910 and 1911, two crops grown and neither pooled. Average sale price to growers in 1909, 7 1/2 cents; in 1910, 7 cents; in 1911, about 7 1/2 cents.

In 1910, when the pooling movement was hanging in the balances, representatives of the trust and warehouses killed it dead as a mackerel by paying 12 to 14 cents to certain large growers and wealthy land owners scattered throughout the Blue Grass section.

Immediately following the failure of the 1910 pool, the American Tobacco company publicly proclaimed its determination to buy the crop at 8 cents. History shows that it made its word good, with an extra cent added to the profit side of its ledger. In the suit of the Eshelby Tobacco company against the Burley Tobacco Society, it alleges that burley tobacco is only worth 8 cents a pound, and in that suit it asked that the society be compelled to refund the difference between 8 cents and 17 cents. These declarations on the part of the manufacturers show clearly their purpose and determination to make 8 cents the maximum figure. They are willing to pay the growers, but a certain amount of business acumen (aided possibly by innate selfishness) has so far prevented them from naming a minimum price they are willing to pay, and which they frequently pay, for this same tobacco.

There is not an intelligent, well-to-do farmer in this state who is willing to grow tobacco at such prices, and under such conditions as above set out. It costs more to grow it now than it did ten years ago. Lands, labor and all material that figure in the growing of tobacco have advanced during that period from 50 to 100 per cent. The price of everything we eat and wear has increased in like proportions. If 7 and 8 cents were living prices ten years ago (and they were not) then 14 to 16 cents is not too much to demand now. Farmers must get some thing like this if they expect to prosper.

But the one thing which this committee desires to impress on the growers is the importance of organization.

However plain the facts, nothing can be accomplished without it. In our judgment, the only thing for us to do now is to urge a cut out of the next crop. We know positively that it was the cut out of 1908 that saved the fight of the growers against the trust. We knew it was the cut out that made us a price 17 cents, and we know there is a vast difference between 7 cent tobacco and 17 cent tobacco. We know there is more clear profit in one cop at 14 cents, than there is in three crops at 8, or even 9 cents, for we firmly believe that these figures mean an actual loss to both tenants and landlords.

We have faith in the good sense and patriotism of the people, and make an earnest appeal for due and careful consideration of this question.

We also realize that the work must be done speedily in order to thwart our enemies, who, if this movement grows in popular favor, will again send their agents into the field to pay handsome prices to a favored few, and thus null the majority into a hopeful but false confidence that they too, will get this good price.

In order to arrive at the will of the people, we urge the people of each county to hold mass conventions on Saturday, October 12, and that they select delegates to attend the Lexington convention on Wednesday, October 16th.

If the movement does not gather sufficient strength by this date to indicate that a successful fight can be made, then we know of nothing further to suggest, and the growers must be left alone, each to fight his own battles.

Shipahod Road Work.

A Western Kentucky farmer, writing to his home paper, makes some animadversions on what he calls shipahod road work. He also inquires "if there is any good reason why all road work should not be made permanent, especially over the most important and most traveled roads?"

There probably is not a county in Kentucky but has suffered from inefficient work on the public highways. There is absolutely no reason why any county should not make some permanent improvement on its principal road or roads every year. This policy would not result in a good system of highways in any short space of time, but it would bring great betterment and eventually it would bring some good roads. More than that, the taxpayers would get some returns for their money and would have visible evidence that it was not utterly wasted.

The repairing of dirt roads is an endless performance. It goes on year after year with little, if any, change for the better in the condition of the roads. In fact under the foolish process of mending dirt roads with dirt pure and simple many of them become worse instead of better and there is not the slightest hope of their becoming decent thoroughfares. There is no economy in shipahod road work, but there are many counties which know no other kind. The wonder is that the men who pay the taxes meekly submit to the unprogressive and unsystematic methods of road repair which characterize the average Fiscal Court. Large sums of money are collected and disbursed from year to year and the roads continue bad—or at best indifferent.

There are counties without a mile of permanent roadway and these counties have spent thousands of dollars year by year, some of them for a period that extends beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitant. It is eminently proper that taxpayers in such counties should inquire why some permanent work is not done, and if they are wise they will keep up the inquiry until the shipahod plan is abandoned or materially modified.—C. J.

Now Didn't I Tell Ye So.

Two fellows had been nattering and on their way home they had to pass a cemetery which was surrounded by a high stone fence. They thought this would be a good place to stop and divide the nuts, so they climbed over this high wall into the cemetery and in doing so they dropped a couple of nuts on the other side of the wall.

They sat down by the wall and opened the sack and began dividing them in two piles. "One for you and one for me," And so on. During their division of the nuts, an old Irishman passed the cemetery and he heard voices in the cemetery, so he sneaked up to the stone wall and sure enough he heard them say "One for you and one for me; one for you and one for me."

This frightened poor old Pat and he started on a dead run toward home. He met his pal, Mike, on the road, and he said, "Mike, just as I was coming past the cemetery, I heard the Lord and the Devil dividing up the dead." Mike said, "Begorry Pat, you're either drinking too hard or you're dreaming."

"No sor," said Pat, come along and hear with your own ears. So they went back and crawled up close to the wall and the two fellows were still dividing their nuts, "One for you and one for me; one for you and one for me, and as they got the last nut in the sack, one of them said, 'What shall we do with the two on the other side of the fence.'"

To this Pat and Mike jumped up and ran and Pat said, Now didn't I tell ye so?

Better Get Busy.

Young ladies, bachelor girls and widows, if you want one you had better get busy and try to catch him—Leap Year is fast ebbing away. If you don't run one down within the next three months then it will be your prerogative to "pop the question" until 1916—and four years more added to your other summons will make a year in which some of you have "trotted in single harness"—that is, it will no doubt seem ages to you.

Work Like A Dog.

You have heard people say that they had worked like a dog all day. If this were literally true, the twenty-four hours would be spent thus. One hour digging out a rat, two hours gnawing a bone, one hour waiting for a cat to come down out of a tree, half an hour begging to get into the house, and the rest of sleeping on a mat in front of the door fighting fleas.

Poultry Feeds.

It has often been said, and quite a lot of truth in this, that a chicken will eat anything. It is true that a half starved chick is a regular scavenger, it will eat anything in the shape of food, and quite a lot just to fill in, whenever it has the chance, but of course, your chicks are not half, nor anything like starved; they don't pay at all when so kept and we all know it.

Upon analysis it has been proven that fresh, green bone furnishes the most perfectly balanced feed for both egg formation and chick growth. Note the green or fresh bone, and the freshly ground. If allowed to become dry much of the nutrition is lost.

Then it would seem if enough of the freshly cut bone were fed no other feed would be necessary, perhaps not for the eggs and growth, but for health there must be good sweet grain, good green food and grit.

Again, too much of the bone, meat or other animal food will affect the health of the chicks when fed any length of time, so unless giving for a limited time do not give too much of the good thing.

There is more danger of farmers or villagers not giving enough than there is of giving too much on account of the impossibility of securing the fresh bones in sufficient quantities, but some enthusiastic dwellers in the outskirts of larger towns might, through too generous a ration of fresh bone or meat.

Sunflower seed, cowpeas, linseed meal, or other oily feeds are all good, but are no safe to feed too generously or when fed exclusively. Give them to the chicks as careful parents feed very rich pies and puddings to their children only occasionally.

The grains raised on the farm form a safe, and fairly generous ration: corn for fat and heat, oats wheat, bran and middlings for eggs, with an occasional dash of barley and rye; when given as a mixture, and if plenty of fresh skim milk is at hand and care is taken to furnish fresh greens, grit and oyster shells, we need not worry about not giving the fresh bone and meat as a regular meal. There will be a reasonably fewer eggs, but the hens will not get "off" so quickly and will furnish eggs containing stronger germs.

Allow the hens the run of garden and orchard and soon frost destroys the tender growths. They may take some toll from late tomatoes or tender cabbages, but the advantage of worms and insects eggs and weed seed they will consume will more than offset other loss.

The extra range will be good for the hens in more ways than one. Turn them loose in the berry patches, except in the strawberries, their scratching will do more good than harm. Then the mud, or winter blank of manure, applied later, will have a better chance to sink into the soil near the roots of the bushes.—E. C. in Indiana Farmer.

Wetting Down the Ensilage.

One of the best things to do to a well filled silo, according to Hoard's "Dairyman," is to pour on an abundance of water right after filling. This was discovered some years ago by Gen. A. G. W. Burchard. He had just filled a new silo but had not time to put on the roof when a heavy rain fell. Before the silo could be roofed over, three such rain storms had descended upon it. It was wet down "good and plenty," as the saying goes. Mr. Burchard had some misgivings about the effect of so much water on his ensilage. But he was greatly astonished when he commenced to feed from it to find only a thin layer of spoiled ensilage about two inches thick. What was more, there was not an unsound spot anywhere in the ensilage to the bottom.

The next year the senior editor of the "Dairyman" took the hint and deluged the top of his ensilage right after filling with about thirty barrels of water. Here again the layer of spoiled ensilage was very slight, less than two inches thick.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guaranteed by all dealers. (Advertisement.)

Burley Tobacco Growers Boost Your Own Brands

We, as you know, are using your choicest tobacco—in the brands of Strater Bros.' Branch, and you know that nobody grows better tobacco than you do. You know how we manufacture, so you know that these brands are perfection. Now we want you to help us sell these brands this year even better than our best previous years. The reasons you should so help are as follows:

You Are Part Owner
The fact that you grow the tobacco makes you part owner of all these brands. Every time that one sells you profit. Every word that you say in favor of any helps to increase those sales. Every brand that you buy for your own use helps make those profits better. All our interests—your interests and ours—are pooled in these several tobaccos. It is logic that you should bend all of your efforts, however small, in the selling.

Tell Every Friend
Tell your friends of these brands. Tell them what you know of the tobacco. Tell them you grow it and smoke and chew it yourself, so you know. Tell them it comes from Kentucky, from the center of the richest Burley sections. Let them know it's the cream of your crops and that they can buy these brands from most any dealer, because dealers know that these brands are the best they can buy.

The United Power of 40,000 Buyers
40,000 men in a section wield an enormous buying influence. If all ask for these brands when they buy tobacco there results a gigantic sale. And big sales are the best advertising known.

To Dealers! Dealers throughout the United States know these famous tobaccos. They are Nation-wide sellers—popular brands. They are helping them. Dealers to prosper. They are made from the pick of the famous crops of 40,000 growers. Every one of these growers is boosting them all. So are all of their friends. This method is bringing the profits to dealers—to those who sell these brands. Are they working for you? Here are the mild, fragrant smoking brands—GOLDEN GLOW—PENNY POST—FULL PAY. Here are the delicious chewing brands—INDEX—BY JOE TWIST—CUP—DAY'S WORK. ON THE SQUARE—TORCHLIGHT—STRATER'S NATURAL LEAF. Put them into your stock. See how they sell.

BUMPER CROPS.

All Crops Are of Suck Proportions as to Break Past Records.

The October crop report of the United States Department of Agriculture bears out previous estimates that have been made of the remarkable production of 1912. Nearly all the big cereal crops are of such proportions as to break past records. In several of the big wheat growing States the yield per acre of wheat has been doubled and in North Dakota it has increased from eight bushels last year to eighteen bushels this year. Spring wheat production is the largest ever reported, but the winter wheat crop is below that of the record year, 1906. The oat crop is bigger by nearly millions than ever before. Corn has made a new record, as has been the case with barley and rye.

The potato harvest is so large that it will scarcely be necessary to import potatoes as was done last year. The country will have 108,000,000 bushels more of the home crop than was grown in 1911. The rice crop is a little below the record production of 1910, but is larger than last year's crop. The buckwheat crop exceeds that of last year, but is below that of the record year.

There will be more hay in the United States by nearly two million tons than ever was grown in any other year. The estimate of the tobacco crop is $74,768,600 pounds. In the record crop year, 1909, there was a production of 1,055,765,000 pounds but the crop of last year amounted only to 905,109,000 pounds.

The condition of corn was above the two-year average on October 1st in the States of Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Indiana, Texas, Ohio, Kentucky, Alabama, South Dakota, Minnesota, Michigan and Pennsylvania. In the States of Mississippi, Louisiana and Wisconsin the condition was up to the one-year average and in most of the other States it was not far below.

This has been a great year for crop production and the abundance of the substantial of life on the farms will bring prosperity to every part of the Union. There is cause for general satisfaction in the remarkable October crop report.

How to Grow Pears.

Every grower should picture in his mind his ideal-shaped tree and then prune to form his ideal. Generally speaking, a low open head is a tree to be sought, but every grower will modify this to some extent to meet his ideal. In pruning the young trees the grower should remember where he wants to start the head, remembering that a limb never gets any farther from the ground than where it originally starts. A very common mistake is made in heading the tree too high, which makes unnecessary work in pruning spraying and picking.

Keep the tops of trees well cut back and the outer limbs cut about one-third back every four years, thus producing an abundance of new wood which is essential to size, quality and quantity of the fruit. I have seen some very pleasing results on orchards handled in the above manner, and their future bids to do well. Early plowing is essential for the conservation of moisture, and this is the prime factor in cultivating an orchard. If scarlet clover or other green crops have been used as a cover crop the previous year, delay in the plowing would be detrimental, as the moisture consumed by the clover when it starts to grow in the spring should be conserved for the trees.

A dust mulch should be kept in the orchard by frequent cultivation up to the middle of July, when cultivation should cease and a cover crop sown if one is to be used; with the discontinuation of the cultivator the trees will cease to grow and harden their new wood for the winter. Some orchardists use a sod mulch system, but the best results in this section with the Kieffer have been obtained by cultivation.

The fertility and previous treatment of the soil will be the factors that govern the fertilization. For orchards with the average soil, I would recommend an application of 300 to 400 pounds per acre of a 10-10-10 mixture about every three years, and a cover crop of scarlet clover and rye and alternating each year. I prefer a cover crop that stays green all winter to one like cow peas or soy beans—Farm Home.

Champ Clark was given one of the biggest demonstrations of love and loyalty ever extended a public man at his home coming at Bowling Green, Saturday. The town was decorated from end to end and there were large delegations present from neighboring towns, while the farmers or miles about came in carriages and autos to swell the procession. Hundreds of floats and vehicles gayly decorated with flags and bunting formed a procession more than a mile long and traversed all the principal streets, shouting and cheering—Platte County (Mo.) Landmark.

Hairy Vetch.

In vetch we have another legume that matures as quickly as the cowpea and yet makes its growth during exactly the opposite months of the year. This gives a peculiar and unique vetch and its culture should be seriously considered by every intelligent producer. It has all the good qualities of the cowpea with the additional gift of utilizing the fall and early spring months for its growth, a time of the year when many other plants do little or nothing to begin their life. Its only competitor is Crimson Clover whose range is limited.

Let us enumerate some of its good deeds. It germinates easily in any soil. It is hardy even in the northern states. It makes a vast amount of forage, reaching a height of four feet towards the last of May in southern Missouri. It should be sown at the rate of 20 to 30 pounds per acre with a half bushel of rye or wheat or winter oats to support its delicate vines in the spring. Cut the first crop when the seed is in the milk stage so that the rye, too, will make good hay. By the last of June it is ready to cut again, thus making two crops. The first crop in May may be turned under in time for corn and will add vastly to the organic matter in the soil; or the second crop may be turned under and cowpeas sown or some other late crop sown. Or again this second crop may be pastured off by hogs after the seed has formed in the pods. Here then is a plant that will make two crops of hay or one crop of hay and a rich and fattening hog pasture. Both cattle and horses eat vetch hay with avidity at first sight.—L. R. J., in Market Growers' Journal.

A Hot Day in Arizona.

(Kansas City Star.) Tom McNeal quotes Abe Peters as saying that one summer he lived in Southwestern Arizona where the mercury stood most of the time at 130 in the shade but would occasionally get a bump on itself and run up to 160. In the heat it was not 150 to 200. All the people who understood the climate took to the coolest places it was possible to find during the middle of the day, and stayed there from 11 o'clock to about 4 in the afternoon. There was one tenderfoot, however, who wouldn't take any advice. He thought he knew it all, and said that he didn't propose to lie around like the trifling natives. He would go out and work right through the day, like he had back East. He tried it one day, and that settled it. When he went out in the morning he was a tall man, about six feet three inches. When he came in that evening he was only five feet long. He had melted and run down during the day. His legs were perfectly straight when he started out, but as they softened up with the heat they bent under his weight, and when he came in at night he was so bowed-legged that a two-year-old calf could have jumped through the loop. He really was a peculiar looking sight. His features had runted and runted until you couldn't tell where his mustache left off and his eyebrows commenced and his ears had slipped down on his neck. After that he knew enough to stay in the shade during the hot part of the day.

Social Decline.

The telephone, rural delivery, automobiles, growth of cities and labor saving machinery are among the principal causes which contribute to the decline in rural social life, according to data in the hands of the Ohio board of agriculture. This data represents a series of scores of leading business men and educators from all parts of the United States, and many of which have made a study of social conditions in the rural districts.

From these same authorities the unanimity of opinion is that the rural schools and churches are not so efficient as they were twenty years ago. But few suggestions are offered as to the most advantageous way to remedy this condition.

Many expressed the belief that higher education has a tendency to make the younger element in the rural districts dissatisfied with farm life. It is claimed, too, that there is a regrettable tendency toward the abandonment of the social life in the rural districts, thus contributing to the spirit of unrest among the young in the country neighborhoods.

Because of automobiles and street cars it is argued that many from the rural districts seek their social life in the cities and towns which now easily may be reached because of the advantageous, modern means of travel. L. B. Marlin, president of Boston university, says that farmers are paying more attention to the raising of stock than they are in the advancement of their children. "The only hope in increasing interest in farm life," he says, "is in agricultural colleges."

ROOSEVELT SHOT

And Seriously Wounded By A Crank at Milwaukee.

An attempt was made on the life of Col. Roosevelt at Milwaukee, last Monday evening as the Colonel was leaving his hotel to deliver a speech at the auditorium. Against the advice of his friends and a physician Colonel Roosevelt delivered his speech, after which he was taken to a hospital, where the injury was found to be more serious than at first regarded by the wound. The shot having taken effect in the breast. The man who did the shooting gave his name as John Schrank, of New York, and said any man looking for a third term ought to be shot. An attempt was made to lynch the would-be assassin, but officers succeeded in saving him. It seems Schrank had been following Roosevelt, seeking to get a chance to shoot him.

For Sale—Good 2-year old mare broke to work bug and harness. Apply to Robert Gaines, near Burlington.

Colonel Roosevelt's wound was described as follows by his surgeons at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday:

Deep bullet wound of chest wall without striking any vital organ in transit; wound not to be probed. Point of entry is 1/2 inch to the right and an inch below the level of the right nipple. The bullet ranged upward and inward for a distance of four inches into the chest wall. No evidence that the bullet penetrated the lung. Pulse is 90 temperature 98.1. No operation to remove the bullet is indicated at the present time. Condition is hopeful, but the wound is so important as to demand absolute rest for a number of days.

RAYMOND POPHAM

Killed By a Train at Anderson Ferry, Saturday Evening.

Raymond Popham, aged about 11 years, son of James Popham and wife, of Constance, was killed by a train on the Big Four Railroad at Anderson's Ferry, last Saturday evening. The young man worked in Cincinnati, and had come down on a street car, and as it was making the loop at the end of the route he jumped off and started to the ferry boat to cross the river to his home in Constance, the first step or two bringing him directly in front of the approaching train, which struck him and hurled him several feet. The accident was witnessed by several persons who ran to the unfortunate young man and found life extinct, he having been killed instantly. The noise of the moving street car prevented him from hearing the approaching train, and just such an accident is liable to happen at that point at any time, it being one of the most dangerous railroad crossings in or about Cincinnati. The remains were interred at Hebron, Tuesday, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

Young Popham attended Burlington High School last year and was very popular with his schoolmates.

Farmers' Institute.

The Farmers' Institute is now in session at the High School building. Commissioner Newman, recognizing the inefficiency of the Institutes as they have been conducted in the past is holding Institutes only where fifty or more farmers petition for one and agree to attend. Considerably more than that number of Boone county farmers signed the petition. Within the last year or two Boone county farmers are becoming more interested in scientific or book farming. The experiments conducted at the High School, while necessarily limited in their scope, have attracted much attention, thereby showing the trend of thought. The systematic tests of fertilizers made this summer will be explained at the Institute. Also the present attempt to get a stand of alfalfa.

Dr. Hopkins, of Latonia, transacted business in Burlington yesterday.

Leaf-burners have been getting busy at intervals the past week.

There have been some pretty heavy frosts the past week.

COMMONWEALTH'S ATTORNEY E. E. WINN

Instantly Killed By An Automobile While Returning From Carrollton to His Home at Warsaw.

The tragic death of Commonwealth's Attorney, Hon. Everett Winn, of Warsaw, was an awful shock to the community in which he resided, and caused a gloom of deep sorrow to pervade the district, where he was so well known and so greatly beloved. His death took place last Friday night a few miles below Warsaw, by the overturning of his automobile. In company with four companions and a negro man who looked after his auto, Mr. Winn went to Carrollton in the afternoon to spend a couple of hours attending the Street Fair being held at that place. Returning home about nine o'clock, Mr. Winn was driving the machine at a high rate of speed on a level stretch of road near the line of Carroll and Gallatin counties, and reaching a part of the road where there was a sharp angle, before he realized he had reached the sharp turn in the road, he undertook to turn the rapidly speeding machine, but the speed was so great that the auto was on the verge of overturning and to avoid this he straightened the course of the machine and it crashed through a fence into a field, colliding with a heavy telephone pole. The impact was so great it threw Sheriff Geo. W. Snyder and the negro man, Dee Waller into the field, they being on the outside seating part of the auto, and the machine then overturned, and buried the other three, Mr. Winn, Dr. C. L. Payton and O. P. Krutz, under the machine. Mr. Snyder ran to the assistance of his companions, but found them pinioned down so they could not be extricated. Hurrying to the neighboring farm house he telephoned for doctors and help from Warsaw and Ghent, and with a force of men returned to the scene of the accident and righted the auto. Mr. Winn had been instantly killed the steering wheel having caught Mr. Winn's head in its descent and mashed the top of his head into a pulp, and the bones in his arms and body had been broken. Dr. Payton suffered a badly injured leg, the machine striking it. Mr. Krutz was badly bruised about the head and neck. The injured were given the necessary attention by the doctors who had arrived and all were brought to their homes at Warsaw where the distress of the loved ones was heart rending to behold. Mr. Krutz was able to be about next day, but Dr. Payton is still confined to his home. The funeral of Mr. Winn took place Sunday from the Warsaw Christian church of which he was a member, and the large auditorium was unable to accommodate one fourth of those who came to pay their last and Lebanon, O. He served as Sheriff, tribute to their dead friend. The services were conducted by Rev. W. J. Clark and Rev. J. B. Yager. The floral tributes were very extensive, coming from every quarter. It was the largest funeral that has been witnessed in Warsaw, and was attended by friends from all over the judicial district. Prominent among those present were Judge J. M. Lassing of the Court of Appeals, Hon. John S. Gaunt of Louisville, Congressman Arthur B. Rouse and Sheriff B. B. Hume, of Burlington, County Judge Frank Schree, of Carrollton, Hon. R. H. Elliott, Sheriff John Leary, Circuit Clerk J. T. Beagle, County Attorney C. Adams and John Blackburn, of Williamstown, Hon. H. G. Bots and M. H. Bourne of Owenton, and many others of prominence. Mr. Winn was a member of the Masonic fraternity and the Red Men and both orders had a very large attendance, and conducted their ritualistic services at the grave. Mr. Winn was beloved by everybody for his generous disposition and his kindly nature. The entire populace was shrouded in sorrow for he was a favorite with all. He was born in his 43rd year. He was born and reared in Gallatin county, and was educated at Georgetown and at Lebanon, Ohio. He served as County Attorney, Representative in the Legislature from Carroll and Gallatin counties, and was serving as the Commonwealth's Attorney of the judicial district when he met his untimely end. In all of the positions he acquitted himself with credit and honor, he leaves the memory among all of a faithful public servant, a good friend, and an honorable citizen.

President Taft and Gov. Woodrow Wilson each sent Mr. Roosevelt a message congratulating him on his escape from death, and wishing him the speedy recovery from his injury.

Governor McCreary will appoint a Commonwealth's Attorney to fill the vacancy created by the death of Hon. E. E. Winn. There are several applicants for the appointment.

The first day's attendance at the Farmers Institute was small. The farmers do not appear to appreciate the work the Institute is designed to do for them.

Mr. D. B. Wallace, of Walton, furnished the Recorder's account of the death of Hon. E. E. Winn.

Dr. Peddicord, Chairman of the county Democratic campaign committee, has received the following contributions for the Democratic National Campaign fund, and the same will be forwarded today to the Chairman of the National Campaign Committee:

On Thursday afternoon, October 21, at 2 o'clock, I am planning to have a Democratic Rally in every county seat in the State and want you to write or phone to your precinct chairman and their committee to meet you that afternoon for the purpose of making final arrangements to get out the vote. Have a notice put in your Democratic papers at once. A speaker will be furnished you for that afternoon. Don't forget the rally. Be active and vigilant until the poll closes and the victory will be ours.

The machinery at the local creamery has been causing considerable trouble the last two weeks.

When and where is the county corn show to be this year? It is time that arrangements for it were being made.

Wheat that was sowed ten days or two weeks ago has come up nicely and in some instances covers the ground.

MADE AT HOME.

Our belief is that the Panama Steel Range is the best range ever produced by any foundry for the money.

THE PRICE is the result of our ability in handling many of them, and the foundries many years of range-building experience, they having acquired in their time knowledge of minimizing the cost of production.

We feel satisfied that this range will give you the required service. We have seen this range built, and know that durable materials are put into it, and skilled stove builders employed to build them.

THE PANAMA would be a good value at $30.00. Our price at $24.75 makes the Panama the best range value on earth. Why not become the pleased owner of a PANAMA RANGE?

When Greencastles Were Unknown

Kitchen work was a drudgery. The invention of the No. 432 Greencastle has brought about a new era in housekeeping. It possesses the embodiment of every possible feature to lessen housework. It is different from any other Kitchen Cabinet on the market. It is different not alone in its many exclusive features, but its construction as well.

FEATURES

Large White Enameled China Compartment, will hold a 100-piece dinner set. Removable full tilting saitary flour hopper, feeds from back. Detachable ant-proof swinging sugar jar, with aluminum cover. Exclusive roll-front door feature, opens instantly and may be left closed while work is being done on zinc top. Non-rustible zinc top, slides on bearings. Dust-proof partition below top, prevents crumbs and dust getting into base. Spacious utensil compartment, equipped with sanitary shelves and racks. Divided cutlery drawer, long linen drawer and mouse and insect-proof bread and cake box.

CONSTRUCTION.

Best selected seasoned lumber goes into the construction of the Greencastle. Every corner properly jointed, and will remain solid for years later. Every detail, large and small, is built to the greatest convenience of the housewife.

THE PRICE.

The reasonable price of the Greencastle is another example of an economical management on the part of the factory. We are therefore, able to offer you a complete GREENCASCADE at.....$28.50

Local Happenings.

The will of Dr. Jacob Tanner, of Hebron, was probated last county court day. The estate is worth five or six thousand dollars. He gave to Lou Crutcher and Mrs. Brenda Garrett each $500; to Hebron Lutheran church $300 the income from which is to be used to pay the pastor; $100 the interest on which is to be applied to keeping his lot in Hebron cemetery. The residue of the estate is to be divided equally between St. Paul's Lutheran church of Cincinnati, and the Lutheran Home and Foreign Missions. Sidney Gaines was named as executor of the estate and has qualified as such.

Congressman A. B. House received the following telegram from Washington, D. C., last Friday:

Extension rural mail service granted—will become effective November 1st.

The telegram refers to the extension of the grant rural route, and the parties designed to be served by it should have their mail boxes in place by the first of next month, as the postoffice at Rabbit Hash will be discontinued when the extension goes into effect.

Rice Bros., of Idelwild, are remodeling their barn, the main part of which was built, some think, nearly or quite one hundred years ago. Most of the frame is perfectly sound, and was put together under the rules for framing that were followed early in the last century. When completed the boys will have a very large area under roof, and will be arranged in the most convenient way for taking care of livestock and farm produce.

LONG LIFE ENDED.

James W. Duncan, 86, Passes Away at The Home of His Son, Dr. Duncan.

Was Prominent in County Affairs Many Years.

Mr. James W. Duncan died at the home of his son, Dr. E. W. Duncan, in Burlington, about 8 o'clock p. m., last Thursday. He was born in Scott county, this State 36 years ago the 13th day of last August. He came to Boone county in 1841, and was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Gaines Jan. 23, 1847. Of that union two children survive—Mrs. R. A. Brady, of Belview neighborhood, and Circuit Clerk James A. Duncan, of Burlington. His first wife died March 14, 1868, and he married Miss Ann Graves, April 2d, 1868. She has been dead many years. Of the children by his last wife there survive Dr. E. W. Duncan, of Burlington, and John P. Duncan, of Donerail, Scott county.

Up to within the last seven or eight years J. W. Duncan was more or less prominent in county affairs, having started as secretary of the old Boone fair, which position he held for many years. In 1874 he was elected clerk of the Boone circuit court which office with the Master Commission-ership, he held for six years, and for the next twelve years he was either deputy assessor or deputy county clerk. In 1882 he was again elected to the office of Circuit Clerk which he held for two terms, when he was succeeded by his son, James A. Duncan, the incumbent. He made a careful, pains-taking, and obliging official always having a smile for everyone with whom he came in contact either as a private citizen or as an official. He was a father devoted to his children, an excellent citizen, and as a neighbor there was none better, he being always ready to contribute of his time and means to the aid of those needing assistance no matter under what circumstances. He was optimistic, seeing everything in the beautiful, never allowing the shades of somber life to harbor in his thought, or expressions, in his teaching, a lesson to the younger element well to be appreciated and heeded.

The remains of this excellent old gentleman were interred last Saturday at 11 a. m., in the family lot in Bullittsburg cemetery.

LYSTRA AYLOR

One of The County's Oldest Citizens Gone to His

Lystra Aylor died last Thursday at the home of his son William Louis Aylor in Delhi. He had been sick but a short time and the announcement of his death was a shock to his numerous acquaintances. The remains were interred in the cemetery at Sand Run church last Saturday at 10 a. m., by the side of those of the wife, who died many years ago.

Mr. Aylor was born January 12, 1830, and was one of a large family, only three members of which survive—W. T. and Henry Aylor, of this county, and T. B. Aylor, of Nebraska. His wife was a Miss Heim, and to them two children were born of whom one, a son, William Louis Aylor, survives, and with whom the father made his home.

Mr. Aylor was the staunch believer in the teachings of the Primitive Baptists and gave liberally for the support of that church. He looked on the bright side of life and always made his presence most agreeable to those with whom he was associated. He was an exemplary citizen, a good neighbor and a man whose long life was spotless and exempt from adverse criticisms—a plain, every day individual it was a pleasure to be with. A good man full of years, has been taken.

A Narrow Escape.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blyth brought their little granddaughter, Laura Louise Baldon, from Covington, keep during the prevalence of diphtheria, and last Thursday evening she left the house and went to the barn lot where she was attacked by a cow, which would have killed her had it not been for the timely appearance on the scene of Mrs. Blyth. As it was the child, which is two years old, was badly and considerably about the fate and body, it was a very narrow escape.

Very Incorrect.

Jake Fromholtz pitched a sensational game of ball Saturday afternoon for the Petersburg team at Burlington, Ky. He had twenty-three strikeouts and no hits to his credit and won by the score of 4 to 0.—Lawrenceburg Press.

It would be impossible to get a greater number of incorrect statements in the same space. Fromholtz pitched a great game but did not pitch at Burlington, nor did he make the record claimed.

Barn Burned.

A large barn belonging to T. E. Garrison, of Orange Hall neighborhood, was destroyed by fire last Thursday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison and one of their sons were in the house which was not far from the barn when they heard the roar of the fire, which called their attention to the barn, where the flames had acquired such headway that nothing could be done, and it was with a great risk that the son succeeded in getting out of the building a valuable young horse the only animal that was in the barn. Besides several tons of hay all of Mr. Garrison's harness, 2 heavy and four farm implements were destroyed. The loss on building and contents is about $600 on which there is insurance to the amount of $150 in the Boone county company. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

CHAPTER XXX.

The Judge Received a Letter.
After he had parted with Solomon Mahaffy the judge applied himself diligently to shaping that miracle-working document which he was preparing as an offset to whatever risk he ran in meeting Pentress. As sanguine as he was sanguinary he confidently expected to survive the encounter, yet it was well to provide for a possible emergency—had he not his grandson's future to consider? While thus occupied he saw the afternoon stage arrive and depart from before the City Tavern.

Half an hour later Mr. Wesley, the postmaster, came sauntering up the street. In his hand he carried a letter.

"Howdy," he drawled, from just beyond the judge's open door.

The judge glanced up, his quill pen poised aloft.

"Good evening, sir; won't you step inside and be seated?" he asked graciously. His dealings with the United States mail service were of the most insignificant description, and in personally delivering a letter, if this was what had brought him there, he felt Mr. Wesley had reached the limit of official courtesy and despatch.

"Well, sir; it looks like you'd never told us more than two-thirds of the truth!" said the postmaster. He surveyed the judge curiously.

"I am complimented by your opinion of my veracity," responded that gentleman promptly. "I consider two-thirds an enormously high per cent. to have achieved."

"There is something in that, too," agreed Mr. Wesley. "Who is Colonel Slocum Price Turberville?"

The judge started up from his chair.

"I have that honor," said he, bowing.

"Well, here's a letter come in addressed like that, and as you've been using part of the name I am willing to assume you're legally entitled to the rest of it. It clears up a point that off and on has troubled me considerably. I can only wonder I wasn't smarter."

"What point, may I ask?"

"Why, about the time you hung out your shingle here, some one wrote a letter to General Jackson. It was mailed after night, and when I seen it in the morning I was clean beat. I couldn't locate the handwriting, and yet I kept that letter back a couple of days and give it all my spare time. It ain't that I'm one of your spyns sort—there's nothing of the Yankee about me!"

"Certainly not," agreed the judge.

"Candid, judge. I reckon you wrote that letter, seeing this one comes under a frank from Washington. No, sir—I couldn't make out who was corresponding with the president, and it worried me, not knowing, more than anything I've had to contend against since I came into office. I calculate there ain't a postmaster in the United States takes a more personal interest in the service than me. I've frequent-ly set patrons right when they was in doubt as to the date they had mailed such and such a letter." As Mr. Wesley sometimes canceled as many as three or four stamps in a single day he might have been pardoned his pride in a brain which thus lightly dealt with the burden of official business. He surrendered the letter with marked reluctance.

"Your surmise is correct," said the judge with dignity. "I had occasion to write my friend, General Jackson, and unless I am greatly mistaken I have my answer here." And with a fine air of indifference he tossed the letter on the table.

"And do you know Old Hickory?" cried Mr. Wesley.

"Why not? Does it surprise you?" inquired the judge. It was only his innate courtesy which restrained him from kicking the postmaster into the street, so intense was his desire to be rid of him.

"No, I don't know as it does, judge. Naturally a public man like him is in the way of meeting with all sorts. A politician can't afford to be too blame particular. Well, next time you write you might just send him my regards. G. W. M. de L. Wesley's regards—there was considerable contention over my getting this office; I reckon he ain't forgot. There was speeches made, I understand the lie was passed between two United States senators, and that a quid of tobacco was thrown in anger." Having thus clearly established the fact that he was a more or less national character, Mr. Wesley took himself off.

When he had disappeared from sight down the street, the judge closed the door. Then he picked up the letter. For a long minute he held it in his hand, uncertain, fearful, while his mind slipped back into the past until his inward searching vision ferreted out a handsome soldierly figure—his own.

"That's what Jackson remembers if he remembers anything!" he muttered, as with trembling fingers he broke the seal. Almost instantly a smile overspread his battered features. He hitched his chin higher and squared his ponderous shoulders. "I am not forgotten—no, damn it—not!" he cried under his breath. "Recalls me with sincere esteem and consideration my services to the country as well worthy of recognition—"the judge breathed deep. What would Mahaffy find to say now? Certainly, this was well calculated to disturb the sour cynicism of his friend. His bearded eyes brimmed. After all his groping he had touched hands with the reality at last! Even a federal judgeship, though not an office of first repute in the south, had its dignity—it signified something! He would make Solomon his clerk! The judge reached for his hat. Mahaffy must know at once that fortune had minded for them. Why, at that moment he was actually in receipt of an income!

He sat down, the better to enjoy the unique sensation. Taxes were being levied and collected with no other end in view than his stipend—his ardent fancy saw the whole machinery of government in operation for his benefit. It was a singular feeling he experienced. Then promptly his spendthrift brain became active. He needed clothes—so did Mahaffy—so did his grandson; they must take a larger house; he would buy himself a new servant; these were pressing necessities as he now viewed them.

Once again he reached for his hat, the desire to rush off to Belle Plaine was overmastering.

"I reckon I'd be justified in hiring a conveyance from Peggie," he thought, but just here he had a saving memory of his unfinished task; that claim of precedence and he resumed his pen.

An hour later, Peggie's black boy presented himself to the judge. He came bearing a gift, and the gift appropriately enough was a square case bottle of respectable size. The judge was greatly touched by this attention but he began by making a most temperate use of the tavern-keeper's offering; then as the formidable document he was preparing took shape under his hand he more and more lost that feeling of Spartan fortitude which had at first sustained him in the presence of temptation. He wrote and slipped in complete and quiet luxury, and when at last he had exhausted the contents of the bottle it occurred to him that it would be only proper personally to convey his thanks to Peggie. Perhaps he was not un-derly inspired in this ulterior hope; if so, they were richly rewarded. The resources of the City Tavern were suddenly placed at his disposal. He attributed this to a variety of causes all good and sufficient, but the real reason was suggested itself; indeed it was of such a perfidious nature that the judge, open and generous-minded, could not have grasped it.

By six o'clock he was undeniably drunk; at eight he was sounding still deeper depths of inebriety, with only the most confused memory of impending events; at ten he collapsed and was borne upstairs by Peggie and his black boy to a remote chamber in the kitchen wing. Here he was undressed and put to bed, and the tavern-keeper, making a bundle of his clothes, retired from the room, locking the door after him, and the judge was doubly a prisoner.

Rousing at last from a heavy, dreamless sleep the judge was aware of a faint impalpable light in his room, the ashen light of a dull October dawn. He was aware, too, of a feeling of profound depression. He knew this was the aftermath of indulgence and that he might look forward to forty-eight hours of utter misery of soul, and, groaning aloud, he closed his eyes. Sleep was the thing if he could compass it. Instead, his memory quickened. Something was to happen at sun-up—he could not recall what it was to be, though he distinctly remembered that Mahaffy had spoken of this very matter—Mahaffy, the austere and implacable, the disembodied conscience whose fealty to duty had somehow survived his own spiritual ruin, so that he had become a sort of moral sign-post, ever pointing the way yet never going it himself.

The judge lay still and thought deeply as the light intensified itself.

Peggie's Black Boy Came Bearing a Gift.

What was it that Mahaffy had said he was to do at sun-up? The very hour accentuated his suspicions. Probably it was no more than some cheerless obligation to be met, or Mahaffy would not have been so concerned about it. Eventually he decided to refer everything to Mahaffy. He spoke his friend's name weakly and in a shaking voice, but received no answer.

"Solomon!" he repeated, and shifting his position looked in what should have been the direction of the shaken bed but his friend occupied. Neither the bed nor Mahaffy were there. The judge gasped—he wondered if this were not a premonition of certain hallucinations to which he was not a stranger. Then all in a flash he remembered Pentress and the meeting at Boggs', something of how the evening had been spent, and a spasm of regret shook him.

"I had other things to think of. This must never happen again!" he told himself remorsefully.

He was wide-awake now. Doubtless Peggie had put him to bed. Well, that had been thoughtful of Peggie—he would not forget him—the City Tavern should continue to enjoy his patronage. It would be something for Peggie to boast of that Judge Slocum Price Turberville always made his place headquarters when in Raleigh. Feeling that he had already conferred wealth and distinction on the fortunate Peggie the judge thrust his fat legs over the side of his bed and stood erect. Stopping he reached for his clothes. He confidently expected to find them on the floor, but his hand merely swept an uncarpeted waste. The judge was profoundly astonished.

"Maybe I've got 'em on. I don't recall taking them off!" he thought hopefully. He moved uncertainly in the direction of the window, where the light showed him his own bare extremities. He reverted to his original idea that his clothes were scattered about the floor.

He was beginning to experience a great sense of haste; it was two miles to Boggs' and Pentress would be there at sun-up. Finally he abandoned his quest of the missing garments and turned to the door. To say that he was amazed when he found it locked would have most inadequately described his emotions. Breathing deep, he fell back a step or two, and then with all the vigor he could muster launched himself at the door. But it resisted him.

"It's bolted on the other side!" he muttered, the full measure of Peggie's perfidy revealing itself to his mind. He was aghast. It was a plot to discredit him. Peggie's hospitality had been inspired by his enemy, for Peggie was Pentress' tenant.

Again he attacked the door; he believed it might be possible to force it from its hinges, but Peggie had done his work too well for that, and at last, spent and breathless, the judge dropped down on the edge of his bed to consider the situation. He was without clothes and he was a prisoner, yet his mind rose splendidly to meet the difficulties that beset him. His greatest activities were reserved for what appeared to be only a season of despair. He armed himself with a three-legged stool he had found and turned once more to the door, but the stout planks stood firm under his blows.

"Unless I get out of here in time I'm a ruined man!" thought the judge. "After this Pentress will refuse to meet me!"

The window next engaged his attention. That, too, Peggie had taken the precaution to fasten, but a single savage blow of the stool shattered glass and sash and left an empty space that framed the dawn's red glow. The judge looked out and shook his head dubiously. It was twelve feet or more to the ground, a risky drop for a gentleman of his years and build. The judge considered making a rope of his bedding and lowering himself to the ground by means of it; he remembered to have read of captives in that interesting French prison, the Bastille, who did this. However, an equally ingenious but much more simple use for his bedding occurred to him; it would form a sort and yielding substance on which to alight. He gathered it up into his arms, feather-tick and all, and pushed it through the window, then he wriggled out across the ledge, feet first, and lowering himself to the full length of his arms, dropped.

He landed squarely on the rolled-up bed with a jar that shook him to his center. Almost gaily he snatched up a quilt, draping it about him after the manner of a Roman toga, and thus lightly habited, started across Mr. Peggie's truck-patch, his one thought Boggs' and the sun. It would have served no purpose to have gone home, since his entire wardrobe, except for the shirt on his back, was in the tavern-keeper's possession, besides he had not a moment to lose, for the sun was peeping at him over the horizon.

Unobserved he gained the edge of the town and the highroad that led past Boggs' and stole a fearful glance over his shoulder. The sun was clear of the treetops, he could even feel the lifeless dust grow warm beneath his feet; and wrapping the quilt closer about him he broke into a labored run.

Some twenty minutes later Boggs' came in sight. He experienced a moment of doubt—doubtless Pentress had been there and gone! It was a hideous thought and the judge groaned. Then at the other end of the meadow near the woods he distinguished several men, Pentress and his friends beyond question. The judge laughed aloud. In spite of everything he was keeping his engagement, he was plucking his triumph out of the very drops of failure. The judge threw himself over the fence, a corner of the quilt caught on one of the rails; he turned to release it, and in that instant two pistol shots rang out sharply in the morning air.

Home and School.

Have the school learn two or three quotations each week; review them each week there after.

Each boy and girl should learn to study, to shut out the world for a few hours each night and get perfect lessons.

A few good educational papers will interest the advanced classes in school and will cause them to form habits of research.

A little entertainment given now will produce a fund with which to start a library, try it teacher. Your school needs one. Teacher, do your best this school or quit the profession. Do not ruin the future of the children you are employed to teach.

The small children in many of the schools do not have enough work. Many of them do not learn to count. Who is to blame?

Each public school in the county should turn out at least two pupils who had thoroughly completed the common branches this term of school.

Every teacher who permits a class to leave a lesson not thoroughly learned and recited does that class an injustice and is not a good teacher.

Each child should be taught to be polite and to be good morally. It is not wise to educate a savage, it would be better to civilize him.

Are you a good penman? If not get a stack of copy paper and some good forms and spend an hour each night practicing the different movements.

Every teacher in the county is growing in his work or going back. The future of the children in school is affected one way or the other by the work of these teachers.

The American Book Co. is putting out a little book entitled "Hannah of Kentucky," it is interesting and up-to-date and each teacher should see that it finds its way into each school library.

The teacher who does not prepare lessons for class recitation is not the true teacher and is in no position to bring out all the thought in the subjects. All must work both teacher and pupil.

The child in the school room and out should be taught that getting an education is not only a business proposition but a necessity, they have only a few short years in which to prepare for the battle of life.

To read, write and cipher is as important to-day as in the days of our grand fathers. One would not think so if he tested the pupils of to-day upon either of these branches, but few of them can do either well.

Dr. Barnes in a letter in Louisville said that the welfare of the schools lies in the hands of the parents, that the teaching force is the most important part, that a good teacher means a good education, that a poor teacher is an extravagance.

In primary grades in many schools the children do not recite as often as they should. One reading lesson per day is but little better than none. The child's mind must be impressed often enough with a subject for it to become familiar with the work.

Crop rotation will improve your land, oats or rye, cow peas than corn.

Make new nest, disinfect the poultry house and use plenty of feed.

Get a ton of cotton seed meal for the cattle before starting into the winter.

Buy a hundred bushel of oats while they are cheap they are good for chickens and stock.

Save a piece of land near the house for grain for the chickens also—sow a patch of rape to graze.

Use a spoon full of nitrate of soda to two gallons of water and sprinkle your boxes in which you plant your early cabbage and tomatoes or lettuce.

Rotation in crop on good land pays. If you have a good piece in corn this year try oats next and sow in cowpeas as soon as oats are harvested grazing the cowpeas down and turning them under.

Sow wheat and rye to hog down next year and fence with a four foot fence with a 6-inch stay and barbed wire at the bottom next spring sow two hundred pounds of nitrate of soda on the ground and you will have a crop wet or dry baring freeze out.

Also the Veterinary equipment of said deceased, consisting of Saddle-Pockets, and bottles, two pocket cases of instruments and two cases of surgical instruments. All purchases of above property of $5.00 and under, cash; on all purchases over $5.00 a credit of six months without interest will be given, the purchaser to execute note with approved security, negotiable and payable at the Boone County Deposit Bank, before removing property.

As such Executor I will, at the same time and place, sell publicly to the highest bidder, the farm in Boone County, Ky., owned by said Jacob Tanner, and on which he resided at the time of his death. Said farm purports to contain 118 acres of land, about 25 acres in timber and the remainder cleared. It is well improved, very level and in all a most desirable country home. For the purchase price of such farm the purchaser will pay one-third cash, and on the remaining two-thirds a credit of six months will be given, the purchaser to execute his note with approved security, bearing six per cent interest from date, with a lien retained on all the land to secure the payment of said unpaid purchase money. Full possession of farm given on or before January 1st, 1913.

Executor of Jacob Tanner, Sale to begin at 10 a. m. J. B. Crysler, Auctioneer.

Almost A Miracle. One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Texas, was effected years ago in the case of a man who had a dreadful cough, he writes "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 215 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results. Its quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free from all dealers. (Advertisement.)

funeral sermon, and the Masonic fraternity having charge of the funeral, he being very prominent in that order for many years.

The remains of L. Vallandigham, familiarly known here as "Scroggin Vallandigham," arrived here Monday from Silver City, Arizona, near where he had been working in a copper mine as an electrician, and was killed by coming in contact with an exposed wire one night last week. He had charge of the electric light plant in the mine and had charge of the night shift, the mine running day and night. In the morning he was found electrocuted, and from appearances death must have been instantaneous. Mr. Vallandigham was born and reared near here, and his parents dying when he was small, his aunt, Mrs. Jane Northcutt, raised him to manhood's estate. He left here for the West about 15 years ago, and had never married. He was about 37 years old at the time of his death. The funeral took place Tuesday, Bro. Bagby speaking words of consolation to the relatives and friends, after which the interment took place at Independence.

Frank Secor and George German basket maker got up very early Saturday morning to go to Rising Sun, intending to walk. When he struck the pike across the river, William came in his auto and picked him up. They went so fast it nearly took George's breath and they were at the Sun in about fifteen minutes. Geo. got out of the machine and says, "Danks, so much awfully mit de ride, if I had known myself to be here already two hours in front of the clock, yet I wd be at home fast asleep already to start unless I knew you vud not have picked me up since."
Frank Secor and George German, road overseers, did the very best thing possible with the road money this year by hauling gravel and stone and putting on the bad places in the road. The old way of working the mud roads by throwing more dirt in the road to make more mud, is now obsolete. It is a shame here charge of the road money have abandoned that way, and you can now see some results from the present system. The charge to the postmaster to report all bad or impassable roads on the rural routes to the department, will result in improvement in road conditions from now on.

A Combination Load.

While J. P. Tanner and his son, Kirby, were hauling wood one day last week they suddenly discovered that a portion of their load consisted of snakes. The jarring of the wagon having put them in a bad humor, they left their hiding places in a hollow log and crawled about the wagon. Kirby, who was driving, was the first to discover the reptiles. He was afraid to say anything for fear he might be mistaken, but when his father saw the snakes at the top of his voice and leaped from the wagon, he was convinced what he saw was the real thing and followed the old gentleman's example. The wood was handled very carefully when it arrived at the house, and during the progress of unloading several snakes of considerable size were killed.

P. A. Ryle was in last Monday morning and placed an advertisement in the paper, to the effect that if his sale of property at 12 m. on November 2d. It is hoped that Mr. Ryle and wife will locate in Burlington, where they desire citizens in any locality and Burlington has plenty of room for quite a number of such good people.
Elmer Conley, carrier on Burlington R. D. 2, wants to be transferred to Union rural route, on account of being closer to his mother and the route being shorter and over better roads. It pays $100 a year less than his present route pays, but he is willing to make the sacrifice. The people on route No. 2 will object to the move vehemently.
W. H. Clayton Lecturing.
W. H. Clayton, of Hebron, is one of the State lecturers assigned to the western division of the State Farmers' Institutes. His subject is Scientific Farming. His lectures are to be among the best at the Institutes in which he takes part.
We see more small grain being sown in this county this fall than any fall before since 1890, when the old Forge floor mill was closed down. This is encouraging as good farming is always attended by growing small grain in rotation with other crops. We hope to see the day when the county will raise wheat enough for home consumption as it did twenty-five years ago, when we had two flour mills as stimulus to raise it. Let us now raise wheat as a stimulus for flour mill to operate.—Clay City Times.
This is the nuttiest fall for many years.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

CHAPTER XXII.

Solomon's Last Night.

It had been with no little reluctance that Solomon Mahaffy accompanied Yancy and Cavendish to Belle Plain; he would have preferred to remain in Raleigh in attendance upon Judge Price. Intimately acquainted with the judge's mental processes, he could follow all the devious workings of that magnificent mind; he could fathom the simply hellish ingenuity he was capable of putting forth to accomplish temporary hegemony. Permitting his thoughts to dwell upon the mingled strength and weakness which was so curiously blended in Slocum Price's character, he had formed visions of that great soul, freed from the trammels of restraint, confiding in the melancholy history of Mr. Peggie in the hope of bolstering his fallen credit at the City Tavern.

Always where the judge was concerned he fluctuated between extremes of doubt and confidence. He felt that under the urgent spur of occasion his friend could rise to any emergency, while a sustained activity made demands which he could not satisfy; then his efforts were discounted by his insane desire to realize at once on his opportunities; in his haste he was for ever plucking untimely fruit; and though he might keep one eye on the main chance the other was fixed just as resolutely on the nearest tavern.

With the great stake which fate had suddenly introduced into their losing game, he wished earnestly to believe that the judge would stay quietly in his office and complete the task he had set himself; that with this of his hands the promise of excitement at Belle Plain would compel his presence there, when he would pass somewhat under the restraining influence which he was determined to exert; in short, to Solomon, life embraced just the one vital consideration, which was to maintain the judge in a state of sobriety until after his meeting with Fentress.

The purple of twilight was stealing over the land when he and his two companions reached Belle Plain. They learned that Tom Ware had returned from Memphis, that the bayou had been dragged but without results, and that as yet nothing had been heard from Carrington or the dogs he had gone for.

Presently Cavendish and Yancy set off across the fields. They were going on to the toll road, and the six little Cavendishes, whom they had not seen since early morning; and they promised to be back at Belle Plain within an hour.

By very nature an alien, Mahaffy sought out a dark corner on the wide porch that overlooked the river to await their return. The house had been thrown open, and supper was being served to whoever cared to stay and partake of it. The murmur of idle purposeless talk drifted out to him; he was irritated and offended by it. There was something garish in this indiscriminate hospitality; it was very home of tragedy. As the moments slipped by his sense of displeasure increased, with mankind in general, with himself, and with the judge—principally with the judge—who was to make a foolish target of himself in the morning. He was going to give the man who had wrecked his life a chance to take it as well. Mahaffy's cold logic dealt cynically with the preposterous situation his friend had created.

In the midst of his angry meditations he heard a clock strike in the hall and counted the strokes; it was nine o'clock. Surely Yancy and Cavendish had been gone their hour! He quitted his seat and strolled restlessly about the house. He felt deeply indignant with everybody and everything. Human intelligence seemed but a pitiable advance on brute instinct. A whole day had passed and what had been accomplished? Carrington, the judge, Yancy, Cavendish—the four men who might have worked together to some purpose—had widely separated themselves; and here was the duel, the very climax of absurdity. He resumed his dark corner and waited another hour. Still no Carrington, and Yancy and Cavendish had not come up from the raft.

"Fools!" thought Mahaffy bitterly. "All of them fools!"

At last he decided to go back to the judge; and a moment later was hurrying down the lane in the direction of the highroad, but, jaded as he was by the effort he had already put for that day, the walk to Raleigh made tremendous demands on him, and it was midnight when he entered the little town.

It cannot be said that he was altogether surprised when he found their cottage dark and apparently deserted. He had half expected this. Entering, and not stopping to secure a candle, he groped his way upstairs to the room on the second floor which he and the judge shared.

"Price!" he called, but this gained him no response, and he cursed softly under his breath. He hastily descended to the kitchen, lighted a candle, and stepped into the adjoining room. On the table was a neat pile of papers, and topping the pile was the president's letter. He lunged forward, snatched the scrap, and thinking it might afford some clue to the judge's whereabouts, Mahaffy took it up and read it. Having mastered its contents he instantly glanced in the direction of the City Tavern, but it was wrapped in darkness.

"Price is drunk somewhere," was his definite conclusion. "But he'll be at Boggs' the first thing in the morning—most likely so far gone he can hardly stand!"

The letter, with its striking news, made little or no impression on him just then; it merely furnished the clue he had sought. The judge was off somewhere marketing his prospects. After a time Mahaffy went upstairs, and, without removing his clothes, threw himself on the bed. He was worn down to the point of exhaustion, yet he could not sleep, though the deep silence warned him that day was not far off. What if—but he would not let the thought shape itself in his mind. He had witnessed the judge's skill with the pistol, and he had even a certain irrational faith in that gentleman's destiny. He prayed God that Fentress might die quickly and decently with the judge's bullet through his brain. Over and over in savage supplication he muttered his prayer that Fentress might die.

Mahaffy watched for the coming of the dawn. The planter's darkness lifted he had risen from the bed and gone downstairs, where he made himself a cup of wretched coffee. Then he blew out his candle and watched the gray light spread. He was impatient now to be off, and fully an hour before the sun set out for Boggs', a tall, gaunt figure in the shadowy uncertainty of that October morning. He was the first to reach the place of meeting, but he had scarcely entered the meadow when Fentress rode up, attended by Tom Ware. The planter dismounted, and the colonel lifted his hat. Mahaffy barely acknowledged the salute; he was in no mood for courtesies that meant nothing. Ware was clearly of the same mind.

There was an awkward pause, then Fentress and Ware spoke together in a low tone. The planter's speech was broken and hoarse, and his heavy, blood-shot eyes were the eyes of a haunted man; this was all a part of Fentress' scheme to face the world, and Ware still believed that the fires Hicks had kindled had served his desperate end.

When the first long shadows stole out from the edge of the woods Fentress turned to Mahaffy, whose glance was directed toward the distant corner of the field, where he knew his friend must first appear.

"Why the hell waiting, sir?" he demanded, his tone cold and formal. "Something has occurred to detain Price," answered Mahaffy.

The colonel and Ware exchanged looks. Again they spoke together, while Mahaffy watched the road. Ten minutes slipped by in this manner, and once more Fentress addressed Mahaffy.

"Do you know what could have detained him?" he inquired, the ghost of a smile curling his thin lips.

"I don't," said Mahaffy, and relapsed into a moody and anxious silence. He held dueling in very proper abhorrence, and only his feeling of intense but never-declared loyalty to his friend had brought him there.

Another interval of waiting succeeded.

"I have about reached the end of my patience; I shall wait just ten minutes longer," said Fentress, and drew out his watch.

"Something has happened—" began Mahaffy.

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"I have kept my engagement; he should have kept his," Fentress retorted, addressing Ware. "I am sorry."

"Are you ready?" he asked; he glanced at Mahaffy, who by a slight inclination of the head signified that he was. "I reckon you're a green hand at this sort of thing," commented Tom evilly.

"Yes," said Mahaffy tersely. "Well, listen: I shall count, one, two, three; at the word three you will fire. Now take your positions."

Mahaffy and the colonel stood facing each other, a distance of twelve paces separating them. Mahaffy was pale but dogged; he eyed Fentress unflinchingly. Quick on the word Fentress fired, an instant later Mahaffy's pistol exploded; apparently neither bullet had taken effect, the two men maintained the rigid attitude they had assumed; then Mahaffy was seen to turn on his heels, next his arm dropped to his side and the pistol slipped from his fingers, a look of astonishment passed over his face and left it vacant and staring while his right hand stole up toward his heart; he raised it slowly, with difficulty, as though he were held down by some invisible weight.

A hush spread across the field. It was like one of nature's invisible transitions. Along the edge of the woods the song of birds was stricken into silence. Ware, heavy-eyed—Fentress, his lips twisted by a tortured smile, watched Mahaffy as he panted for breath, with his hand clenched against his breast. That dead, oppressive silence lasted but a moment; from out of it came a cry that smote on the wounded man's ears and reached his consciousness.

"It's Price!" he gasped, his words bathed in blood, and he pitched forward on his face.

Ware and Fentress had heard the cry, too, and running to their horses threw themselves into the saddle and galloped off. The judge midway of the meadow roared out a furious protest, but the mounted men turned in to the highroad and vanished from sight, and the judge's shaking legs bore him swiftly in the direction of the gaunt figure on the ground.

Mahaffy struggled to rise, for he was hearing his friend's voice now, the voice of utter anguish, calling his name. At last painful effort brought him to his feet. He saw the judge, clothed principally in a gaily colored bed-quilt, hatless and shoeless, his face sodden and bleary from his night's debauch. Mahaffy stood erect, and staggered toward him, his hand over his wound, his features drawn and rigid, then with a cry he dropped at his friend's feet.

"Solomon! Solomon!" And the judge knelt beside him. "It's all right, Price; I kept your appointment," whispered Mahaffy; a bloody spume was gathering on his lips, and he stared up at his friend with glassy eyes.

"I very shame the judge hid his face in his hands, while sobbing shook him."

"Solomon—Solomon, why did you do this?" he cried miserably.

The harsh lines on the dying man's face erased themselves.

"You're the only friend I've known in twenty years of loneliness, Price. I've loved you like a brother," he panted, with a pause between each word.

Again the judge buried his face in his hands.

"I know it, Solomon—I know it!" he moaned wretchedly.

"Price, you are still a man to be reckoned with. There's the boy; take your place for his sake and keep it!"

"You can."

"I will—by God, I will!" gasped the judge. "You hear me? You hear me, Solomon? By God's good help, I will!"

"You have the president's letter—I saw it—" said Mahaffy in a whisper. "Yes!" cried the judge. "Solomon, the world is waiting for us!"

"For me most of all," murmured Mahaffy, and there was a bleak instant when the judge's ashen countenance held the full pathos of age and failure. "Remember your oath, Price," gasped the dying man. A moment of silence succeeded. Mahaffy's eyes closed, then the heavy lids slid back. He looked up at the judge while the harsh lines of his sour old face softened wonderfully. "Kiss me, Price," he whispered, and as the judge bent to touch him on the brow, the softened lines fixed themselves in death, while on his lips lingered a smile that was neither bitter nor sneering.

EXECUTOR'S SALE

Live Stock, Farm Produce and Farming Implements.

As Executor of Jacob Tanner, deceased, I will sell at the residence of the late Jacob Tanner, on the Hebron and Lebanon pike one-half mile south of Hebron, Boone County, Ky., on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1912.

The following property: One horse, one 2-year old colt, Five Cows, one Yearling Heifer, two Calves, two Brood Sows, two Stock Hogs, three Ewes and one Ram, lot of Hay in barn, Corn in shock, lot hoppers, stack of Oats, Road Wagon, Hay Bed, Spring Wagon, top Buggy, open Buggy, double A Harrow, Walking Cultivator, Breaking Plow, Single and Double Shovel Plows, Mowing machine, Hay Rake, Corn Cutter, Self Binder, Land Roller, Buggy Harness, Work Harness, set double driving Harness, Man's Saddle, several Feather Beds, Bolsters and Pillows, Bedsteads, Carpets, Stoves, Dishes, some silver plate, and other articles of household and kitchen furniture and farm and garden implements belonging to the estate of said deceased too numerous to mention.

Also the Veterinary equipment of said decedent, consisting of Saddle-Pockets, and bottles, two pocket cases of instruments and two cases of surgical instruments. All purchases of above property of $5.00 and under, cash; on all purchases over $5.00 a credit of six months without interest will be given, the purchaser to execute note with approved security, negotiable and payable at the Boone County Deposit Bank, before removing property.

As such Executor I will, at the same time and place, sell publicly to the highest bidder, the farm in Boone County, Ky., owned by said Jacob Tanner, and on which he resided at the time of his death. Said farm purports to contain 113 acres of land, about 25 acres in timber and the remainder cleared. It is well improved, very level and in all a most desirable country home. For the purchase price of the farm the purchaser will pay one-third cash, and on the remaining two-thirds a credit of six months will be given, the purchaser to execute his note with approved security, bearing six per cent interest from date, with a lien retained on all the land to secure the payment of said unpaid purchase money. Full possession of farm given on or before January 1st, 1913.

EXECUTOR OF JACOB TANNER, S. D. GAINES, Sale to begin at 10 a. m. J. B. Crysler, Auctioneer.

Also dogs are becoming discriminating in their taste for mutt and are killing higher priced sheep than ever before. One claim has been in for six sheep and a pig and a cow. The amount of claims is running higher than for this time last year. The number of dogs has fallen off 15,000 from last year, while there were 14,500. This year the Assessors have made returns on 127,651.—Frankfort State Journal.

We had rather be a poor, one-galled cuss, without any of this world's goods, and roam the golden hills of Kentucky in October, than drive a ninety-horsepower limousine, be mangy with coin and live elsewhere. And this reminds us: Once two Kentuckians died and left Kentucky. They were not here any more so could they have prevented it. But they died and went hence. Arriving at the Pearly Gates, and responding to questions, telling the gateman whence they came, the angel threw wide the drawbridge (see Tenth Chapter of Denmark, Third Verse, as Blake Ryan wrote) and they had to enter. A loud voice heralded the arrival of two gentlemen from Kentucky and forthwith there appeared some stalwart angels, bringing heavy iron chains. The Kentuckians inquired the wherefore of the chains, whereupon the leading angel advised that theretofore every Kentuckian who had entered Heaven had broken out and gone back to Kentucky. If you go out to one of the sentinels and stand guard over our fair city and behold the myriad gold and green and yellow leaves, and behold the setting sun, the rolling meadows—in short autumn in Kentucky—they don't have it anywhere else) you will understand why those other Louisville, Oct. 19.—Throwing a tightly corked bottle containing her name and address into the Ohio river nearly five years ago, Miss Nora Lea, of 104 East Gray street, Louisville, did not hear from it until today, when she learned that it had been picked up off San Diego, Cal. The finder, Charles Collins, of Toledo, sent Miss Lea the slips of paper she had put in the bottle, saying he had fished it out of Coronado Bay while on a visit to California.

Almost a Miracle. One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clearwater, Texas, was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 118 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results. It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. More Trouble For LeBus & Co.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., October 13.—Judge Lewis Apperson, of this city, and Attorney-General Garnett, of Frankfort, this afternoon filed in the Franklin Circuit Court suit against the Burley Tobacco Society and Company, of Lexington, for $200,000, claimed due the state and the insurance Department Kentucky taxes for transacting the business of insurance in this state without authority.

The suit was brought in, the name of Auditor Henry M. Bosworth, representing Matt C. Clay, of this city, State Insurance Commissioner. It appears that it was a part of the agreement between the pooler and the Burley Tobacco Society that he should be charged so much for insurance, storage, etc., and that the poolers have paid to the society the sum of $277,000 for that purpose. This sum was in turn paid over to the Burley Tobacco Company, who assumed the risk instead of some regularly admitted stock company, as the law requires.

M. L. DOWNS

Of Carrollton Appointed Commonwealth's Attorney.

Last Monday Gov. McCrory appointed M. L. Downs, of Carrollton, as Commonwealth's Attorney to fill the vacancy in that office by the death of Hon. E. E. Winn. Mr. Downs is an attorney of several years practice and has served his county as county judge. He is not a stranger in this county, having attended circuit court here several times while Hon. John S. Gaunt was Commonwealth's Attorney. He and Mr. Gaunt are partners in the practice of law and have been for many years.

Owners of land and tenants of the bottom cut are very properly indignant at the scant regard paid to property rights by many people who go to the bottoms for hickory nuts and pawns. No serious objections have been made by the land owners to people gathering the nuts on the ground; but this year both hickory and pawns have been cut down, many trees "bumped" to make the nuts fall, and trees are climbed to thresh the nuts off. Besides this, hogs and cattle are in the fields, hogs and cattle are killed or mistreated and apple orchards robbed.—Clinton Gazette.

Somebody has made an estimate of the value of Boone county's hickorynut crop, at two dollars a bushel, and places it at $60,000. Each hickory tree and bush is loaded with nuts this year. There are also thousands of bushels of black walnuts and butternuts and white walnuts. The hazelnut bushes are also full.—Mt. Olivet Tribune-Democrat-Tribune.

A recent bulletin from the State University Experiment Station at Lexington shows that the largest average yield of corn in the State was in Mason county, with forty-four bushels an acre. The average yield for the State is twenty-five bushels.

Earl Smith has about recovered from his excessive joy over the success of the Boston team in the world's series. The boys who hedged when Boston's slump was on are kicking themselves most unmercifully. The series was a striking proof of the adage, "A game of base ball is never out until played out. Just at the time the fire was out with the Giants Key struck a winning streak that came within an ace of landing them the world's champions. With them it was a case of so near yet so far.

J. M. Eddins, who carries the mail between Burlington and Erlanger, has been experiencing considerable trouble with horses he drives. Several of them have become lame from no apparent cause, all of them in the same foot, no two of the animals being lame at the same time. The trouble comes on gradually until the horse is too lame for use and after it begins it begins getting better and soon recovers. No swollen nor tender parts have been discovered and Mr. Eddins is at a loss to know what is the cause of the lameness, he having done everything he can think of or that has been suggested to him by others to prevent the trouble.

Rouse Always Gets Results.

Congressman A. B. Rouse has had the trouble in the mail between Cincinnati and Burlington straightened out. He received the following letter from the Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service in this district a few days ago:

In connection with failures of your 'Enquirer' to reach Burlington on time, beg to advise that further investigation developed the fact that Cincinnati & Chautauoga train one fails to reach Erlanger quite often, sufficiently early to reach the star route carrier from Erlanger to Burlington and I think this is the cause, more than anything else, for these serious delays. To overcome the situation, Chief Clerk Bird has directed the Postmaster at Cincinnati, Ohio, to make pouch daily except Sunday, to Erlanger, to contain all the Burlington mail on hand at the time the pouch is closed out, ready to go forward on express train five.

This train is always on time or substantially so and I think there will be no more annoying delays to your mail. If there is anything else you can suggest, please command me and I will carry it out if at all possible.

INTEREST

Shown in The Farmers' Institute Very Gratifying.

The Farmers' Institute held at the High School building, Wednesday and Thursday of last week, was the best ever held at Burlington. About one hundred members were enrolled and all were enthusiastic in encouraging the work done. It is believed that had it not been such a busy time among the farmers twice as many would have been present.

The instructors were five in number. Prof. Mutchler, of the Western Normal School at Bowling Green, is especially fine. He was with us the two days. Dr. Morse, of Massachusetts, Mrs. Volcott, Mrs. Chamberlain, both of Kentucky, also had interesting work to present to the Institute. Dr. Heiser, State Registrar, lectured Thursday evening in the Universalist church on the Hook worm disease.

After the Institute was over Prof. Dix gave the High School students a test. These questions with their answers were based on the lectures given at the Institute and will show something of the character of the work done. The answers are those handed in by Robert McGlasson, the paper being selected at random from those prepared by the students:

Question.—Name the four chemical elements in the soil which farmers must preserve and replenish.

Answer.—Nitrogen, potash, phosphoric Acid and Lime.

Q.—What part of the plant does nitrogen nourish?

A.—Nitrogen makes the stalk and leaves or green part of plant.

Q.—What is the function of potash?

A.—It makes firmness in the stalk.

Q.—What part of the plant is made by phosphoric acid?

A.—The grain.

Q.—What is the use of lime?

A.—Lime sweetens acid soil and keeps it soft.

Q.—What is a cover crop?

A.—A cover crop is a green growing crop all through the late fall, winter and early spring. It prevents leaching and washing and enriches the ground for the next crop.

Q.—Name some cover crops.

A.—Rye, wheat, barley, crimson clover.

Q.—How does a cover crop hold the plant food when sown in the fall?

A.—The cover crop takes the nourishment in the plant and stores it up. In place of the nourishment washing away or leaching the nourishment is near the ground for the next crop. When it is turned under all the plant food is returned to the soil.

Q.—Name three ways in which soil is lost.

A.—Careless husbandry, leaching, washing.

Q.—How much of its value does a pile of manure lose by being left under a drip?

A.—From 30 to 60 per cent is lost.

Q.—What is the average yield per acre of corn in Kentucky?

A.—Twenty-nine bushels.

Q.—What is the value of the five leading crops in Kentucky?

A.—Corn.....$5,000,000

Tobacco.....33,000,000

Poultry.....15,000,000

Wheat.....8,000,000

Hay.....5,000,000

As Ben Snyder, who lives near Florence, on the Burlington pike, was driving along the road last Saturday, his horse shied at something and ran the buggy off the side of the road, turning it over.

In some way Ned Snyder threw the animal and its head got under the fence, which held it down until he succeeded in getting the buggy loose. Fortunately no damage resulted to person or property.

DON'T FORGET

A. B. Rouse When You Cast Your Vote on Nov. 5th.

In the intense interest because of the Presidential campaign the people of this Congressional District and especially the voters of Boone county should not forget Hon. A. B. Rouse the Democratic candidate for Congress. Mr. Rouse stands very high with the other members of Congress and the heads of Departments at Washington, and when he asks any favors of them he is pretty sure to receive their aid, as is shown by what he has accomplished already for his constituents. Few members of Congress can accomplish the work during their first term that Mr. Rouse has put over for his district during his first term. He is making the best representative the District has had for some time and is entitled to the unanimous support of the Democrats in this congressional district. Born and reared in Boone county her voters will honor themselves by honoring him with their support and perform an act of which they will always be proud. It is seldom that the voters of what is known as an out-lying county have the opportunity to cast their ballot for so worthy a young man as A. B. Rouse, and there is no doubt but that voters will show their appreciation of their opportunity on November next.

Teachers' Meeting.

The Teachers' meeting of Bellevue and Petersburg Magisterial Districts was held at Bellevue last Saturday afternoon. The following teachers were present: Elma Allen, Wilella Hance, Mrs. Nannie Maurer, Mattie Leek, Lizette Rogers, E. L. Dix, Thos. B. Throop and Ruth Kelly.

Miss Lizzie Rogers, chairman, had prepared a very interesting and instructive program. The session was begun by singing by a mixed quartet. Rev. Hensley conducted the devotional exercises.

Prof. Throop delivered a well prepared address of welcome to both teachers and Supt., followed by a responsive address by Supt. Riley.

Miss Mattie Leek discussed Compulsory Education, emphasizing the necessity, result and objection of such a law.

Misses Gertrude and Mary Throop, each, recited in a very pleasing and entertaining manner. Miss Elma Allen read an excellent and thoughtful paper on Primary Plans, emphasizing value of expression in reading, and illustrating the various methods by which we may stimulate the minds of younger pupils to work.

The Subject, Resolved that Corporal Punishment is expedient was debated by Miss Hance, representing the negative and Mr. E. L. Dix, the affirmative. Both sides were well discussed and explained.

Mrs. Maurer read an interesting paper on Interest. Patrons should have in school, showing the benefits and results derived from cooperation of parents with teachers.

Topics of special interest were discussed by Supt. Riley.

TO QUARANTINE

Against Horses, Mules and Jacks From Kansas and Nebraska.

Frankfort, Oct. 16.—The State Livestock Sanitary Board has instructed Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newman, to issue an order declaring a quarantine against horses, mules and jacks from Kansas and Nebraska on account of the prevalence in those States of a stock disease resembling cerebro-spinal meningitis. No stock from there can be shipped into Kentucky within sixty days after having been in either of the two States, and the stock yards of Chicago, Kansas City, East St. Louis, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Mo., and Indianapolis shipping animals into Kentucky must produce affidavits from the shippers and managers of the stockyards that the animals have not been in Kansas or Nebraska within sixty days.

A sheep quarantine also was declared against Robertson county, where it is declared the county livestock inspector has not been co-operating with State authorities. The quarantine is to continue until the board is satisfied that co-operation will be secured.

The proclamation follows: "Resolved, That the State Livestock Sanitary Board hereby orders a quarantine of Robertson county to cover the shipping, driving or moving of sheep out of or into this county until an efficient county inspector is appointed there, who will co-operate with the State Livestock Inspector, representing this board.

"Resolved, That the State Livestock Sanitary Board of Kentucky views with alarm the continued spread in Kansas and Nebraska of the disease somewhat similar to cerebro-spinal meningitis that is now devastating those States of horses, mules and jack stock. Veterinarians are unable to handle the situation or even to say positively whether the disease is contagious, infectious or communicable in any way. The horses and mules of Kentucky are one of its largest interests and this board deems it its duty as a precautionary measure to place a quarantine upon horses, mules or jack stock coming from those States in order to protect the horse industry of Kentucky. If it should prove that this disease is simply of a local nature and not contagious, infectious or communicable, then the quarantine can be lifted by action of this board upon short notice. But if said disease should once get a foothold in Kentucky and prove to be either contagious, infectious or communicable in any way the farmers of the State would lose a vast amount of money.

"It is therefore ordered that the shipping, driving or moving of horses, mules or jacks into Kentucky that have been within either of the States of Kansas or Nebraska or have passed through same in transit within a period of sixty days before attempting to enter the State of Kentucky is hereby prohibited. The State Livestock Inspectors are hereby notified of this quarantine and it becomes their duty to inspect all horses, mules and jack stock entering the State, and any railroad, transportation Co., corporation or persons found violating this order shall be so notified by the Livestock Inspectors and said shipment of animal or animals found coming into the State contrary to the provisions of this order shall be immediately removed from the borders of the State at the expense of the shipper or person responsible for bringing same into Kentucky. Upon refusal or failure of any railroad transportation company, corporation, company, corporation, or person to comply with the orders of this board under this rule, when notified by the County Livestock Inspector or State Livestock Inspector, the Prosecuting Attorney or County Attorney of any county is hereby authorized to proceed against same under the Act of 1910, creating the Livestock Sanitary Board and providing for penalties for the violation of its orders.

"The same quarantine is ordered against the stock yards of Saint Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Mo., Chicago, East St. Louis and Indianapolis, unless shipment is accompanied by a sworn statement of the original shipper and also of the secretary or general manager of the stock yards where said shipment originates from Kentucky that the horses mules or jack stock being shipped into Kentucky have not been in or passed through the States of Nebraska or Kansas within a period of sixty days."

Game Wardens F. M. Ehlers and Dennis Gleason arrested John E. Levere and his chauffeur, Leo Harrison, of Cincinnati, on the charge of fishing in the White-water river without a non-resident fishing license. Justice John Probst fined each $34.50—Lawrenceburg Press.

Miss Bessie Cleveland, who resides on Delmar-pl., in Lexington, was awarded $5,000 damages in the United States Court in Cincinnati against the Cincinnati Traction Co., for injuries alleged to have been sustained last Memorial Day, when an automobile in which she was riding was struck by a street car.

Confederate Pensioners' Requests.

The 3,300 applicants for Confederate pensions are clamoring for their money, and Capt. W. J. Stone, State Pension Agent, gave out a statement, in which he declares in substance that many of the applicants apparently have an idea that all that was necessary was for them to produce an affidavit proving they were in the Confederate army, forward it to the department and receive a check for their money.

Of the 3,300 applicants a majority have been investigated by Captain Stone and of those approximately 55 per cent have been found to come within the law. Another 20 per cent, by their own proof and by that secured from the War Department at Washington, do not come within the law, while proof of twenty-five per cent or not complete.

The Pension Board, composed of the Governor, Auditor and Secretary of State, has not approved any of the finally. The Board will meet as soon as it can, said Capt. Stone, for final adjudication. Capt. Stone also defended the pension law from the criticism that it is a burden on the State. "Its critics are premature in their judgment," he declared. "The pension law has cost the State nothing so far, and when they are paid they will fall due quarterly, and only a comparatively few probably will be allowed at one time. No deficits certainly have been caused in the treasury by Confederate pensioners up to now."

Although nothing official has been said by the State, the probabilities are that it will be two years away before all the pensions are allowed; although some of them may be passed upon soon. The last of course will be those in which proof is not complete and will have to be sent back for further proof.

Capt. Stone said that as soon as the Pension Board allows a claim the pensioner will be notified, and when one is rejected the applicant will be informed of what proof is lacking.—Ex.

BANKS TOCKHOLDERS

Liabie for Double the Amount They Own In Case the Bank Fails.

Frankfort, October 17.—Stockholders of banks in Kentucky are liable in case of the failure of the bank for double the amount of the stock they own, even if the stock has not been voted. The Appellate court so held today in the case of Robertson and others against the Owensboro Savings and Bank and Trust Company's receiver.

Robertson and the other appellants had purchased $1,500 in this institution which failed, and they refused to pay twice the amount of the stock, on the grounds that the stock had not participated in the management of the bank in as much as it had not been voted. The Appellate Court said it made no difference whether the stock was voted or not, the stockholders under the statute are liable for twice the amount of the stock in case of a failure.

Holding that the services of Dr. J. R. Scarborough, as Health Officer of Hickman County, were not rendered in accordance with the requirements of the statute, the Court of Appeals reversed the judgment of the Hickman Circuit Court in the case of Hickman County against Scarborough, and ordered a new trial. Scarborough was Health Officer of Hickman County in 1900, and the Fiscal Court entered an order providing that the Health Officer should be paid $1.50 for each call made within 10 miles, or 25 cents per mile, and $2 for traveling over one mile, and $2 for quarantining and $2 for fumigating after infectious diseases. After discharging his duties as Health Officer for six months Dr. Scarborough rendered the Fiscal Court a bill for $224, which the Court refused to pay upon the advice of the County Attorney. The lower court decided that Dr. Scarborough was entitled to the amount he sued to recover.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the system, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guaranteed by all dealers. (Advertisement.)

Take Advantage of This.

It may not be generally known to farmers and others in Kentucky that the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station is well equipped to test samples that may be submitted with a view to the learning of their quality either as to purity or germination. A new laboratory for this work has been planned and is now nearing completion. With the incubators and other appliances are established it will be one of the most complete in this country. To get a fair test it is necessary that the sample be taken from a bulk lot after a thorough mixing of the seeds.

Col. Jack Chinn has sold his stock farm, Leonatus, in Mercer county, situated on the Harrodsburg and Lexington turnpike, containing 235 acres, to Bonta Brothers, at a reported price of $135,000.

To 40,000 Burley Tobacco Growers Stockholders in Strater Bros.' Branch Factory

Here are ten brands of tobacco. All of you know their worth, for you supply the leaf. It comes from your own tobacco farms. Most of you smoke or chew one of these brands, for they represent the cream of your crops. You know of none better, none richer, and you know that each sale brings a profit to you. You are partners in each of these brands. Here's a way to increase your profits on each.

40,000 Partner-Salesmen

We want 40,000 more salesmen and you. Mr. Grower, are one that we want. We want you to work with us, to help sell these brands, and thus increase your revenue from them. Your cooperation, individually, can result in gigantic sales. Here's how it works out.

Let Each Man Tell Ten Friends

Let each of you growers tell ten friends what you know of Strater Bros.' Branch Brands, the brands for which you grow the leaf. Always keep one of these brands in your pocket and give to these friends to try. Explain that the leaves were the pick of your crop and that no better crops are grown. Point out the reasons why these brands.

TO ALL DEALERS WHO SELL TOBACCO These brands of tobacco are famous sellers as all who sell them know. They are made from the best, from the cream of the crops, from forty thousand farms. They form the greatest reputation known, a steady source of profit. Put them into your stock for a trial and see what they do. You will sell them for years if you sell them one week.

For Smoking—GOLDEN GLOW—PENNY POST—FULL PAY.

Good Roads.

The people in Carter county are in the midst of an active good roads campaign which will be carried up to the November election. At that time a proposition will be submitted to the voters for the issue of bonds to the amount of $50,000 for road improvement. An address issued by the Carter County Good Roads Association recites that in the last thirty years the county has spent more than $100,000 on the roads with no improvement in their condition. It is explained that a bond issue can be carried with no increase in the rate of taxation, as the plan would be to issue the bonds in installments, issuing such amount each year as the court thinks could be spent to the best advantage in that year, first paying the interest and then laying aside a fund each year so as to accumulate enough to take up the bonds as they mature.

The Good Roads Association declares the road question to be the paramount issue before the people of Carter county, and puts the question: "Will we go on under the old system of shoveling $3,000 per year into ruts to be washed out the following winter and spring, or will we be wise enough to profit by the example of our Boyd county neighbors, change our system and enjoy good roads? A system under which more than $100,000 has been expended in thirty years with no appreciable results in highway betterment certainly should be discarded for some sensible method of procedure. If Carter county now spending $8000 a year on her roads, should continue the old system for another thirty years, she will have expended about a quarter of a million dollars, assuming there is no increase in taxable property. Does any one in Carter county believe the future promises any better results than have been attained in the past through this practice of shoveling $8,000 per year into the ruts? If there are any voters so credulous they may properly vote against the bond issue. If, on the contrary, they want a better system that will insure better roads and less waste of the taxpayers' hard-earned money they should follow the advice of the Carter County Good Roads Association and vote for bonds.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Falling of the Leaves.

Fall—and everywhere the sights and sounds of falling. In the woods through the cool, silvery air, the leaves, so indispensable once, so useless now. Bright day after bright day the night after dripping night, the never-ending filtering or gusty fall of leaves. The fall of walnuts, dropping from bare boughs with muted boom into the deep grass. The fall of the hickorynut, rattling noisily down through the scaly limbs and scattering its hulls among the stones of the creek below. The fall of buckeyes, rolling like balls of mahogany into the little dust paths made by sheep, in the hot months, when they had sought those roofs of leaves. The fall of acorns, leaping out of their matted green cups as they strike the rooky earth. The fall of red haw, persimmon and pawpaw, and the odoriferous wild plum in its valley chinks. The fall of the seeds whatsoever of the forest, now made ripe in their high places and sent back to the ground there to be folded in against the time when they shall rise again as the living generation; the coming downward flight of the seeds in the many-colored woods all over the quiet land.—James Lane Allen.

Keep Mice From Trees.

With a good sharp hoe or spade remove all grass at least four feet from the trunk of apple, plum or other trees that are apt to be girtled by mice. It is a good plan to protect small trees with wire netting, or by throwing a few shovelfuls of clean dirt around the trunk of the tree. Then after the first snow, trim around the tree so that there will be no place for mice to find a nesting place. Thousands of trees were killed in Minnesota last season by mice girdling them during the winter. In almost every case trees grew in weeds or grass which gave a ready refuge for mice. Cut out all dead trees before the leaves fall. This will destroy the nests of insects which will lay the foundation for much more injury next season.—Ex.

Horse Disease Checked.

As a result of the rapid spread of the horse disease that is causing the death of many horses in Kansas and some portions of neighboring states, the Kansas Agricultural College is working night and day in preparing vaccine, which is the only successful preventive that is known. They are making the vaccine at the rate of 5,000 to 6,000 doses every twenty-four hours yet it is hard to supply the demand for it. They send it free where it is needed. Of 2,030 horses vaccinated at that point with the vaccine, only nineteen died. Two-fifths of the animals vaccinated were from herds in which many animals had died.

If you have young children you have perhaps noticed that disorders of the stomach are their most common ailment. To correct this you will find Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets excellent. BURLEY-GROWERS

Start Movement to Cut Out the Next Year's Crop.

Lexington, Oct. 18.—A group of advantage of a no tobacco crop in 1913 movement, representing 11 counties of the Burley District met here today and decided that if they can get 60 per cent of the total acreage signed to a cut-out pledge the plan will be a success. Dr. A. W. Walder of Bath County, presided over the meeting. M. P. Bourne, of Owen County, is Secretary of the Cutout Club.

Shooting Up the Town.

Three colored boys with their hides full of bad whisky undertook to shoot up Burlington last Saturday shortly after dark. Besides discharging a pistol several times they indulged in loud and boisterous language, which made it evident that they were hunting trouble. When in front of his residence J. M. Eddins called them down and accused them of conduct, and one of them became too saucy and Mr. Eddins hauled him out of the buggy in which the trio was riding and proceeded to give him what he deserved and probably would have gone to the extreme had his two sons not stopped him when they thought he had chastised the boy enough. The experience with Mr. Eddins brought the three negroes to their senses and they changed their course of procedure, each one denying that he did the shooting. Monday morning County Judge Cason held a court of inquiry but only two of the three lawbreakers answered to the summons, the one believed to have done the shooting having skipped out. The County Judge and County Attorney determined to put a stop to a course of misconduct that appears to be increasing on the part of several of the colored population, and to be on the safe side they would better change their ways for the future.

Butter In Storage.

It was recently discovered that the New York food speculators now have in storage at New York and Jersey City more than $10,000,000 in dairy products alone, which are to be peddled out to the public before next spring at prices as high as the market will stand.

Although the prices of these dairy products, both in and out of cold storage, are, and have been, unusually high, the price of butter is now selling in New York City at a higher price, both wholesale and retail, than it did at this time last fall.

Some of the food speculators in New York City have private coolers that hold as much as 17,000 tubs of butter.

A large amount of poultry is going into cold storage in New York and Jersey City, but there are no available figures as to the quantity held.

The Frankfort prison will be made a State reformatory and in the future all life long term prisoners will be sent to Eddyville, according to a statement of reforms planned in the State prison system by Daniel O'Sullivan, chairman of the Board of Prison Commissioners. According to the plans outlined in the statement, trade schools will be established in the Frankfort institution, and a certain portion of each day will be devoted to the education of prisoners. He also says that negotiations are now on for a farm where tubercular prisoners and those suffering from other ailments will be kept busy with agricultural pursuits, and which is expected to yield enough produce to supply all the institutions under the control of Prison Commissioners. The State College land will lend expert assistance.

Stanford, Ky.—Ed. C. Elam, a well-known young farmer of the Spayne section of Garrard county, died at his home of what many of the physicians who saw him, diagnosed as a virulent case of hydrophobia. The young man is said to have been bitten or scratched by a negro in an altercation in which the two became engaged at the farm of Dave Dudderar, near the Lincoln county line about two weeks ago. Little attention was paid to the wound at the time. About a week ago, however, early symptoms of rabies are said to have developed. Calvin Elam, his brother, was killed by a live wire in Paris a short time ago.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggist's opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Enos Lillard, of Saratoga, Ind., "and consider it the best on the market."—For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

Died—Mrs. J. T. Percival aged 74 years, at her home in Clinton Co. Tuesday. Funeral at Walton Baptist church yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. J. W. Hogan of Union, and Mrs. Wm. Wilson of Covington, were the guests of the former's daughter Mrs. Geo. Rice part of last week.

Dr. H. W. Hamilton left Wednesday for Chicago where he will remain a month taking a post graduate course in his profession of dentistry.

Rev. John Allphin, of Crittenden, was here Monday, enroute home from Jonesville, Owen Co., where he held services Sunday at the Methodist church.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Jones, of Covington, a fine son, October 15th. This makes eight grandchildren that W. Lee Johnson is blessed with.

Miss Lovenia Edwards left Tuesday for Madisonville, Ky., on a visit to one of her college mates and expects to spend a couple of weeks in western Kentucky.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Grinstead, of Hamilton, were visitors here Monday on their return from Louisville, where they spent last week attending the international convention of the Christian church.

Mrs. Sallie Rees, of Erlanger, arrived here last week on a visit to her aunt, Mrs. J. B. Doubman, and to assist her in nursing her husband, who is very ill with little hope of recovery.

Dr. C. C. Metcalfe, E. K. Stephens, E. C. Green, Judge Strother, and W. R. Miller attended the dedication of the new court house at Independence last Monday, and report a large attendance and a very pleasant time.

The protracted meeting at Walton Baptist church, under the able preaching of Rev. H. C. Wayman, the pastor, closed last week. There were two additions. Mrs. Bruce Dudgeon, and Samuel H. Henderson, of near Crittenden.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cramm, of Bogue, Kansas, arrived here Tuesday to visit his parents W. H. Cramm and wife, and will locate at Peach Grove, Pendleton county, where he has bought a farm, preferring Kentucky to Kansas.

The tobacco crop in this quarter is curing up in very fine manner and much of it is nearly ready for stripping for general use. The indication is that the crop in this locality will be the best in quality and weight raised for many years.

Mrs. J. M. Stamler left Saturday morning for Louisville to attend the National Convention of the Christian church, and spent this week at Hopkinsville attending the Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star, the ladies masonic lodge.

Henry C. Diers spent most of the week at Troy, Ohio, arranging for the packing of large amount of orders for nursery stock he has taken this season for fall delivery, the orders amounting to over eight thousand dollars.

Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Bedinger, of Ely, Nevada, spent last week here, guests of his brother, John C. Bedinger, and wife. Mr. Bedinger is taking a post graduate course in a medical college in Cincinnati and will remain there about a month.

NOTICE—I will be absent from my office at Walton, Ky., for a month dating from Oct. 23d, going to Chicago to take a post graduate course in dentistry. My patients will please bear this in mind and not expect to find me at my office during that period.

Dr. H. W. Hamilton, Dentist.

Mrs. B. K. Menefee attended the international convention of the Christian church at Louisville the past week as delegate from Walton church, and spent this week at Hopkinsville, attending the Grand Chapter of Eastern Star at the delegate from the Walton Chapter, enjoying both events to a high degree.

W. B. Johnson spent part of last week at Lexington attending the live stock sale of J. F. Cook and purchased two fine registered Jennie Bessie Lee and Jessie Clark, and Mr. Johnson will keep them here stating that it would pay to raise some fine mule stock here and get some of the prevailing fancy prices for such stock.

Dr. Joseph Baker, who is connected with the sales department of the Burley Tobacco Company at Lexington, spent Sunday here, guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. F. Curley and left Monday for Chattanooga, Tenn., on a business trip.

Mrs. Baker accompanied her husband here and will remain for several days on a visit to relatives and friends.

Chas. L. Griffith has been exhibiting some fine specimens of the corn raised this season on his farm near Verona. It is the Boone County White variety and several ears measured 13 inches in length and each weighed nearly two pounds. Mr. Griffith and his brother, T. J. Griffith, are selecting a large quantity of the corn for seed as it is superior to that raised during an average year.

Francis Earl Curley and his charming bride, who arrived here last week from San Francisco, California, on a visit to his old home and many friends, are the guests of his father, Thomas F. Curley and family. Mr. Curley was married Oct. 10th, at San Francisco, to Miss Amy Irene Trippe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene John Trippe, of Tucson, Arizona, where Mr. Curley is a prominent member of the legal profession, and he has made his home for a number of years, where he and his bride will make their home.

Mr. Curley's numerous friends join in one glad wish for a long, happy and prosperous life for him and his bonny bride.

Dr. B. K. Menefee and Dr. H. W. Hamilton made a trip to Covington in their automobile one night last week, and experienced all of the joys and what an automobile will do when it determines not to run. The first mishap was at Independence, or rather the other side of that town when it gave evidence of not wanting to continue the journey, but by coaxing and some assistance the gentlemen arrived in Covington with two punctured tires. The machine was apparently repaired, and they resumed their journey homeward at a late hour, the auto running splendidly until outside of the city when it again became obstreperous, which on investigation was found to want of gasoline. Again the journey was resumed and again the machine put in its objections by running a part of the time on three cylinders and then on two, the auto running splendidly and a jump on the latter combination. Both gentlemen lost their temper, and in retaliation the machine refused to go any farther. Starting to return to Covington the machine resumed its wonted activity with astonishing fervor, bringing all of its engines into play and the boys turned it around and started homeward, but again the machine registered its "kick" and would not go any farther. Covington it was again turned around and it reached the garage in Covington where it was left until morning while the gentlemen sought the comforts of a bed at 3:30 in the morning.

Dr. Hamilton put his trust in the L. & N. Railroad for the safety of his return home in the morning, and Dr. Menefee tried the same route in the afternoon.

Killed by Electricity.

One more home has been saddened, many more hearts grief stricken and one more son returned to his mother earth. Dust thou art to dust returneth.

On Sunday Oct. 19th, Frank Vaulandingham was killed by electricity in a copper mine at Hurley New Mexico. One of his duties as an electrician in the mine was to test the lighting arresters and in testing these arresters he accidentally touched one of the live wires and was electrocuted. The remains were sent to the home of his grandmother near Walton, and interred in the Independence cemetery, Tuesday, Oct. 21st.

The deceased was a son of Wm. and Minnie Vaulandingham. Born Dec. 15th, 1876. He is survived by his mother, grandmother Mrs. Jane Northcutt of Walton, two sisters, Mrs. Forest Stephens of Walton, and Mrs. Randall Elliott, of Oxford, Ohio, and two half brothers, Thos. R. Benson, of Abarkata, North Dakota, and Bryan Benson, of Walton.

RICHWOOD.

Walter and Wiley Grubbs visited near Crescent Springs, Sunday. B. B. Alphin bought some big cattle from O. P. Glacken a few days since. Ed. Rice and Walter Grubbs made a business trip to Covington, Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Carpenter entertained the young folks with a hop one night the past week. D. B. Dobbins and Miss Lillie Hammond spent from Monday to Friday attending State Grange in Covington. A combination of Hebron, Burlington and Kildville ball players showed Richwood how the Boston Red Sox did the Giants up, by a score of 15 to 8, Saturday last. Hossman and Tanner, and Uts and Carpenter were the batteries. Excelsior Grange members, friends and neighbors, cut D. B. Dobbins' corn for him Wednesday night. The family wishes the Recorder to thank one and all for their kind efforts and they appreciate it for D. B. has been very poorly for the last six weeks.

WILLOUGHBY.

Born, to Elmer Jarrell and wife, a fine girl. Mrs. Belle Clure is very much improved. Will Lacy is engaged in some kind of work at Lawrenceburg. Mrs. Belle Clure and sons spent Sunday with her sister, Viola Rogers. Lee Omer Loudon entertained the young folks with a dance, Saturday night. Mrs. Forest Brown, Gertrude and Mary Truitt, were shopping in Aurora, Saturday. Jas. Smith, wife and son, Julius, spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Maurer. Chas. Rude and his children spent Friday night with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Rue. Wilbur Burris, of Lawrenceburg, spent Saturday and Sunday with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lottie Rowland. Willie Snelling, Jr., and wife, of Grant, visited Mr. Snelling's brother, Pote and wife, in Indiana, several days last week. Jas. Smith and family entertained Sunday, the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, and Daley, Henry Ranes and wife and the former's parents, James Smith, Sr., and wife and Walter Slayback. Capt. Jas. Ribert Clure spent several days with home folks, last week. Elbert has been away for more than two months and every one was more than delighted to see him. He has gone again on the Steamer Cincinnati, where he assists and is learning to be a pilot.

R. D. No. 2.

Carl Cason went to Rising Sun, Friday. Andrew Acra's condition remains about the same. Stanley Stephens is digging a cistern for Blant Pope. Alfred Cason was taken violently ill Sunday morning. Chas. White is having an addition built to his barn. Mrs. Belle Cason and Miss Leona were Friday visitors at Burlington. Jas. D. Acra drove his fat cattle to the Cincinnati market last week. Mrs. William Clure spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. Jas. Barlow. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Eddins entertained a very large number of relatives and friends last Sunday. Mrs. L. S. Pope returned home Friday after spending several days with her daughters, Mrs. Kim Clure and Mrs. Chas. Kelly. Bud Goodridge and wife, of Burlington; Mrs. Will Goodridge and two sons and John Cloud spent Sunday with William Carpenter and family. Will Rice and family entertained Mrs. Emily Berkshire, Mrs. Edgar Berkshire, Mrs. R. S. Lowe, Misses Anne and Lucy Gaines, Mrs. Lizzie Aylor and Mrs. Jennie Clure, Friday. The farmers telephone line has been almost out of business the past two weeks. The use of the telephone has become such a necessity that it is very inconvenient when it is not kept in good condition.

ERLANGER.

Little Anna Southern, who was taken sick Sept. 23, is still at home. John Elnk, of Walton, is doing considerable painting in Erlanger. Mrs. Robert Baker is seriously ill at her home on Erlanger road. Miss Katie Ely is kindly attending her. Friends and relatives of Mrs. Della Uts, of Lexington, who visit here, were very glad to learn that she is recovering nicely and expects to return on a visit to this district in the near future.

BULLITTSVILLE.

Husking corn is the order. Mrs. Jas. T. Gaines entertained several of her neighbors, one day last week. Misses Pearl Botta and Martha Randall were last Saturday night guests at J. E. Botta's. John Cropper, Mrs. R. C. Gaines and daughter, have gone to Petersburg, Kentucky. Rev. J. P. Jenkins, of Elizabethtown, this State, is holding a protracted meeting at Bullittsville. Mrs. Bettie Clure entertained her son, James, of Rushville, Indiana, and several other guests, last Sunday.

PLATTSBURG.

The continued fine weather is to the liking of the farmers. G. A. Gaines Bros., purchased a manure spreader from Crouch & L. A. Smith has been delivering some nice porkers to Ruth, the Petersburg butcher. R. A. Huey shipped a bunch of fat hogs to the Cincinnati market one day last week. R. B. Huey and tenants sold their crop of tobacco to Smith, Rouse of Bellevue, at 10 cents around. The small grain and grass that have been sown are coming up nicely and will get a good start before winter. E. A. Grant, not pleased with the corn harvest he recently purchased from Stanley Crouch. He says it breaks too many ears from the stalks. Mr. Editor, does the new game law require that after a person has secured a license, he must secure a written permit from each landlord upon whose premises he desires to hunt? You have to have the permission of the land owner.—Ed. Fred Birkie moved last week from Bullittsville to Gaines Bros' place on S. L. Lane, where he is in charge of the blacksmith shop recently vacated by Homer Shinkle. He is an experienced workman and asks that he be given a trial. Glad to report Mrs. Charles Shinkle, who successfully underwent a very serious surgical operation last week, is doing as nicely as could be expected. Her sister, Miss Cecil Northcott, of Christ hospital, Cincinnati, and her brother, Dr. Northcott, of Louisville, are in constant attendance.

GUNPOWDER.

J. H. Aylor is numbered among the sick. Ed. Carpenter's new house is nearly completed. B. C. Surface called on this writer last Monday. Lloyd Tanner is attending Nelson College, Cincinnati. L. M. Rouse was a business caller at our burg last Saturday. Chas. Aylor and family were the guests of this writer, last Sunday. Those who have not gathered their seed corn should do it now and there will be no trouble about it. H. L. Tanner is a resident of Erlanger, having moved there last Tuesday. His son, C. T. Tanner, will occupy his farm. Rev. P. F. Fasold, of York-Pa., will visit the Boone Co. Charge next Sunday and preach as follows: At Ebenezer in the forenoon at 10:30; at Hopeful 2:30 p. m. and at Hebron at 7 p. m. Everybody is invited to attend these services. After a lingering illness of several months, Mrs. Susan Aylor passed peacefully to her reward last Friday, the 25th inst. She was born in Virginia, Feb. 22, 1821, and had reached the advanced age of 91 years, 8 months and three days. She was married to Lewis Aylor, December 17th, 1840. To this union six children were born, four survive to mourn her departure—Mrs. Sarah J. Rice, Mrs. Susan D. Surface, J. H. and L. P. Aylor, the others and her husband having preceded her to the grave several years. She united with the Baptist church at Union, Oct. 10, 1893, and was a consistent member of that body until death. During her illness she bore all her tribulations with very patiently. The funeral services were conducted at Hopeful last Sunday by Rev. Brown, pastor of the Baptist church at Florence, after which the remains were interred by those of her husband in the Hopeful cemetery. The family extend their heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends, who so kindly assisted during the illness and death of their mother.

Warning Notes.

Owensboro—Chief of Police Roy Nichols gave orders to the police to put a stop to all "street spooning." He says that arrests will be made if street flirting is not stopped at once.

D. B. WALLACE, OF WARSAW.

Republican nominee for Congress in the Sixth Congressional District of Kentucky, respectfully solicits the compliments of your vote at the election on Tuesday, November 5th. He has resided in the district all his life, and for twenty-eight years was publisher of the Independent at Warsaw, and was President of the Kentucky Press Association, 1906. He has at all times been an advocate of the best interests of the people. Mr. Wallace has always been a Republican, but has never been an offensive partisan, and he has the respect and esteem of all of the Democrats of his acquaintance. Mr. Wallace accepted the nomination with a full knowledge that there is no chance for success in this district with the overwhelming Democratic majority, but he would appreciate the compliment of a vote from all, irrespective of their party affiliation.

GRANT R. D. 1.

Fur buyers are paying $2.50 for No. 1 black skunk pelts. The sick are all on the mend and are glad to report. A. Rogers made a business trip to Cincinnati today. Monday. Hubert Gaines, of Burlington, was a Sunday caller in our town. It is said that Dan McCarty cleaned up on the bunch in the fox hunt, Saturday night. Ray Cook spent several days last week with relatives at Ferry creek, Cincinnati and Newport. White and wife were the guests of the latter's parents here several days the past week. Eph Clure is having a section of concrete fence built in front of his property on Water street. The river rises at night and falls in the day time, owing to the manipulation of the wickets at Fernick dam. D. C. Pope is getting quite a reputation as a trader. He recently traded a 40-pound porker for a gold watch. Colin Kelly is one of the patrons of R. D. 1 that don't forget the carrier, and knows how well appreciated are small favors. Farmers have made good use of the beautiful weather, and most of them are ready, but are not wishing for a bad spell of weather. Elijah Hodges has purchased Marion Scott's residence above Rabbit Hash, and Marion has purchased Ira Hodges farm in East Bend. The R. H. postoffice will be transferred to the postoffice here the 31st of this month. Patrons of that office will be served by R. F. D. 1. Mrs. Charles White, of Ferry creek, who has been under the care of a physician for the past two months, we are glad to report much better. School began here this morning, the scarlet fever scare having subsided. Those who had the disease had it in a mild form. There were only three known cases. The patrons of R. D. 1 have a very commendable habit of remembering the carrier with a slice of goodies left from a big dinner. It certainly is appreciated by the carrier. Thurston Rice, the McVie merchant, is improving his premises by building a new porch in front of his store. T. B. Rice is the successor to M. B. Rice and is running a huckster wagon in connection with his store trade. The extension to the Grant R. D. will benefit a large number of farmers, who have hitherto been practically without any mail service, and the way they are receiving the mail on the road condition shows that they appreciate the service of an every day delivery of the mail. Chas. Saturday, as we rounded in off our trip, we met Caddy Maurer going toward Rabbit Hash on foot. We supposed he was to speak for Wilson and Marshall at the K. of P. Hall at Rabbit Hash that night, as Caddy is a dyed in the wool Democrat, and was never known to vote any other way, but the straight ticket. We finally learned that he was forming a Wilson and Marshall club of the young voters. Caddy is a hustler in anything he undertakes.

Col. Roosevelt is plaintiff in a suit for $10,000 for libel brought against a Michigan editor who published that the ex-President was "intemperate in language and liquor."—Courier-Journal.

RABBIT HASH.

Fine weather, this. Our mail is now two hours later. Two of Es. Portwood's children have typhoid fever. The river is rising and plenty of coal is on the way. Fred Benson has returned to his home at Jacksonville, Ill. J. J. Stephens, who has been quite sick, is getting better. Mrs. Joe Riggs is getting along nicely since she was operated on. Born, to the wife of Robert Aylor, October 24, a girl—Louise. John Taylor, of Big Bone, was in town a few hours last Wednesday. Harry Acra's children have about recovered from their sick spell. Marion Scott has sold his house and lot here in town to E. M. Hodges. Mrs. Aggie Walton, of Rising Sun, spent last week at E. L. Stephens'. Ira Hodges sold his house and ten acres of ground in East Bend to Marion Scott. Our friend, James Beard, contemplates moving to Indiana in the near future. Miss Grace Sutton was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Colin Kelly, last week. Miss Inez McCloskey, of Scottsboro, Ind., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Maylye Kelly. Chas. Bodie, Sr., shipped an 800 lb. hog to Cincinnati, Wednesday night. Chas. Craig, Jr., was thrown from a load of hay and severely hurt, last Monday. Mrs. Robt. Hodges is visiting her father, Ogden, in the north Bend neighborhood. Since Chas. Bodie has been giving dancing lessons he steps like a two-year-old. C. G. Riddell was visiting his sister, Mrs. Harriet Rice, near Idlewild, last week. Mrs. Will Kirtley and daughter, Miss Blanche, spent Saturday and Sunday in Aurora. There has been about ten thousand bushels of coal hauled from Grant to this neighborhood. Taylor Hodges took the third degree and Chas. Maurer the second degree, of P. lodge last Saturday night. The Pythian Sisters gave a chicken soup last Wednesday. A good sized crowd was in attendance and they made $100. Chas. Maurer, of Grant, and Chas. Smith, of Middle creek, were gazing on the wonders of our city-fied village, last Sunday. Henry Clure and Pepper Smith have been hauling about a pound of tobacco in this neighborhood. Ten cents is about the average price paid. The postoffice at this place has been discontinued and all mail goes to Grant. Uncle Sam. has just wiped the name of Rabbit Hash off of the map. Since our mail route has been discontinued, we have more well pleased people in this precinct than we ever had before at one time. We will see how they appreciate it after next Tuesday. If the roster of Rabbit Hash doesn't beat next Tuesday every man that votes regardless of party, should vote for Hon. A. B. Rouse for Congress. If he doesn't beat Tuesday for several days enough for Rabbit Hash to receive every vote that is cast at the polls that day, and we will assure them that he will not quit trying to do for his constituents either. Hurrah for Rouse. Mr. Editor, we are going to vote against Wilson for president next Tuesday for several reasons and I hope the rest of my friends will do the same. If Wilson is elected what will become of all of our trusts? He will surely do away with them and the common people can get everything so much cheaper. If he is elected it will enable the poor people to dress more neatly and warmly. It will never do to help the poor working man, so much, and consequently, we are going to vote for Mr. Rouse and kick the poor man's nose to the grindstone.

R. D. No. 3.

Sorry to report John Utzinger ill. Mrs. Alfred Ogden has been seriously ill. Miss Alice Rittmann visited relatives in the city last week. Earl Peake and wife and John McVie and wife, of Lexington, the protracted meeting closed at Sand Run, Friday night with four additions. Erud. Henry and family have been entertaining relatives from near Rising Sun. Miss Mattie Leek, of Grant, spent Thursday and Friday with Miss L. McNeely and family. Miss Stella Brown spent Saturday night and Sunday with Thos. Bradley and family at Riverside. Dr. R. A. of Bullittsville, and Miss Amanda Koons attended the State Grange at Covington, last week. Misses Mattie Leek and Ida Goodridge, of Ferry creek, spent Saturday with Manlius Goodridge and family. Mrs. Chas. Utzinger and little daughter were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brown and family, one day last week. Mrs. E. J. Ogden and little son Joseph, and Mrs. Chas. Schorn, spent the evening of Monday with Clinton Riddell and wife at Hamilton, Ohio.

HUME.

Arch Noel and wife were Sunday guests of Earl Ashcraft. Miss Kate Stewart, of South Fork, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Sam Johnson, near Petersburg. Mr. and Mrs. Omer Wilson and three sons, of Hume, Illinois, are guests of his mother, Mrs. Nick Wilson. Fennell Carpenter is home from Covington after a visit of several weeks there with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Fennell. Mrs. Katie Baker Alphin, widow of the late B. J. Alphin, died Oct. 23d, 1912, at her home on Mud Lick creek in this county. She was born July 23, 1819, hence she was in her 94 year. She was a "good copse" in 1844 and has been a consistent member of the South Fork church ever since that date. In 1848 she was married to B. J. Alphin and to this union were born ten children, six of whom survive her, three sons, A. A. Alphin and J. S. Alphin, of Galatin, and E. B. Alphin, our own ex-sheriff at Walton this county; and three daughters, Mrs. Chas. Hume, mother of Sheriff B. B. Hume, Mrs. Robt. Roberts and Mrs. John Fennell. The husband of aunt Katie, who was better known as "Squire or Uncle Ben" owned acres of fertile land around the old home place. He was well known during his life time. Aunt Katie has seen more of the sorrow and joys of living than had any to the lot of most people. At this God-fearing woman, through prayers and tears, was blessed by the joy of knowing that her daughters are strong christian characters and that all her sons and daughters are members of the church of which she was a member for sixty-eight years. Aunt Katie was the daughter of the late Edwin Baker. She leaves one sister, the widow of A. E. Hume, who is the last of this family. By this union of the Alphin and Baker families was the union of two of our earliest settlers and the union of the families of strong christian character. The younger people of this day ought to treasure the memories and reminiscences of these illustrious forefathers. Mrs. Alphin has living 21 grandchildren, 22 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Edgar Riley at South Fork Christian church at 11 a. m., last Saturday, after which the body was placed in Hance Hill cemetery in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Card of Thanks.—We hereby desire to express our sincere and heartfelt thanks to our relatives and friends for their sympathy and kindness shown in the loss of our beloved mother; also to the donors of the beautiful floral offerings, to Bro. Riley for his kind consoling words to Mr. Chas. Hume, and to the many men in which he conducted the funeral. The Family.

HATHAWAY.

Farmers are gathering corn. Heavy frosts here last week. Some tobacco has been stripped. This writer made a business trip to Rising Sun, last Thursday. L. J. Riley, of Chicago, is here on a visit and looking after business. J. L. Stephens and wife spent last Sunday with M. W. Ryle and family at Union. Elijah Stephens entertained his brother, T. P. Stephens and family, last Sunday in the forenoon. Misses Julia Stephens and sister, Ida May, went to Rising Sun shopping last Saturday. Geo. R. Ryle and wife, who returned home last Tuesday from a visit to Galatin county. Nathan Clements and family spent last Friday night with Geo. L. McNeely and wife. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. White spent Sunday last very pleasantly with John D. McNeely and family. Geo. L. Smith and wife and Mrs. Cynthia Jackson spent last Friday with J. C. White and wife. Jay McMillan returned last Saturday morning from Cincinnati, where he is attending a business college. Jas. Arramith and family and John Sullivan and family were guests of Mr. Sullivan and family last Sunday. G. M. Allen, of Walton, is spending a few days in the Big Bone neighborhood visiting his relatives. Mrs. Annie Ryle, of Latonia, will spend a week or ten days at the home of her father, and her brother and family near here. Wm. Phillips has just a few days in the Big Bone neighborhood visiting her brother, Robt. Allen, and her many friends and relatives of that part of the county. A very quiet and beautiful wedding was solemnized at Big Bone Baptist church last Sunday at 11 o'clock noon, immediately after the services. The happy couple were Mr. Lucian Stephens and Miss Weale Marshall, who were united in holy matrimony by Rev. Wm. McMillan. Their attendants were Miss Hattie Marshall, bride's maid a sister of the bride, and Mr. Wm. Bagby, groomsmen, a friend of the groom. After the wedding they were congratulated by their many friends who were present. May happiness and joy attend them along their journey of life in the wish of the writer.

WALTON.

Miss Jeanette Chambers, one of our popular and efficient teachers in the graded school near the sick list, and her position is being supplied by Mrs. Alice C. Booth who has been employed by the school board to fill the position until Miss Chambers recovers. Judge J. G. Tomlin and Jno. L. yeast spent part of the week in Covington attending the circuit court as attorneys in the case of the stockholders of the Burley Tobacco Society against the officers of the Burley Tobacco Company. In a petition to have the books of the company examined and a receiver appointed for the company. Judge Tracy is sitting in the hearing of the case. John E. Williams and family are arranging to move to Walton from their farm near Verona, and will occupy the property Mrs. Williams recently purchased from Samuel C. Hicks. They will be gladly welcomed to Walton by all our people as they are a valuable acquisition to the community. Mr. Williams is purchasing tobacco on contract and has arranged for the purchase of about three million lbs. of tobacco for one of the manufacturing plants at prices ranging from seven to fifteen cents per pound. Rivelto F. DeMolay received the appointment as rural mail carrier on the route out of Walton, succeeding A. Kirtley Johnson, who resigned to enter the ministry of the Baptist church. Mr. DeMolay passed the civil service examination at a very high average. The highest of the many applicants, only four of those passed the examination at an average to entitle them to be placed on the eligible list. About twenty applicants took the rural mail service examination in Boone county at the last examination. Mr. DeMolay has been filling the position as rural mail carrier for some time and has been giving excellent satisfaction.

Personal Mention.

Dr. F. H. Peddicord is attending the big medical meeting at Louisville. Mrs. Eliza Rouse is visiting her sister, Mrs. F. P. Walton, in Cincinnati. R. K. John Hogan, of Hebron neighborhood, was in Burlington, last Saturday afternoon. He says his father, James Hogan, died Saturday, is contemplating a visit to his old home in Ireland. The Bellevue and Burlington foot ball teams will play at Burlington park tomorrow, Friday afternoon. For Sale—Fresh cow and calf, also, two heifers. Apply to Donald Gaines, Bullittsville.

THE SCHOOL AND COMMUNITY LIFE

By Everett L. Dix, Principal Boone County High School.

(From Southern School Journal)

For many years much has been said about the relation of the school and the community. In many places efforts are being made, and successfully too, to correlate the work of the school with the interests of the community. The only trouble is that too few schools (meaning too few teachers) are trying to do this or even have well defined ideas of how to begin. We have thought that the account of how it has been done in some successful instances, with details, might be suggestive enough to furnish a start to interested teachers who have not yet made a beginning. In a former article an institution was given of the work of the Boone County High School along this line. Probably the most important of the activities mentioned in that article was the benefits from seed testing. The students of this High School tested nearly a thousand ears of corn for the people of the county this year. But what was considered more important was the fact that many other farmers made tests themselves and tested their own corn. It became a common thing on count days and other important days in town for the principal to spend a good portion of the day demonstrating and explaining seed testing and milk testing and other similar things to the farmers who came in to the High School building.

Things like this bring the teacher and the school into closer touch with the life of the community. Something that shows the close relation of the school and people and at the same time produces a closer relation is the fact that the principal of his school is chairman, by election of the Farmers' Institute. The Farmers' Institute in Boone county has been fairly well attended. We are planning this year for the greatest session in its history. It will be held after school begins at the High School building and will last perhaps for a week. We are sure from our former success in securing attendance at school affairs of having large numbers of farm people in attendance for that length of time. The week will be chock full of lectures by specialists, demonstration of milk testing and separating, bread baking and various kinds of cooking. The work of the small experiment station which is maintained here will be inspected, explained and discussed. Improved farm machinery will be on exhibition. Along with this the work of the school will be made more of. Not only as it relates to the business of farming, directly, but in other ways. Students will debate and sing and read and recite lessons. Thus it will be a week of schooling in which distinctions of age will be obliterated. Parents and children will all be learning together. Can you imagine any condition that would be more conducive to giving the school its proper position as a community institution?

Another example of our work among the farmers is the organization for promoting thoroughbred stock breeding. The association advertises in the agricultural journals and county newspapers the various kinds of thoroughbred stock for sale by its members. The collective products of the members of the association and, incidentally, those of the county are boasted. The importance of its being mentioned in this article lies in the fact that the county superintendent and the County High School were the prime movers in the organization and now attend to the clerical work and in other ways continue to advance its interests.

We have another plan which we have not yet put into operation which we think will solve the problem with us of a Domestic Science course at small expense. Ours is a new school and we are necessarily limited in the funds at our disposal. There are doubtless many other schools in the state in a similar condition. Or, perhaps, there are teachers with progressive ideas who will not be able to influence their Boards of Education without first demonstrating what good can be accomplished. We present the idea that others may experiment, if they wish, at the same time we are doing so. In Burlington and vicinity, as in most other places in Kentucky are a large number of excellent cooks and housekeepers. They have their own ways of doing things which are no doubt equal if not superior to many of the methods taught in Domestic Science courses. Judging from the results of their practice of the culinary art it would be very hard to out-class them. We propose to make use of the knowledge and skill of some of these excellent housewives and at the same time promote the community of interests existing between them and the school. As I have said, each will have her own way of doing things. The students who happen to come from the homes of these better class of housekeepers will be able to get the best ideas of their neighbors and all will be able to profit. But better than this, will be this means of reaching and teaching those students whose mothers are only indifferent housekeepers and whose homes lack the atmosphere that tends to the surest culture and the greatest happiness. Of course, system must prevail in the arrangement of the course. A text book will be used, it has already been selected. Then the text book portments or subjects will be assigned to different ladies, perhaps in pairs, each pair to instruct the class for perhaps one month. The subject assigned. Class periods will last two hours reciting twice a week.

We realize that it will require time to carry this out successfully but we believe that such an arrangement successfully carried out will be one of the best possible ways of promoting this sentiment that we so much need—a realization that the school is for the good of the community in every possible way and that the forces of the community may and should be used for the good of the school. Incidentally, if these good housewives in studying these classes or in the process of imparting their methods to others, happen upon any good ideas that will help them, we apprehend that no great harm will be done.

The success that we have thus far attained in our work at Burlington, while meager enough, has been made possible by several conditions existing together. First is the instigation and the active encouragement and co-operation of the County Superintendent, Edgar C. Riley, and the County Board of Education. Second, is the assistance of the local editor, L. L. Riddell, who has rendered invaluable aid. Third is the fact that we have a country High School whose most important interest is really the improvement of country life conditions, the foremost item being the proper education of country people. The County Board having purchased the land, we have thus far made our experiment work self-supporting. With larger appropriations for equipment we believe that it will be possible for us to accomplish results that will be far reaching in their influence on the destiny of our county.

Paper Clothing.

London, which recently announced the discovery of economical ways of making artificial rubber, is the scene of experiments in paper clothing. Paper garments have been made and worn as curiosities, but they were discarded and they did not displace cotton and linen. The climate where rain falls from time to time. Paper napkins, towels and handkerchiefs have been offered to the public, but their introduction has been slow. They do not look enough like the articles they are designed to replace. Paper garments will not displace cotton and linen until they resemble them in texture. That is the promising feature of the London experiments. It is said that a process has been perfected whereby paper can be produced that will deceive the eye and pass for cotton or linen fabrics and will hold buttons, seams and buttonholes. The inventor hopes to be able to produce garments that will cost no more than the price of laundering. However, cotton planters are unlikely to take alarm for the present.

Judge Downs' Appointment.

Judge M. L. Downs, of this city, has been appointed Commonwealth's Attorney to fill the place made vacant by the death of Hon. E. E. Winn. Judge Downs brings to the performance of his duties the experience of four years as county attorney and eight years as county judge. Besides, he was the partner of Hon. John S. Gault, who later served as Commonwealth's Attorney. This experience should serve him greatly, and if he proves as good as Mr. Gault he will have cause to feel proud of his record.—Carrollton Democrat.

Cabliato, Oct. 27.—Tobacco growers of Nicholas county are elated over the developments of the last week. The 1912 crop has been so active demand and many sales have been made at prices that are pleasing to the grower, and indicate that the season's market will be a good one. In some sections crops have sold as high as $15 a hundred. The average of sales as reported run about $10 a hundred. The lowest being $10. The work of stripping is in progress and the condition of the crop is regarded as even better than was anticipated.

Burley Tobacco Growers Boost Your Own Brands

We, as you know, are using your choicest tobacco in the brands of Strater Bros. Branch, and you know that nobody grows better tobacco than you do. You know how we manufacture, so you know that these brands are perfection. Now we want you to help us sell these brands this year even better than our best previous years. The reasons you should so help are as follows:

You Are Part Owner
The fact that you grow the tobacco makes you part owner of all these brands. Every time that one sells you a profit. Every word that you say in favor of any helps to increase those sales. Every brand that you buy for your own use helps make those profits better. All our interests—your interests and ours—are pooled in these several tobacco. It is logic that you should bend all of your efforts, however small, in the selling.
The United Power of 40,000 Buyers
40,000 men in a section wield an enormous buying influence. If all ask for these brands when they buy tobacco there results a gigantic sale. And big sales are the best advertising known.

To Dealers! Dealers throughout the United States know these famous tobaccos. They are Nation-wide sellers—popular brands. They are helping the growers to prosper. They are made from the pick of the famous crops of 40,000 growers. Every one of these growers is boosting them all. So tell all of your friends. This method is bringing the profits to dealers—to those who sell these brands. Are they working for you?

Commission vs. Fiscal Court.

Some of the citizens of Hardin county are taking steps toward securing a vote at the November election in 1914 on the question of establishing a commission form of government to supersede the existing Fiscal Court Control. It is probable that a number of Kentucky counties will have decided before the year 1914 to make an effort to abolish their fiscal courts and put their counties under commission government. The Fiscal Court system is cumbersome and archaic and it is high time that some better method of conducting county affairs were being adopted.

Government by commission, it may be conceded, is something of an experiment. Certainly it can be no worse than government by fiscal court, and there is every reason for believing that it will be better. We have the assurance that the commission plan has worked well in various cities. That being true, it should work equally well for counties. Fiscal court control has not been a success anywhere. It is characterized mainly by waste, inefficiency and petty grafting. The condition of the roads in the average Kentucky county is a powerful testimonial to the incompetency of fiscal courts. Thousands of dollars are expended every year and in most instances there is no substantial improvement.

There are a few fiscal courts, perhaps, which are giving good service to their respective counties, but the great majority of them are expensive luxuries. Three commissioners can easily do the work of a fiscal court that is made up of half a dozen or more magistrates. The office of magistrate does not always attract representative citizens. It is not as a rule remunerative and the magistrate is the recipient of little commendation and much censure from his constituency. The office of commissioner would be more desirable and the commission undoubtedly would be an improvement on the fiscal court in personnel and in business ability. By all means something should be done to insure a more sane and practical method of conducting county affairs.—C. J.

Murdered His Father.

Louisville, Oct. 24.—Wm. Schuler, aged 22 years, was dragged out of bed at his home here by the police late to-night and taken to jail on the charge of murdering his father about a year ago. He is said to have confessed the crime to the police.

Schuler talked too much to the neighbors the police say, and brought about his own apprehension. When Joseph Schuler, the old man was found dead with a gash in his head one morning the coroner pronounced death due to a fall.

The son declares he killed his father while defending his mother, an invalid, now at the City Hospital, from a drunken attack by the father.

"Conscience is awful," sobbed the young man; "this year of liberty has been a hell of torture."

COL. JACK CHINN

Buys Farm and General Merchandise Stock in Woodford County.

Versailles—Col. Jack Chinn, who recently sold his "Leonatus" stock farm in Mercer county, has purchased from William Faircloth the "Munday farm" of 100 acres at Munday's Landing in this county, and will remove to Woodford to live. The price paid was $55 an acre. Col. Chinn also bought the Faircloth's general merchandise business and stock of goods. The "Munday farm" is situated on the Kentucky River, about 12 miles southwest of Versailles. It is directly opposite Col. Chinn's barytes and fluor spar mines in Mercer county, which he has been operating for several years.

The first step toward improved highways in Rockcastle county will be taken this fall when the citizens of that county will vote for the bond issue of $100,000. The proposed route for the new turnpike is from the Lincoln county line from a point near Gum Sulphur to the Laurel county line to Livingston, a distance of twenty miles, and one beginning at the Madison county line, thence to the Pulaski Co. line, a distance of 23 miles. The Mt. Vernon Signal says that indications are that the bond issue will carry by a big majority. With the building of an improved highway through Rockcastle and adjoining counties coming in this direction, it would connect this section with the Bluegrass turnpikes, and with the completion of the turnpikes in Wise and Lee counties in Virginia we would then have a continuous improved highway to the Atlantic coast.—Middleboro News-Record.

A Kansas Judge established a precedent last week by marrying a couple in a broom-corn field. The couple had eloped and found the Judge at work in his field, as he was short of hands. He married them upon condition that they would work out the changes in that field, which they did.—Pike County Mo., News.

About Good Roads.

The more we think about this good roads question the more we feel like the county should vote a bond issue and fix the county with good roads. As soon as this is done the whole valuation Webster Co. would increase from 10 to 50 per cent.—Seabee News.

How about our roads? Do we want better roads? We suggested some time ago a discussion of the road question and offered the columns of the News for short, pointed articles or discussions on the road question. If you have any suggestions for the bettering of our roads let's have them, and in some way get everybody interested in better roads.—Caneyville News.

They are taking so much interest in the split log drag for working roads in Marshall county that a leading bank offers $25 and a prominent citizen's suggestions this with $10 for the best mile of public road worked in Marshall county during the balance of the year 1912 with a split log drag or a split log drag and plow. The prizes will be awarded on Dec. 24.—Hartford Herald.

Some inquiries are being made about the proposed turnpike from Jamestown to Columbia, via Russell Springs. In answer to these it might be well to state that the matter has not been dropped. On the contrary, a meeting of some of those interested was held at Jamestown Saturday, October 12th, at which it was decided that shortly after the election the taking of subscription to the capital stock will be commenced.—Columbia News.

There is a general movement all over the State for good roads, and some Kentucky counties are profiting by it. The mountain counties are the ones that need good roads most, and the ones that would be benefitted most by them. In Morgan county we need the illustration of one good section of road. If the Fiscal Court would make an appropriation to grade and macadamize the road from West Liberty to Index, a distance of two miles, it would be such an object lesson that the people would demand macadamized roads all over the county, and would be willing to vote the bonds to build them.—West Liberty Courier.

Turkeys Plentiful.

According to reports the turkey crop in Southern Ky., will be larger this year than for many years. The Eastern markets are already glutted with turkeys. Better prices have been offered than have heretofore been received. The first hatch of turkeys did not get a start as possible. Here continued rains, but the last hatch which was given a large range in the wheat fields, matured rapidly, and the birds are said to be both fine and plentiful. It is not uncommon to see from 800 to 1,000 turkeys in a drove a few days before Thanksgiving.

New Phrases Wanted.

A South Missouri editor calls for a new supply of phrases for recording social gatherings. He says: "We want substitutes for the following. 'Dainty luncheon, royal entertainment, 'enjoyable time,' 'masterful address, 'charming hostess,' 'conventional black,' 'a few appropriate and well chosen remarks,' 'to mourn his untimely departure,' 'presided with dignity and grace,' 'covered the table.' There are others probably that we cannot recall.—Cass Co. Mo., Democrat.

Woodrow Wilson will work world's welfare. Wars will wane, wealth will widen wonderfully. We will witness Woodrow Wilson's wisdom when Woodrow Wilson wins. We will wave white woven wreaths, will welcome with wassail, when Woodrow Wilson walks within Washington's wide ways.—Ex.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggist's opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Enos Lollar of Saratoga, Ind., "and consider it the best on the market."—For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. (Advertisement.)

Arbor Day.

Governor McCreary has designated November 2 as Arbor Day, and he urges its observance throughout the State. Representatives of the various counties will gather at Frankfort that day and set out the trees on the Capital hill for a State Arboretum.

Carlisle.—Nicholas county farmers seem to be holding their tobacco to sell over the loose leaf breaks here. Offers of $10 a hundred for numbers of crops are reported with most of the farmers declining. One buyer reports that he has made a number of purchases in Woodford Co. from $10 to $12.50.

Democratic Ticket.

For President:
WOODROW WILSON,
of New Jersey.

For Vice President,
THOMAS R. MARSHALL, of Indiana.

For Congress,
ARTHUR B. ROUSE.

In the death of Mrs. Aylor and Mrs. Alphin this county lost two very old citizens last week.

Shells! Shells!! Shells!!! Nov. 15th will soon be here. Get your supply of shells from Sullivan and be ready on that eventful day. He has all the leading brands.

The voters of Boone county should give their countyman, Hon. A. B. Rouse, unanimous support in his reelection to Congress next Tuesday. He is a Boone county product, and is doing such satisfactory work in Congress that his home county ought to be for him to a man.

Next Tuesday is the national election at which the American people choose their president for the next four years, and every voter ought to go to the polls that day and vote for his choice. A national Democratic victory is predicted from every quarter, and especially should every Democrat be anxious to be one of those who will assist in bringing about that result and to that end not fail to cast his vote.

County Clerk W. R. Rogers received, last Friday, the ballot books to be used at the election next Tuesday. The ballot is a pictorial sheet on which appears the game rooster at the head of the Democratic ticket; the log cabin surmounts the Republican column; clasped hands on a globe will guide the Socialists in making their X; the Phoenix indicates the dry territory; the arm and hammer shows where the Socialist Labor man is to use his stench; and the Progressives are reminded as to whom they owe their allegiance by the picture of the Bull Moose, Theodore Roosevelt.

Tobacco Notes.

The contracts for cutting out the 1913 tobacco crop have been printed and are being distributed among the various Burley counties.—Owenton News-Herald.

The cut-out meeting advertised for Saturday afternoon here did not materialize. No local people seemed to be interested in the movement and no one met. The sentiment for a cut-out of next year's tobacco crop does not exist here, or if it does it has not yet made itself apparent.—Flemingsburg Gazette.

In this county every effort is being made to get the tobacco raisers to join the association under a three-year pledge. With the biggest crop on hand and raised, probably, it is no wonder that the growers are walking the floor. They should have "walked" some before they set out their big acreage. They've caught the white elephant, now what are they to do with it? The cut-out plan has never been seriously considered here, and it looks now as if that plan will be the best next year and in 1914.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

Farmers are rejoicing at the prospect of tobacco selling in crop lots from 10 to 15 cents per pound, and think they are getting old-time paying prices. But they are not. Compared with other farm crops the price is "dead low." Before the trust era, when tobacco averaged 12 to 15 cents, per pound, hogs were worth about 4 cents and fat beef cattle about the same, and six cents was a top notch. Now the price is about double, while tobacco is running along on the average of about seven cents. To keep in pace with other products on the farm tobacco should be selling for an average of about 16 cents. Farmers are either mistaken about the cost of raising tobacco or they are losing money on it.—Dover News.

A cut-out in 1913 or any other year is not apt to have any serious consideration in Washington county. Our crops have been good and consequently have commanded good prices. Higher prices have been paid for tobacco in the past two years on this market than were ever heard of before, not excepting war times. There is, in our humble opinion nothing to be gained by a cut-out of the crop. If we do us no good to have high prices for tobacco when we have none. We are well aware that other States cannot produce good tobacco as we can, and we believe in wanting too much as high as the market will bear. We are in proportion.—Leader.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Hon. Walker C. Hall, of Covington, will address the Democrats at the court house next Saturday afternoon. It is hoped that every Democrat, and as many Republicans as possibly can, will be present at the speaking.

October 31—Halloween night this is.

The frost about cleaned up its work on vegetation last week.

Several nutting parties went out from Burlington last Sunday afternoon.

Leave your magazine orders with Newton Sullivan, Jr. He can save you money.

There are said to be seventy cases of typhoid and scarlet fever in Lawrenceburg.

Sullivan will sell you sheeps at rock-bottom prices. Call and see him before buying elsewhere.—Adv.

If you need a heating stove, call at Sullivan's and see the Monitor Friddle Oak—$11.50 takes it away.

The leaf burning carnival was resumed early Monday morning with a good supply of material at hand.

Joseph Eubanks, of Crescent Springs, Kenton county, bought 17 50-pound "shots of Elmer Kirkpatrick, Tuesday.

If you are in need of a cook or heating stove, see Newton Sullivan, Jr., agent for the celebrated Monitor Stove Works.

Reva, Baker and Wayman commenced a protracted meeting at Burlington Baptist church Monday night. They are having large congregations.

Miss Lillian Carver asks that we correct last week's statement, as the person who was presented the Recorder force by her and not by her mother.

A strong foot-ball team from the city will play the Burlington team at the ball park next Saturday afternoon. Come out and hear the speaking and then go and see the game.

D. M. Snyder, clerk, asks the Recorder to announce that the minutes of the last session of the North Bend Association of Baptists are ready for distribution.

Hear that J. W. Sebree, of Petersburg precinct, lost John Bachelor's farm in Locust Grove neighborhood. It is the old Robt. Huey homestead, owned and occupied many years by Joseph O. Huey.

October, taken as a whole, has been an ideal fall month for the farmers. There have been very few days when farmers could not work in their fields, consequently they are well up with their work.

Uncle Alfred Cason was sick last Sunday morning and suffered severely for some time. Owing to his advanced age his children were much alarmed and summoned a physician hastily. He had an attack of acute indigestion.

E. M. and Dumont Walton, of Erlanger neighborhood, will have a big sale of livestock and farming implements on Wednesday, November 20th. They were in Monday and made arrangements to advertise the sale, the advertisement of which will appear in due time.

Gen. Felix Diaz, leader of the revolution recently inaugurated in Vera Cruz and three of his confederates have been sentenced to death by court-martial. The executions have been stayed because of a question of jurisdiction urged between the civil and military courts.

Among numerous other curios of prehistoric times O. A. Stockman has a mastodon tooth that weighs four and one-half pounds. It was found on the Kentucky shore above the bar east of Lawrenceburg ferry, and is in fairly well preserved condition.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Police Lieut. Charles Becker, charged with investigating the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by the jury in the New York Criminal Court. Such verdict carries electrocution with it. There will be an appeal.

Dr. Mark Walton, of Neve, Bracken county, has bought Dr. F. L. Peddicord's house and lot in Burlington, and will take possession in a couple of weeks. Dr. Walton is 34 years old and has a wife and two children, the oldest about five years old. He has been practicing his profession for seven years and is well recommended both as a citizen and a doctor.

Mr. John Jackson, who keeps the first toll-gate out on the Petersburg pike will move with his family to the farm of his brother-in-law, Nick Oberling, of near Lawrenceburg. Oberling, Indiana, in the next few weeks. Mr. Jackson has had charge of the toll-gate for several years, and he and his wife are good, industrious people, whose leaving will be a loss to the neighborhood.

Erlanger 7, Burlington 0.

In one of the fastest and closest games of foot ball seen in Erlanger in several years, the Burlington High School was defeated by Erlanger by the small score of 7 to 0. The latter scoring on a fluke play in the first two minutes of play. Tolin, of Burlington, fumbled a pass from the quarter-back and it was recovered by Bloss on Burlington's 15 yard line, and was carried across the goal line for the first and only touch down of the game. Slater kicked goal, making the score, 7 to 0, which remained the same throughout the game. Burlington has shown a decided improvement in the last three weeks and now has one of the strongest High School teams in this part of the State. The features of the game were the all round playing of Burlington, the defensive work of its line, and the playing of Blyth, who is a new find at the game. The same teams meet in Erlanger on Thanksgiving day and the Burlington warriors are confident of victory. The line-up was as follows:

Burlington	Erlanger
Dix left guard	Carter left guard
Walton center	Carter center
Gaines right-guard	Bramlage right-tackle
Dye right-end	Shearer right-half
Slater left-half	Slater quarter-back
McGlas'n	Bloss
Tolin	Slater
Dempsey	full-back
Timmons	McCullum
Touchdown—Bloss.
Referee—Victor.
Umpire—Rouse.
Time Keeper—Riddell.

Fred Wahl and Henry Haberly, of Hebron neighborhood, were business visitors to Burlington and callers at this office, last Friday. Mr. Wahl has, in a great measure, recovered from the serious injuries he received about two years ago when his wagon struck by a train. Anderson's Ferry, and has discarded his crutches. One peculiarity about Mr. Wahl is he pays a year's subscription to the Recorder every time he comes to Burlington, no matter how his account stands, always saying, "I may not get back again soon. As a result he is away out in the lead of any of the other subscribers."

Several warrants were the result of the court of inquiry held by County Judge P. E. Cason, last week, but the party named therein left this part of the country immediately following the trouble that resulted in the holding of the court of inquiry. Since the court was held it has developed that some of the testimony given by one or two of those who were before the court, may get them into serious trouble as it appears they did not hew to the line while testifying.

Albert Conner, local tobacco buyer, has bought between forty and fifty thousand pounds of the 1912 crop, paying from ten to twelve dollars and a half per hundred. To secure his purchase Mr. Conner canvassed considerable of the tobacco producing territory in this county, and reports the growers as inclined to hold their crops for higher prices than he thinks he would be justified in paying.

Old Allen is certainly going some. It has six oil wells producing from fifty to eighty barrels each day. With six oil machines drilling in different parts of the county, an immense corn and tobacco crop that are all safe from the frost; our banks are overflowing with money; $50,000 pikes in different parts of the county being built at the rate of 800 yards to a mile each week. Great Scott! Where is there a better place to live on this side of the "Pearly Gates"—Scottsville, Tenn.

As A. B. Renaker was going to Dry Ridge, last Sunday, the rear axle on his auto broke when between Bracht and Crittenden, when he was going between fifteen and twenty miles an hour. The accident happened on a good piece of road, fortunately, and no one was hurt. In the machine with him at the time of the accident were his wife and little girl, Mrs. Babe Riddell, and J. G. Renaker, the latter of Florence. Chas. Renaker, of Dry Ridge, was telephoned for and came to the relief of the party.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Judge's Grandson. In that bare upper room they had shared, the judge, crushed and broken, watched beside the bed on which the dead man lay; unconscious of the flight of time he sat with his head bowed in his hands, having scarcely altered his position since he begged those who carried Mahaffy up the narrow stairs to leave him alone with his friend.

He was living over the past. He recalled his first meeting with Mahaffy in the study cabin of the small river packet from which they had later gone ashore at Pleasantville; he thanked God that it had been given him to see beneath Solomon's forbidding exterior and into that starved heart! He reviewed each phase of the almost insensible growth of their intimacy; he remembered Mahaffy's fine true loyalty at the time of his arrest—his thought of Damon and Pythias—Mahaffy had reached the heights of a sublime devotion; he could only feel ennobled that he had inspired it.

At last the dusk of twilight invaded the room. He lighted the candles on the chimney-piece, then he resumed his seat and his former attitude. Suddenly he became aware of a small hand that was resting on his arm and glanced up; Hannibal had stolen quietly into the room. The boy pointed to the still figure on the bed.

"Judge, what makes Mr. Mahaffy lie so quiet—is he dead?" he asked in a whisper.

"Yes, dear lad," began the judge in a shaking voice, as he drew Hannibal toward him, "your friend and mine is dead—we have lost him." He lifted the boy into his lap, and Hannibal pressed a tear-stained face against the judge's shoulder. "How did you get here?" the judge questioned gently.

"Uncle Bob fetched me," said Hannibal. "He's downstairs, but he didn't tell me Mr. Mahaffy was dead."

"We have sustained a great loss, Hannibal, and we must never forget the moral grandeur of the man. Some day, when you are older, and I can bring myself to speak of it, I will tell you of his last moments." The judge's voice broke, a thick sob rose chokingly in his throat. "Poor Solomon! A man of such tender feeling that he hid it from the world, for his was a rare nature which only revealed itself to the chosen few he honored with his love." The judge lapsed into a mo-

"Do You Mean We Ain't Going to Be Pore Any Longer, Grandfather?"

mentary brooding silence, in which his great arms drew the boy closer against his heart. "Dear lad, since I left you at Belle Plain a very astonishing knowledge has come to me. It was the Hand of Providence—I see it now—that first brought us together. You must not call me judge any more; I am your grandfather—your mother was my daughter."

Hannibal instantly sat erect and looked up at the judge, his blue eyes wide with amazement at this extraordinary statement.

"It is a very strange story, Hannibal, and its links are not all in my hands, but I am sure because of what I already know, I who thought that not a drop of my blood flowed in any veins but my own, live again in you. Do you understand what I am telling you? You are my own dear little grandson—" and the judge looked down with no uncertain love and pride into the small face upturned to his.

"I am glad if you are my grandfather, judge," said Hannibal very gravely. "I always liked you."

"Thank you, dear lad," responded the judge with equal gravity, and then as Hannibal nestled back in his grandfather's arms a single big tear dropped from the end of that gentleman's prominent nose.

"There will be many and great changes in store for us," continued the judge. "But as we meet adversity with dignity, I am sure we shall be able to endure prosperity with equanimity—only unworthy natures are affected by what is at best superficial and accidental. I mean that the light of poverty is about to be lifted from our lives."

Man from Monkey

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

McMilady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

McMother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Grandma had a Cabinet with a tin sugar bin nailed to the door; Granddaughter's has an ext. proof, automatic valve, crystal glass one, swinging to the Cabinet side.

McMother and Grandmother hid their ironing-boards behind the kitchen door. In our Cabinet an ironing-board instantly comes from underneath the table top, and when ironing is done, Presto—out of sight it goes.

Don't buy a Cabinet until you see this.

Chicken Stealing.

If the men arrested at Harrods creek for chicken stealing are guilty of having removed the chickens that were found in their possession from the hen house of one of the men who participated in the case and capture they are in a fair way to go to the penitentiary. The law gives poultry owners a first-rate chance of redress through the statute defining housebreaking.

Entering a building that is closed by any device constitutes housebreaking. "Using force, within the meaning of the law, does not mean breaking a lock or prizing a window open. Lifting a latch or turning a button that is a means of keeping a door closed constitutes using force to enter a building. And housebreaking is punishable by confinement in the penitentiary.

When chickens were less valuable than they now are chicken stealing was looked upon leniently. Nowadays the poultry business is a well-developed source of income to many persons and the man who robs a henroost may remove fowls valued at several dollars each. But it is not necessary to convict the intruder of having removed highpriced chickens or any quantity of chickens of any value in order to prove him guilty of housebreaking.

As chickens are necessarily kept in buildings more or less exposed to the invasion of prowlers it is fortunate that the prowler who is caught may be dealt with in accordance with his deserts. It is more satisfactory to send a chicken thief to the penitentiary than to shoot him as he bolts. That fact will not, however, be likely to restrain the fire of a chicken owner who happens to have a shotgun about the house when he hears a commotion among the hens.—C.-J.

Notice is hereby given that my farm is posted against trespass by hunting or trapping.

STATE NEWS.

Carlisle.—Thousands of bushels of hickory nuts are being harvested in this county. The price is $1.50 a bushel.

Franklin.—The tobacco buyers of Franklin are already in the field and operations will be in full headway by the first of the month. It is claimed that the crop in this county is the largest in several years.

Cadiz.—The first conviction in Trigg county under the new law making it a fine for any person to bring whisky into prohibition territory for another, occurred in county court this week, when Mart McIntosh was fined $50. He pleaded guilty.

Carrollton.—The Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. has bought a controlling interest in the Carrollton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Company, the Louisville firm now being largely interested in two loose leaf warehouses in this city.

Carlisle.—In six months dogs in Nicholas county have killed and injured sheep to the value of $1,000. This is the damage for six months and the annual fund from dog tax here is only $1,100, the sheep owners will get a small part of their claims.

Morganfield.—The nut yield in Union county is almost incredible and pecans, walnuts and hickory nuts are unusual in size and quality as well as in quantity. A fine big apple crop, the best in Union county for ten years, together with a good corn and tobacco yield, is at least partial compensation for the wheat failure.

Winchester.—With the purchase of the old Van Meter farm near this city, at public auction Ben D. Gott, becomes the largest landowner in Clark county, now having more than 2,000 acres. He is also the youngest farmer in the State owning so much valuable bluegrass land. The farm of 144 acres was knocked down at $170.70 an acre.

Henderson.—Fifty human skulls and ten skeletons intact, together with pots, idols, flint, bone hammers, bones, needles and other ancient relics have been unearthed here by Capt. W. H. Soaper, who is excavating for an addition to the Imperial Tobacco Company's plant in Water street. The skeletons are believed to have been those of the mound builders.

Maysville.—Tobacco in this vicinity seems to be on a steady jump in price. Tobacco buyers are skirmishing all over this and adjoining counties, buying up all the weed in sight, and are offering good prices. A number of crops have been bought at 14c and 15c a pound. Much tobacco was grown in the Burley district this season, and it is of No. 1 quality.

Winchester.—Representatives of many of the largest poultry houses of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky met here and effected an agreement whereby a huge poultry distributing concern will be opened in Cincinnati within the near future for the purpose of handling the business of the poultry houses represented in this meeting. The action is the result of dissatisfaction which has existed with the Cincinnati Produce Board.

Harrodsburg.—The grand jury is expected to find indictments against land owners for encroaching upon the public highways. Many farmers in resetting their fences or in building new ones have fenced in part of the public road and included it within their own boundary lines. Three such indictments have already been returned, as three against the telephone company for placing poles on public roads in such places as to prevent ditching and other necessary repairs.

Versailles.—Interest in the phosphate field in the vicinity of Mt. Vernon and Wallace Station, in this county, has been greatly increased by options that have been taken on approximately 3,000 acres in that section, which is believed to be underlain with phosphate deposits in paying quantities. The options were secured by Geo. B. Mosley, this city, at $300 an acre for most of the land. One company has been operating a plant at Wallace Station for nearly two years, and is taking out phosphate in profitable quantities.

Almost A Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in this county, according to W. B. Holsaw, Clarendon, Texas, was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results. It is quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at all dealers." (Advertisement.)

Pumpkins for Live Stock.

Pumpkins are really a valuable feed on the stock farm, and we are surprised that more farmers do not make a practice of sowing them every year, not necessarily in the corn field, where they are a nuisance when cutting with modern machinery, but in a small separate patch somewhere near the farm building. An immense quantity of succulent feed can thus be produced on a small acreage and this feed comes in very valuable between pasture grass and dry feed. It is not so much their feeding value which make pumpkins desirable as it is the fact that they seem to act as a tonic on the appetite and make more palatable other feeds, this being especially true with hogs when put on an exclusive corn diet for good thrifty bunch of hogs devouring their daily supply of cut pumpkin will realize just how much they appreciate this change from dry feed. The good results from feeding are very noticeable.

According to the best experience it does not pay to cook pumpkins for feeding to live stock, neither should they be considered as a fattening or growing ration, the usual grain ration being necessary in addition. We have never heard of pumpkins causing any kind of disease; on the other hand, they possess a certain medicinal value, pumpkin seed being a well known vermifuge.—Ex.

Mrs. H. H. Hine, who has been employed in the lumber business at Iowa City, Iowa, arrived here last week on a visit to his mother Mrs. Anna H. Hine, and will leave shortly for Mississippi to engage in the lumber business.
NOTICE—I will be absent from my office at Walton, Ky., for a month dating from Oct. 23d, going to Chicago to take a post graduate course in dentistry. My patrons will please bear this in mind and not expect to find me at my office during that period.
Dr. H. W. Hamilton, Dentist.
The Walton Wilson and Marshall Democratic Club was organized last Saturday night with 53 members. The following were elected officers: The Mayor, H. C. Diers, Chairman; Geo. C. Nicholson, President; E. K. Stephens, Secretary; W. O. Rouse, Treasurer. The club will meet again tonight.
If you want the best in oysters, get them at Stanley's 2t

Some sales of the new tobacco crop are reported from Gallatin and Owen counties, the prices ranging from nine to 15 cents per pound. The new crop is one of the best that has been raised for many years, and the large percentage of color tobacco in the crop makes it very desirable, as that type of tobacco requires a remarkable season and is only raised about once in four years. The prices consequently ought to be very good this year, with an early market.
McClure Chapter, No. 48, Royal Arch Masons, conferred the Mark Master's degree on John Readnour, of Cincinnati, Henry Palmer and Bryan Armstrong, of Independence, at the meeting last Friday night. There will be no work in the Past Master's degree and the Most Excellent Master's degree at the meeting to be held Friday night, Oct. 8th, to which all companions in good standing are cordially invited.
Last Friday Mrs. John C. Bedinger and niece Miss Lucille Hind had a narrow escape from serious injury by their horse becoming frightened and endeavoring to run away. The ladies were driving in a buggy and when near the Beaver grade the horse became frightened and started to run at a break neck speed. Mrs. Bedinger, finding that she could not control the animal, had the rare presence of mind to turn him into the fence on the side of the road, which stopped his mad career but almost demolished the buggy and broke both shafts. Fortunately neither of the ladies was injured to any degree.
Jas. Stapleton, of Latonia, spent part of last week here on business pertaining to the estate of his brother John Stapleton who died recently. While at the farm near Beaver Lick Friday, Mr. Stapleton found a hen shut up in the smoke house since his brother's death about six weeks ago, that had been without food or water during that long period, as there had been no one in the place in that time, and apparently the hen had suffered no great discomfort, as in the mean time she had laid a full complement of eggs and was sitting on them with an industrious effort to hatch out a brood of little chicks.

Man from Monkey

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

Q—Milady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

Q—Mother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Grandmother had a Cabinet with a tin sugar bin nailed to the door; Granddaughter's has an ant proof, automatic valve, crystal glass one, swinging to the Cabinet side.

Q—Mother and Grandmother hid their ironing-boards behind the kitchen door. In our Cabinet an ironing-board instantly comes from underneath the table top, and when ironing is done, Presto—out of sight it goes.

Don't buy a Cabinet until you see this.

MR. BRYAN

A Simple, Unaffected Word of Admiration From A True Lover of Heroes.

By Edward T. DeWitt Jones.
Editors' Note: Mr. Jones, the writer of this article, is an enthusiast for men. He knows men and he likes men. A busy, studious pastor, a great church of over a thousand members, he is as well informed on the personalities of public men as if he were a professional interviewer for a metropolitan newspaper. One of the features of the Christian Century this season, in which its readers have taken special delight, is the fresher, of non-press with which contributors and department editors have pronounced their opinions on the men and issues of the current political campaign. We regard Mr. Jones' present article as a delicious contribution to this series of expressions. And we imagine that there are few of our readers who do not share in some ardent feelings of the author toward his splendid subject.

The greatest privilege of any generation is its contemporaneity with a truly great and good man. Not the least privilege of this generation as I see it, is its contemporaneity with Mr. Bryan. Forty, fifty, sixty years hence to have heard Bryan will be "glory enough" for many a grandfather who will tell the wondering lad on his knee of the great days when the eloquent Nebraskan was in the midst of his extraordinary career.

Mr. Bryan is today the most dominant single figure in American national life. The politicians will deny this statement, but the people by the millions will give it hearty affirmation.

After sixteen years of almost constant campaigning, and public speaking tours such as no other American has equalled, no other man today can draw such vast audiences as Mr. Bryan. Not even Wilson, the Scholar, nor Roosevelt, the Picturesque, nor Beveridge, the Brilliant, nor Debs the Darling, can so magnetize the millions. The crowds that flock to hear Mr. Bryan during the Chautauqua season indicate his deep hold on the masses. For one thing, the give the lie flatly to the statement one hears occasionally that the age of oratory is gone. A Bryan Day at Chautauqua is "the great day of the year." The big crowd gathers early and patiently waits through heat and dust or rain for the coming of the Commoner. Mr. Bryan arrives amid cheers and as he smilingly mounts the platform the crowd rises en masse and there is a great fluttering of handkerchiefs and more and louder cheering. Then for two hours follows the steady flow of words, rhythmic, musical; the lucid stream of ideas, principles, illustrations; the strong tide of epigram, argument and occasional ripples of humor, with the concluding noble appeal to man's best nature which, to finish the figure, is like the crowning fullness of sweep and simple grandeur. Then prolonged applause and further demonstration; next the inevitable reception, thousands shaking the dust of the tired, perspiring, but good-natured Mr. Bryan. And this, day after day for every summer, and week after week, year after year. The Lyceum has never witnessed anything just like Mr. Bryan's great popular platform reign and it probably never will again.

Without reaching the presidency, Mr. Bryan has attained to a uniqueness and a fame that the presidency, great prize as it is, could not of itself bestow. Twenty-seven men have become president of the United States, but only one man has impressed his personality on five consecutive national conventions of a great historical political party, winning from three the presidential nomination, melting to tears at four o'clock in the morning, another in which a majority of the delegates were hostile to his views, and dominating the fifth and last so completely as to shape the platform and name the standard bearer after fighting to a finish the greatest and best battle of his life. Mr. Bryan will not go down in history with Clay and Webster and Blaine. He belongs to a class apart and of which he is the only member.

Mr. Bryan looks physically the greatest man the statesman, the orator. He has a great and good face, open, frank and winsome. The strong features of Mr. Bryan's face are his eyes, his nose and his mouth. His eyes are dark and piercing. If the eyes are the windows of the soul, the soul of Bryan is lighted by electricity. His nose is prominent and of the Roman type, with a profile more striking than McKinley's, and his was strong. And the Bryan mouth—how the cartoonists love to draw it! The story is told that Mrs. Bryan, the first time she saw her future husband, asked to be introduced to "that young man who can whisper in his ear."

Mr. Bryan's face and bold brow would attract attention anywhere. At Edinburgh, two years ago, at the World Missionary Conference, I thought Mr. Bryan the most distinguished looking man that assembly of many distinguished and noble looking men. Mr. Bryan's democratic tastes in clothes are well known to his countrymen. Usually he appears in a sack coat and trousers guileless of creases. But in Edinburgh, properly enough, he wore a silk hat, double breasted, finely striped and creased trousers and he carried a cane. I think every American there was exceedingly proud of "W. Jennings Bryan," which is the way the Scotch newspapers printed his name.

Mr. Bryan possesses a great voice. I have heard four great speaking voices, whose music lingers in memory. The late Father D. J. Stafford, of Washington, was one, Dr. H. L. Willitt, of the University of Chicago, another, Senator Joseph Bailey, of Texas, the third, and Mr. Bryan, the fourth. Father Stafford's voice was clear as a bell and exquisitely modulated. Doctor Willitt's voice is musical and resonant, rich toned and restful. Senator Bailey's voice is mellifluous and has in it "the sound-of-matin birds, so deliciously woosome as it at times. But Bryan's voice taken all in all is greater than any one of these three voices. Mellowed by much speaking, it is like a great organ, rich and full-toned, and the sympathetic quality of it has been often commented upon. The people can hear Bryan easily and clearly, and the heartiest of his hearers any parent effort on his part. For him to speak is—

As effortless as woodland woods send violets up and paint them blue. A noble countenance and a deep musical voice are valuable assets to a public man. These do not fully explain Mr. Bryan's hold on the American people. What Mr. Bryan did at Baltimore was greater than anything he has ever said. The nobility of his character, the purity of his life, the loftiness of his ideals—these are the qualities that make Mr. Bryan so masterful and establish him so securely in the affections of the people. If there were any speck on Bryan's escutcheon, his enemies could have found it long ago. He may have made mistakes of policy, but he wears the white flower of a blameless life, despite the fiercest light of publicity that has beaten upon him for sixteen years. The trite sentiment that there can be no real eloquence without a man back of it finds luminous verification in Mr. Bryan's career. The hero worshiper is still with us, thank the Lord, and Bryan is the popular idol of millions who may or may not have voted for him.

I have a good deal of sympathy with the spirit that breathes through the tact of the Presbyterian preacher in Indiana, who about the time the President and the Ex-President were going up and down the land saying things about each other, is said to have thrust into the very heart of his prayer at the Sunday morning this startling paragraph: "O Lord, spare us the further humiliating spectacle of our statesmen scandalizing our reputation as a Christian nation. Grant them out of all this heat and passion may come soundness of judgment and that some such clean, honorable man may be chosen William McKinley."

Mr. Bryan may never get to the White House, but I know no man who is surer of heaven.

WILSON AND MARSHALL HAVE MAJORITY OF VOTES

Democratic Landslide at Tuesday's Election--
Governor Wilson Carried the "Solid South"
--Next House and Senate Will Undoubtedly Be Democratic--Wilson and Marshall's Election Conceded at Early Hour.

Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, N. J., Elected Tuesday as the Next President of the United States on the Democratic Ticket.

Cincinnati, Nov. 6.—The election of Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey as President, and Thomas Marshall of Indiana as Vice President, was apparently assured by the results tabulated up to an early hour this morning. The counting of the ballots was very slow. The returns are incomplete and only scattering reports are obtainable from Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and other large states, but Wilson will have a certain majority of electoral votes.

Shortly after midnight the Associated Press reported it was reasonably certain from the states where the results had been obtained that the electoral vote in these states would be divided as follows: Wilson 267 (a majority); Roosevelt, 29; Taft, 8; with 227 electoral votes undetermined.

Roosevelt's victory in Illinois grew in later reports and it is possible that his plurality will exceed 100,000. Governor Wilson has apparently carried the "Solid South" including all of the Democratic states south of the Potomac, and with the southern states he has gained New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, Maryland, Kentucky and Delaware. Wilson's majority in South Carolina alone will exceed 50,000.

Taft has undoubtedly carried New Hampshire and Vermont, although the Democrats will not definitely concede the latter state and the tabulated vote will be necessary to finally determine the results.

From all indications it has been a landslide. Both houses of congress will probably be Democratic. The house is overwhelmingly Democratic, while the incomplete returns indicate that the legislators elected at today's polls will elect enough Democratic senators to give the Democrats a majority of the upper branch of congress.

At midnight the returns show that fifteen southern states, exclusive of Missouri and inclusive of West Virginia, have yielded 165 electoral votes for Wilson. Three New England states—Connecticut, Maine and Massachusetts—have given him 31 more electoral votes; Delaware has contributed 3, and New York has given the Democratic candidate its 45 votes.

Indiana has gone Democratic by a large plurality, while Missouri, that "mysterious stranger" that appeared in the Republican ranks in 1904 and 1908, has given its electoral votes to the Democrats.

Taft has swung Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont and Wyoming, with 13 electoral votes.

The story of the returns can be told succinctly—the Republican vote, divided by Taft and Roosevelt, equaled a Democratic plurality for Wilson. This was the way it ran in most of the eastern states, although the returns showed slashing on both sides in many an instance.

Old Republican strongholds have been smashed into smithereens by the three-cornered fight. Staid old New England, which manifested a tendency to wander toward Democracy in the congressional elections two years ago, demonstrated the same inclination on Tuesday, so far as the bulk of its electoral vote was concerned.

All three of the home states of the leading rivals for the presidency, in fact, have been annexed by Wilson—Ohio, New Jersey and New York, where Wilson was given a vote of landslide proportions.

Indiana has gone Democratic by a considerable margin, although Wilson did not get as large a vote as did Bryan four years ago—this on the face of the incomplete returns.

Republican strongholds in the West that were not smashed by the Democrats appear to have fallen under the battering rams of the Progressives.

Michigan, which has been Republican since 1855, excepting in 1892, when it gave Cleveland five of its fourteen electoral votes, has been carried by Roosevelt on the face of incomplete returns.

Illinois, which has gone Democratic only once since the civil war, has been carried by Roosevelt.

Iowa, which has been Republican in presidential elections ever since the foundation of the party, has now moved out of its old column. Incomplete reports indicate that Roosevelt has carried the state by a narrow margin of about 5000, but returns from Democratic strongholds have not arrived in full number, and the state will remain in doubt until they come in.

TAFT CONCEDES THE ELECTION OF WILSON

Shortly after midnight President Taft gave out a statement conceding Wilson's election, and sent the following telegram of congratulation: "I cordially congratulate you on your election, and extend to you my best wishes for a successful administration."

ROOSEVELT CONGRATULATES WILSON
Oyster Bay, L. I.—Theodore Roosevelt shortly after midnight issued a statement saying he accepted the results "with good humor and contentment," and sent a telegram of congratulation to the successful candidate.

The Washington Times, owned by Frank A. Munsey, one of Roosevelt's chief supporters, says Woodrow Wilson has been elected by a tremendous majority.

Not to Be Fooled With.

Kirtley Baker and Glen Crisler, who reside down on Gunpowder, seem to have had a misunderstanding some time since that came very nearly culminating seriously for Baker last Thursday. He called at Crisler's, and the old trouble was renewed, when Crisler called his pistol to his assistance, one discharge of which in the direction of Baker convinced him that his neighbor was in no humor to be fooled with, they were both left with a very quiet, good citizen, but nobody has any business trying to hang a bluff on him if he does not want to get into bad trouble. Rural mail carrier Elmer Conley had just arrived at Mr. Crisler's on his route and witnessed Baker's sudden departure. It is a good thing for all parties that the loud aimed at Baker went wild.

Good Prices Prevailed.

A very large crowd assembled at the residence of the late Jacob Tanner, near Hebron, last Thursday, to attend the sale of his real and personal estate that day and night. Mr. Tanner, of Hebron, was a very quiet, good citizen, but nobody has any business trying to hang a bluff on him if he does not want to get into bad trouble. Rural mail carrier Elmer Conley had just arrived at Mr. Crisler's on his route and witnessed Baker's sudden departure. It is a good thing for all parties that the loud aimed at Baker went wild.

The bidding on the land was engaged by several parties until the $5,000 mark was passed when Lou Crutcher and Geo. H. Gordon were left to fight it. The land, which is finally going to Gordon for $7,050, which is considered a good price by many supposed to be competent judges. The prices realized for both the personal and the real estate is very satisfactory to the executor, Mr. Gaines.

Halloween's Work.

The Halloweeners did considerable heavy work in Burlington, last Thursday night, and the Riddell's corner being the scene of the most of their activity. These points they fortified with wags, and lumber and posts until they looked like they had been visited by a fully developed cyclone. As is usual following Halloween night Chas. Westbay's wagon was missing and he spent half a day hunting it when a friend who happened to know of its whereabouts put him wise. W. D. Cropper's buggy was put in the coupe house hall while S. W. Tolpin's runaway and buggy found their way to the premises of some of his neighbors.

When Prof. Tolpin arose Friday morning he found his doors and windows so securely wired that it was necessary for him to telephone in to town for parties to come and release him and his wife from their imprisonment. Several of the boys who came in from the country to assist in turning the horses missing, when they started home, having been turned loose while they were engaged in mischief. One of the young men found his buggy on top of the creamery building, but his harness was placed in a diver and sundry places. They were somewhat surprised when they discovered that they had been victims of their companions in mischief.

Foot Ball Game.

Bond Hill, of Cincinnati, defeated Burlington at Burlington last Saturday by the score of 30 to 2, although the Burlington boys played a much better game than the score indicates, yet they were outweighed 20 pounds to the man, Bond Hill having a very heavy build. The Bond Hill boys did all of their scoring in the first ten minutes of play and it looked as if B. H. S. was fighting hard. The local always fighting hard brace up and outplayed Bond Hill for the remainder of the game, Burlington having the ball in Bond Hill's territory for the remainder of the game. The game was slow owing to the fact that the referee was not on to the finer parts of the game and would not allow Burlington a touchdown which they made in the third quarter. The features of the game were the end runs of the Bond Hill back field and two off tackle runs by Hager for twenty yards each, who was the main ground gainer for Burlington. Hager's running was very good showing with a little more practice. Burlington plays Bellevue at Bellevue next Saturday and an easy game is expected. Bond Hill center Walton Komerscher right guard Ron. E. Erdman right tackle Crisler Keen right end Edkins Thompson left tackle Dix left end Dye Campbell Q. B. McGlissan Hatterschide full back Dempsey Rowley left half Hager Harrington right half Tolin. Time, half hour, ten minutes. Quarters, twelve. Referee Russ Bradford. Umpire, A. Holsters.

According to reports that are coming in there will be considerable soft corn in the 1912 crop. Much of the crop was planted so late that it did not have time in which to mature properly, while frost rot in its work on many fields to some extent.

GOVERNOR MCCREARY

Writes About Corporations and Valuations of Franchises

Points Out Law Requiring Attorney General to Recommend Before He Can Employ Counsel

To Assist State in Railroad Suit.

Governor McCreary has issued a statement in response to the letter addressed to him and to others by Mr. Justus Goebel. The Governor declares that "all persons who have made proper investigation know that the corporations in Kentucky have not been paying their just proportion of the taxes," and says that if the corporations which have instituted the suits persist in their efforts "the State of Kentucky and the cause of the taxpayers should be defended in the courts by counsel in every way well equipped, and by all the attorneys that may be needed to meet and cope with the many able attorneys who instituted the suits."

The Governor's statement follows: "The letter of Mr. Justus Goebel addressed to me and to all administrative and legislative officers of the State, and to all citizens of the Commonwealth who are interested in equal and uniform taxation, has been published generally in the newspapers and contains valuable information and important suggestions."

"He was present at the meetings of the Board of Valuation and Assessment, which occupied about five months and must be well-informed on the subjects to which he refers."

"The Board of Valuation and Assessment, consisting of Henry Bosworth, State Auditor, Thomas S. Rhea, State Treasurer, and C. F. Creel, Secretary of State, did their work well and faithfully."

"All persons who have made proper investigation know that corporations in Kentucky have not been paying their just proportion of the taxes, and there has been unjust and burdensome taxation upon the people as compared with what has been required by the people of the large corporations of our State."

"I am opposed to discrimination, and believe that taxation should be uniform, and the corporations and the people assessed and taxed justly and fairly."

"In my message to the last Legislature, I recommended the passage of eight important bills, which have been enacted into law except the public utilities bill, which gave the Governor authority to appoint an assessor, and valuation commission to do what the existing Board of Valuation and Assessment has done; but as the members of that Board had not under former administrations been active in their duties, I had no knowledge of the existing Board of Valuation and Assessment."

"The teacher's meeting of the Florence and Constance Magisterial District was held last Saturday. The meeting was by far the most enthusiastic of any teachers' meeting this year."

The following teachers were present: Mrs. M. E. Wood, of Taylorport; Miss Mamie Haley, of Pleasant; Mr. A. M. Yockey, Miss Pleasant Carpenter and Miss Anna Miller, of Florence, and Miss Flora Youell and Miss Virgie Riggs, of Constance.

The session began at 11 o'clock. The County Supt. made a talk on the "Evolution of Language." After a very good dinner served by the teachers, the session was continued.

Constance school the regular program was taken. Mrs. Anna Hogan and Miss Lizzie Vest were the only teachers of this district, who were not present. All who were on the program, who were present, responded with thoughtful papers.

The most interesting part of the session was the spelling match between the Constance, Taylorsport and the Pleasant schools. Constance was the winner. This certainly was a treat to the session. Miss Mamie Haley spelled down the teachers present.

The last talk on the program was one in English on the spelling of a Walnut Hill school. This teacher and her school were out for a walk through what they thought was the mountains of Kentucky. They certainly were a lively crowd with their collection of pumpkins.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A Crisis at the Court-House.
Just at daybreak Yancy was roused by the pressure of a hand on his shoulder, and opening his eyes saw that the judge was bending over him.

"Dress!" he said briefly. "There's every prospect of trouble—get your rifle and come with me!"

Yancy noted with a prospect of trouble seemed to enter the judge's face. "Dress!" he said briefly. "There's every prospect of trouble—get your rifle and come with me!"

"Let you sleep, thinking you needed the rest," the judge went on. "But ever since midnight we have been on the verge of riot and possible bloodshed. They've arrested John Murrell—it's claimed he's planned a servile rebellion! A man named Hues, who had wormed his way into his confidence, made the arrest. He carried Murrell into Memphis, but the local magistrate, intimidated, most likely, declined to have anything to do with holding him. In spite of this, Hues managed to get his prisoner lodged in jail, but along about midnight the situation began to look serious. Folks were warning into town armed to the teeth and Hues fetched Murrell across country to Raleigh."

"Yes," said Yancy.
"Well, the sheriff has refused to take Murrell into custody. Hues has him down at the court-house, but whether or not he is going to be able to hold him is another matter!"

Yancy and Hannibal had dressed by this time, and the judge led the way from the house. The Scratch Hiller looked about him. Across the street a group of men, the greater number of whom were armed, stood in front of Peglow's tavern. Glancing in the direction of the court-house, he observed that the square before it held other groups. But what impressed him more was the ominous silence that was everywhere. At his elbow, the judge was breathing deep.

"We are face to face with a very deplorable condition. Mr. Yancy. Court was to sit here today, but Judge Morrow and the public prosecutor have left town, and as you see, Murrell's friends have gathered for a rescue. There's a sprinkling of the better element—but only a sprinkling. I saw Judge Morrow this morning at four o'clock—it told him I would obligate myself to present for his consideration evidence of a striking and sensational character, evidence which would show conclusively that Murrell should be held until the action of the next grand jury this afternoon conference with Hues—I guaranteed his safety. Sir, the man refused to listen to me! He showed himself utterly devoid of any feeling of public duty. The bitter sense of failure and failure, leaving the judge, and the situation made on that basic faith in his own powers which remained imbedded in his character.

They had entered the court-house square. On the steps of the building Betts was arguing loudly with Hues, who stood in the doorway, rifle in hand.
"Maybe you don't know this is county property," the sheriff was saying. "And that you have taken unlawful possession of it for an unlawful purpose? I am going to open them doors a panel of strangers can keep folks out of a building their own money has bought and paid for!"

While he was speaking, the judge had pushed his way through the crowd to the foot of the steps.
"That was very nicely said, Mr. Betts," observed the judge. He smiled widely and sweetly. The sheriff gave him a hostile glare. "Do you know that Morrow has left town?" the judge went on.

be five men inside whose prejudices are all in favor of law and order." He pushed past Hues and entered the court-house, followed by Yancy and Hannibal. "We'll let 'em in where I can talk to 'em," he said almost gaily. "Besides, they'll come in anyhow when they get ready, so there's no sense in exciting them."

In the court-house, Murrell, bound hand and foot, was seated between Carrington and the Earl of Lambeth in the little railed-off space below the judge's bench. Fear and suffering had blanched his unshaven cheeks and given him a light to his deeply sunken eyes. A slight of Yancy's smothered exclamation broke from his lips; he had supposed this man dead these many months!

Hues had abandoned his post, and the crowd, suddenly grown clamorous, stormed the narrow entrance. One of the doors, borne from its hinges, was a down with a crash. The judge, a fierce light flashing from his eyes, turned to Yancy.

"No matter what happens, this fellow Murrell is not to escape—if he calls on his friends to rescue him he is to be shot!"
The hall was filling with swearing, struggling men, the floor shook beneath their heavy tread; then they burst into the court-room and saluted Murrell with a great shout. But Murrell, bound, in rage, and silent, his face in a deathly grin, was a depressing sight, and the boldest felt something of his unreasoned lawlessness go from him.

Less noisy now, the crowd spread itself out among the benches or swarmed up into the tiny gallery at the back of the building. A man after man had hurried forward, intent on passing beyond the railing, but each had encountered the judge, formidable and forbidding, and had turned aside. Gradually the many pairs of eyes roving over the little group surrounded the court-house, themselves on Slocum Price. It was in unconscious recognition of that moral force which was his, a tribute to the grim dignity of his unshaken courage; what he would do seemed worth considering.

He was charmed to hear his name pass in a whisper from lip to lip. Well, it was time they knew him! He squared his ponderous shoulder and made a gesture commanding silence. Battered, shabby and debauched, he was like some old war horse who sniffs the odor of battle that the wind incessantly brings to his nostrils.

"Don't let him speak!" cried a voice, and a tumult succeeded.
Cool and indomitable the judge waited for it to subside. He saw that the copier was stealing back into Murrell's face, a faint, nervous feeling that he was a leader not overthrown; these were his friends and followers, his safety was their safety, too. In a hush in the storm of sound the judge attempted to make himself heard, but his words were lost in the angry roar that descended on him.

"Don't let him speak! Kill him! Kill him!"
A score of men sprang to their feet and from all sides came the click of rifle and pistol hammers as they were drawn to the full cock. The judge's fate seemed to rest on a breath. He swung about on his heel and gave a curt nod to Yancy and Carrandish, who, falling back a step, tossed their guns to their shoulders and covered Murrell. A sudden hush grew up out of the tumult; the cries, angry and jeering, dwindled to a murmur, and a dead pall of silence rested on the crowded room.

The very taste of triumph was in the judge's mouth. Then came a commotion at the back of the building. A ripple of comment and Colonel Pentress elbowed his way through the crowd. At sight of his enemy the judge's face went from white to red, while his eyes blazed; but for the moment the force of his emotions left him speechless. Here and there, as he advanced, Pentress recognized a friend and bowed coolly to the right and left.

"Don't Let Him Speak. Kill Him! Kill Him!"

"What does this ridiculous mockery mean?" he demanded harshly. "Mr. Sheriff, as a member of the bar, I protest! Why don't you clear the building?" He did not wait for Betts to answer him, but continued, "Where is this man Hues?"

"Yonder, colonel, by the captain," said Betts.

"I have a warrant for his arrest. You will take him into custody."
"Wait!" cried the judge. "I represent Mr. Hues, I desire to see that warrant!"
But Pentress ignored him. He addressed the crowded benches.

"Gentlemen, it is a serious matter forcibly to seize a man without authority from the courts and expose him to the danger of mob violence—Mr. Hues will learn this before we have done with him!"

Instantly there was a noisy demonstration that swelled into a burst of applause, which quickly spent itself. The struggle seemed to have narrowed to an individual contest for supremacy between Pentress and the judge. On the edge of the railed-off space they confronted each other: the colonel, a tall, well-carved for presence; the judge, shabby and unkempt. For a moment their eyes met, while the judge's face purpled and paled, and purpled again. The silence deepened. Pentress' thin lips opened, twitched, but no sound came from them; then his glance wavered and fell. He turned away.

"Mr. Sheriff!" he called sharply. "All right, colonel!"
"Take your man into custody," ordered Pentress. As he spoke, he handed the warrant to one of the men who looked at it, grinned, and stepped toward Hues. He would have pushed the judge aside had not that gentleman, bowing civilly, made way for him.

In my profound respect for the law and properly constituted authority, I yield to no man, not even to Colonel Pentress," he said, with a gracious gesture. "I would not place the slightest obstacle in the way of its sanctioned manifestation. Colonel Pentress comes here with that high sanction. He bowed again ceremoniously to the colonel. "I repeat, I respect his dependence upon the law!" He whirled suddenly. "Cavendish—Yancy—Carrington—I call upon you to arrest John Murrell! I do this by virtue of the authority vested in me as a judge of the United States federal court. His crime—a mere trifle, my friends—passing counterfeited money! Colonel Pentress will inform you that this is a violation of the law which falls within my jurisdiction," and he beamed broadly on Pentress.

"It's a lie!" cried the colonel.
"You'll answer for that later!" said the judge, with abrupt austerity of tone.

"For all we know you may be some fugitive from justice—Why, your name is Price!"
"Are you sure of that?" asked the judge, quickly.

"You're an impostor! Your name is Turberville!"
"Permit me to relieve your apprehensions. It is Turberville who has received the appointment. Would you like to examine my credentials? I have them by me—no? I am obliged for your introduction. It could not have come at a more timely moment."

The judge seemed to dismiss Pentress contemptuously. Once more he faced the packed benches. "Put down your weapons, gentlemen. This man Murrell will not be released. At the first effort at rescue he will be shot where he sits—we have sworn it—his plotting is at an end." He stalked nearer the benches. "Not one chance in a thousand remains to him. Either he dies here or he lives to be taken before every judge in the state. If necessary, until we find one with courage to try him! Make no mistake—it will best preserve the ends of justice to allow the state court's jurisdiction in this case; and I pledge myself to furnish evidence which will start him well on his road to the gallows!" The judge, a tremendous presence, stalked still nearer the benches. Outfacing the crowd, a sense of the splendor of the part he was being called upon to play flowed through him like some elixir; he felt that he was transcending himself; that his inspiration was drawn from the hidden springs of the spirit, and that he could neither falter nor go astray. "You don't know what you are meddling with! This man has plotted to lay the south in ruins—he has been among the negroes—it is incredible that you should all know this—so such I say, go home and thank God for your escape! For the others"—his shaggy brows met in a menacing frown—"if they force our hand we will toss them John Murrell's dead carcass—that's our answer to their challenge!"

He strode out among the gun-muzzles which waved where they still covered him. He was thinking of Mahaffy—Mahaffy, who had said he was still a man to be reckoned with. For the comfort of his own soul he was proving it.

"Do you know what a servile insurrection means? You men who have wives and daughters, have you thought of their fate? Of the monstrous savagery to which they would be exposed? Do you believe he could limit and control his? Look at this! Why, he has never had a consideration outside of his own safety, and yet he expects you to risk your necks to save him! He would have left the state before the first blow was struck—his business was all down river—but he was too stupid to keep him as an answer for his crimes! Then, law, as implacable as it is impartial, has put its mark on him—the shadow in which he sits is the shadow of the gallows!"

The judge paused, but the only sound in that expectant silence was the heavy breathing of men. He drew his unwieldy form erect, while his voice rumbled on, aggressive and threatening in its every intonation.

"You are here to defend something that no longer exists. Your organization is wrecked, your signals and passwords are known, your secrets have become public property—I can even produce a list of your members; there are none of you who do not understand, I have no wish to strike at those who have been misled or coerced into joining Murrell's band!"

The judge's sudden old face glowed now with the magnanimity of his sentiments. "But I have no feeling of mercy for your leaders, none for Murrell himself. Put down your guns!—you can only kill us after we have killed Murrell—but you can't kill the law! If the arch conspirator dies in this room and hour, on whose head will the punishment fall?" He swung round his ponderous arm in a sweeping gesture and shook a fat but expressive forefinger in the faces of those nearest him. "On yours—and yours—and yours!"

Across the space that separated them the judge grinned his triumph at his enemy. He had known when Pentress entered the room that a word or a sign from him would precipitate a riot, but he knew now that neither this word nor this sign would be given. Then quite suddenly he strode down the aisle, and foot by foot Pentress yielded ground before his advance. A murderous light flashed from the judge's bloodshot eyes and his right hand was stealing toward the frayed tails of his coat. "Look out—he's getting ready to shoot!" cried a frightened voice. "Instantly by doors and windows the crowd, seized with inexplicable panic, emptied itself into the court-house yard. Pentress was caught up in the rush and borne from the room and from the building. When he reached the graveled space below the steps he turned. The judge was in the doorway, the center of a struggling group; Mr. Bowen, the minister, Mr. Saul and Mr. Wesley were vainly seeking to pluck him from the doorway.

"Draw—damn you!" he roared at Pentress, as he wrenched himself free, and the crowd swayed to right and left as Pentress was seen to reach for his pistol.
Mr. Saul made a last frantic effort to restrain his friend; he seized the judge's arm just as the latter's finger pressed the trigger, and an instant later Pentress staggered back with the judge's bullet in his shoulder.

One of the shafts of the wagon struck Mrs. Gasser with great force in the side. Several men ran to her assistance and she was given immediate attention. It was found that while the stays of the corset she was wearing had been torn to pieces, she was not seriously injured.

Here is a good one on a Mercer county citizen which was told to the Herald this week. He went on a recent "business" trip to Lawrenceburg and returned with two jugs, which he landed triumphantly at home. He put one of the jugs on the front porch, and in placing the other one beside it he accidentally struck the two together and cracked them. To his dismay the liquid and impud corn juice began to trickle down the floor of the porch toward the edge, where it threatened to make a waterfall to the ground. But the man was quick witted and had been to too much risk and expense to secure the booty to let it be drunk up by thirsty Mother Earth. Quick as a wink he was on his hands and knees by the porch with his mouth open under the stream, calling between frantic gulps for his good wife to bring him a dish pan. Before she could get there, however, he had "saved" so much of the whiskey that he was as limp as a string.—Harrodsburg Herald.

Escapes An Awful Fate. A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. M. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes. "Sometimes I had such awful chills and sweats I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery. But I owe my wife to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely ever cough at all now. Quick and safe, it's the most reliable of all throat and lung medicines. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at all dealers.—Adv.

Wilber Rice Dead.

Wilber Rice, in his 64th year, bachelor, and oldest son of the late Morgan Rice and Harriet Riddell Rice, died at his home near Idlewild, after several days illness of pneumonia Wednesday morning at five o'clock. He is survived by his aged mother and two brothers, Edward and Lot P. Rice. He was a successful farmer and livestock man, a good neighbor and a most exemplary citizen, whose death is deplored by all. The burial will take place in the family lot at Hebron, Friday the 8th inst., at 11 a. m.

The Third Annual Corn Show given under the auspices of Boone County Pomona Grange will be held at Hebron, Saturday, Nov. 30th. The program and list of prizes will appear in next week's issue. The Boone County show, a Ladies' Department has been added in which there are several premiums offered. An expert from Kentucky State Agricultural University will be the judge on corn exhibit.

On Friday afternoon at two o'clock of next week, the banners of the High School of Boone County will be seen in the Burlington High School building. The High Schools will be represented by teams of not more than five each. Seven schools are eligible to enter the contest. A banner is to be presented to some school. What school will get it?

William Rector, of Petersburg, was in Burlington, last Saturday, squaring himself on account of the revenue he had been called upon to contribute for the year 1912. Mr. Rector had been keeping up with the political trend, and was satisfied with the political outlook from a Democratic standpoint, and was getting ready to assist in a genuine Jubilee this week.

Mr. A. C. Vaughn, a Boone Co. product, and for many years connected with the John Church Music Company, Cincinnati, has been appointed assistant sales manager for the Thibault Piano Co., St. Louis, Mo., the largest music house in that city. Mr. Vaughn's friends will be glad to hear of his advancement. His salary is close to $3,000 a year.

Newton Sullivan, Sr., who lives about two miles from town out on the Petersburg pike, brought to this office last Tuesday, two turkeys—one weighing 8 pounds and measuring 22 inches in circumference, the other two and one-half pounds, and 20 inches. Newt says they are of the Woodrow Wilson variety.

Two wild ducks lit on W. A. Gaine's pond just north of town, last Saturday afternoon. When Mont Grayback begged one of them and might have killed the other, had he not become excited and tried to shoot the barrel of his gun with he had spit and discharged. Some say Mont had an attack of buck ague.

The new Citizens' Bank at Erlanger will be opened for business, Saturday, Nov. 16th, and the public is cordially invited to attend the opening. This is one of the finest finished country bank buildings in the State.

Wanted—A game with a foot ball team anywhere from 90 to 95 pounds, to play the B. H. S. Juniors. Will give return game to team coming here first. Write to Geo. A. Porter, Burlington, Ky.

Wanted—Good farm hand. Apply to Robt. McCullough, Hebron.

Wanted—Owen McMullens, a fingered glove. Write to Mrs. C. C. Close, Burlington.

OHIO ELECTS COX GOVERNOR

HUGE MAJORITY INDICATED FOR DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE

WILSON HAS BIG MAJORITY

Possible That Only Two Republican Congressmen Are Elected—Congressman Cox's Majority Will Be Over 100,000.

Columbus, O., Nov. 6.—James M. Cox, of Dayton, has been elected governor of Ohio by over 100,000 majority. Wilson has carried Ohio by 200,000, according to the latest figures at press hour.

Only two congressmen—Longworth in the First district and Willis in the Eighth—are claimed.

JAMES M. COX

Ohio, like her sister states east and west, formed an integral part of the great landslide that swept the Republican party to defeat Tuesday. The majority for Wilson scarcely can be computed at this hour, but many experts are inclined to the belief that it will be among the largest recorded in Ohio.

Chairman William Finley of the Democratic state committee late last night issued a statement in which he claimed the state for Wilson by 200,000, and he based his conclusions upon the inroads that the Bull Mooseers had made upon the Republican strength. With the party reunited Wilson would have been defeated. The earliest returns showed the drift of the day's voting, and in none of the reports that filtered into Republican headquarters was there a ray of hope.

Some interest was aroused when the returns indicated that Taft and Brown had carried Franklin county by a good majority. Cleveland reports were jarring and these were followed by the information from Toledo that Roosevelt was running ahead in that county, but Wilson, as usual, bridged the gap and overtook the Bull Moose candidate.

DEMOCRATS WIN

BY LARGE MAJORITY IN INDIANA AT TUESDAY'S ELECTION

Samuel N. Raiston Will Be the Next Governor, Defeating Alfred J. Beveridge.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Fort the first time since 1892 Indiana has given a Democratic presidential candidate a plurality of its votes. It is possible that Governor Woodrow Wilson may have received a majority.

The Democratic national and state tickets have swept the Republicans off their feet in practically every one of their strongholds.

The returns show that while Col. Roosevelt and A. J. Beveridge, Progressive nominees for governor, made a fine race, they failed to break into either party for sufficient votes.

Republican National Committee member James P. Goodrich conceded the election of Samuel M. Raiston Dem., for governor.

It was admitted at the Republican headquarters that Wilson's plurality will reach 125,000.

The reasons assigned for Goodrich and other Republican leaders for the Democratic landslide was the fact that the Republicans were divided and the Democrats united.

The Democrats have elected thirteen members of congress from Indiana. They have carried the First district for Charles Lieb, of Rockport, who will succeed Representative John W. Boehme, of Evansville, who retired voluntarily. Representative William Cullip, of Vincennes, has been re-elected by an increased plurality in the Second district.

Representative William Cox, of Jasper, has been returned by the Third district with an increased plurality. In the Fourth district Representative Lincoln Dixon has won another big victory. Representative Ralph Moss, of the Fifth district, has been re-elected, as has been Representative Finley Gray, who represents the Sixth.

Representative Martin Morrison won out again in the Ninth. In the Eleventh district Representative George Rauch, of Marion, has been re-elected by a large plurality. In the Twelfth Representative Cyrus Cliffe, of Angola, has won again, and Representative Henry Barthart has been re-elected in the Thirteenth.

KENTUCKY IN LINE

FOR WILSON AND MARSHALL, BY GREAT MAJORITY.

Nine Districts Show Election of Democratic Congressmen While Two tan Districts Were Uncertain at an Early Hour.

Louisville, Ky.—Kentucky did not escape the landslide that has swept Wilson into the Presidential chair, for his voters have directed that his 13 electoral votes be cast for the Governor of New Jersey by the largest plurality in many years.

Indications are that Wilson will go to the Tenth and Eleventh Congressional districts with a plurality of 80,000 votes over his nearest competitor, who may be either Taft or Roosevelt.

The official returns may be necessary to determine this point. Returns from the mountain counties are meager at this time but it is thought that Wilson will almost hold his own there.

Wilson has carried the first nine congressional districts by approximately the following pluralities:

First District, 14,000.
Second District, 12,000.
Third District, 5,000.
Fourth District, 8,000.
Fifth District, 1,000.
Sixth District, 8,000.
Seventh District, 12,000.
Eighth District, 7,000.
Ninth District, 5,000.

Carries Congressmen.
The New Jersey Governor has carried with him the nine Democratic candidates for Congress from these districts by practically the same pluralities. Democratic Congressmen re-elected are as follows: Second District, A. O. Stanley; Third District, R. Y. Thomas; Fourth District, Ben Johnson; Fifth District, Swager Sherry; Sixth District, A. B. Rouse; Seventh District, J. Campbell Cantrill; Eighth District, Harvey Helm; Ninth District, W. J. Fields.

In the First District the Democratic Gibraltar, A. W. Barkley, Democratic candidate, was easily elected to succeed Senator-Elect Ollie James.

Roosevelt Vote Heavy.
The big feature and surprise of the election in this state was the tremendous Roosevelt vote in the Fifth District, composed of the city of Louisville and the county of Jefferson, and the weak showing of the Republican organization. It had been expected that Roosevelt would poll more votes than Taft in this city, but no one connected with any of the three parties was prepared for the wonderful vote the former President received.

Complete returns from the 225 precincts in this county and city give Wilson, 24,602; Roosevelt, 23,867, and Taft, 3,663.

At Democratic state headquarters Chairman Johnson N. Camden, members of his Campaign Committee and Democrats from all sections of the state gathered to receive the returns, and as early as 8 o'clock Camden said that report at hand indicated that if future returns kept up the same ratio Wilson would carry the state by 100,000 plurality.

That time Camden had received returns from 37 counties.

Had No Organization.
The result in this city is wonderful in view of the fact that the Bull Moose organization has been altogether voluntary and that there was no organization at all compared with what political parties usually mobilize in this city.

The sentiment among the Progressives is that, even in defeat, they have won a great victory, and that the Republican organization, which handled them rather roughly in the Presidential primaries, has been shown up as inefficient and practically helpless.

Locally the Presidential race shared interest with the race for the Board of Education, in which two incumbents were candidates for reelection, and the fact that in this race women voted for the first time. Approximately 12,000 members of the weaker sex registered for suffrage, and it is estimated that 75 per cent of this number availed themselves of the opportunity to cast their first ballots.

They also had an organization, and numbers of them worked at the voting places, urging that the members be re-elected as a reward for service well performed.

Undoubtedly the women's vote was a predominating factor in the reelection of V. H. Engelhard and John C. Strother, for their margin over their nearest competitor was less than 2,000 votes.

Only recently Louisville's school system has been placed on a nonpartisan basis, and this was the first time members of the new board of directors have been up for reelection. The names appeared on a ballot separate from the regular ballot, and without party emblems.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Franks, of Walton, were guests of J. M. and R. O. Powers the latter part of last week.

The oyster and ice cream supper at the Verona school building on the evening of the 21st ult., was a grand success. A very large crowd was in attendance. Halloween witches burst into their midst which caused consternation among the many little folk present but some of the young gentlemen were enamored with the beauty of their assumed faces.

One in particular offering his caresses rather warmly was confined to bruised upper lips. Young boys should not be too impulsive with masked beauty. The music for the occasion was furnished by John Willford, John Washum, Chas. Beach, violinist and Mr. Ed. Stone banjoist. There were so many cakes. The solid white cake coming in on the train. There were as many cakes for auction sale as were consumed during the evening.

CHILD WELFARE EXHIBIT AND CONFERENCE AT LOUISVILLE
NOVEMBER 21-30.

TO BE HELD IN BIG ARMORY

For The Redemption of the Young of the Present Generation and Future Generations Great Meeting
Will be Held.

The Kentucky Child Welfare Conference and Exhibit, designed for the ultimate redemption of the children of Kentucky, even until the third and fourth generations and primarily designed for the reclamation of these children of the present generation, will be held in the commodious First Regiment Armory in Louisville, November 21-30. The exhibit proper will be in session ten days. The conference will be in session three days, November 25-27 and the conference will be held in the Warren Memorial Presbyterian Church, corner Fourth and Broadway, one of the most convenient meeting places in Louisville.

That the child is father to the man is the belief of those back of the Child Welfare Exhibit, and to give the child at least an even break for health, lib-used there were used in Chicago, and in addition $50,000 was expended. Their efforts were awarded by an attendance of 410,000. Exhibits have been held in Kansas City and Northampton, Mass., and are to be held in St. Louis and Montreal. Then Kentucky Child Welfare Exhibit has secured nearly $4,000 so far, but much more is needed. Donations may be sent to the Kentucky Child Welfare Exhibit at the Armory.

The Child Welfare Exhibit has been accorded the hearty co-operation of the Board of Health, Board of Tuberculosis Hospital, various charity organizations and the churches. Statistics have been looked up, information of technical character furnished, reports on local conditions in various branches have been submitted and tabulated after being verified. The various committees total 230 men and women. But, as is usually the case where committees are appointed, a few active spirits do the work and the others come strong on the suggestion end. That the workers, the real workers, have been unremitting in their efforts is shown by the splendid results achieved.

CHILDREN TO ENTERTAIN

Choruses of school children, folk dancing and gymnastic exhibitions, kindergarten and folk-games, drills and athletic contests by the Boy Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Y. M. H. A., the Turners, and many other organizations, will take place in the Central Court every afternoon and evening except Sunday. Free moving pictures on Child Welfare will be given afternoon and evening.

On Friday evening and Saturday afternoon, November 22-23, the Historical Pageant given in Central Park in May, 1911, will be repeated.

The directors and managers of the Louisville Exhibit have been preparing for their great task since the National Child Labor Association held its annual convention in Louisville last January. The enthusiasm and inspiration aroused at that time has been productive of such excellent results that Dr. Strong unhesitatingly asserts that the Louisville Exhibit will be the most enjoyable and successful in the history of the entire movement. She has secured the services of 500 young Louisville girls who are studying their various parts and will devote their full time during the week of the exhibit to explaining the various exhibits and giving information and guidance to visitors.

GREAT SCHOOL CONVENTION.

In connection with the Kentucky Child Welfare Conference and Exhibit, two other notable conventions will be held in Louisville: the Child Welfare Conference proper will be held November 25th and the Exhibit will continue until November 30th. The Southern Educational Association will hold its annual convention at Louisville, beginning November 25th and continuing three days. It is expected that one thousand southern teachers will attend this convention. Mrs. Charles C. Weaver, of Louisville, has taken advantage of the Southern Educational Association and of the Child Welfare Conference, which will be in progress at that time, to call a convention of school improvement workers, the first ever held in the world.

Federal Good Roads.

The thin edge of the wedge has been inserted, and federal road building has been given its start. The postoffice appropriation bill carries $25,000 to enable a joint committee to make inquiry into the subject of federal aid in the construction of post roads, and report at the earliest practicable date, and $500,000 more is appropriated to be expended by the Secretary of Agriculture, in cooperation with the postmaster general, "in improving the conditions of roads to be selected by them over which rural delivery is or may hereafter be established." The Secretary of Agriculture and the postmaster general are directed by the act to report to congress within one year "the number of miles of road improved, the cost of same, and such other information as they may have acquired, together with such recommendations as may seem wise for providing a general plan of national aid for improvement of post roads in cooperation with the states and counties, and to bring about, as nearly as possible, such cooperation among the various states as will insure uniform and equitable interstate and highway regulation and for providing necessary funds for carrying out such plans of national aid, if it shall be deemed feasible to provide the same or any part thereof, otherwise than by appropriation from the treasury for that purpose." The language of the law thus would appear to commit the government to a certain extent, to the policy of federal aid. The importance of the modest start thus made in the direction of federal road building can hardly be overestimated.—Live Stock World.

The Burlington and Bellevue Turnpike Co., is making preparations to put its stone crusher to work. Stone in large quantities are being hauled to several points along the road.

Burley Tobacco Growers Boost Your Own Brands

We, as you know, are using your choicest tobacco in the brands of Strater Bros. Branch, and you know that nobody grows better tobacco than you do. You know how we manufacture, so you know that these brands are perfection. Now we want you to help us sell these brands this year even better than our best previous years. The reasons you should so help are as follows:

You Are Part Owner

The fact that you grow the tobacco makes you part owner of all these brands. Every time that one sells you profit. Every word that you say in favor of any helps to increase those sales. Every brand that you buy for your own use helps make those profits better. All our interests—your interests and ours—are pooled in these several tobaccos. It is logic that you should bend all of your efforts, however small, in the selling.

The United Power of 40,000 Buyers

40,000 men in a section wield an enormous buying influence. If all ask for these brands when they buy tobacco there results a gigantic sale. And big sales are the best advertising kind.

To Dealers! Dealers throughout the United States know these famous tobaccos. They are Nation-wide sellers—popular brands. They are helping these dealers to prosper. They are made from the pick of the famous crops of 40,000 growers. Every one of these growers is boosting them all. So are all of their friends. The result is bringing the profits to dealers—to those who sell these brands. Are they working for you? Here are the delicious chewing brands—INDEX—BY JOE TWIST—CUP—DAY'S WORK—ON THE SQUARE—TORCHLIGHT—STRATER'S NATURAL LEAF. Put them into your stock. See how they sell.

Women!

If weak, you need Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is made from gentle herbs, acts in a natural manner, and has no bad results, as some of the strong drugs sometimes used. As a medicine—a tonic—for weak, tired, worn-out women, Cardui has been a popular success for over 50 years.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Lula Walden, of Gramlin, S. C., followed this advice. Read her letter: "I was so weak, when I first began to take Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Now, I can do all the general housework, for a family of 9." Try Cardui for your troubles. It may be the very remedy you need.

Man from Monkey

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

Millady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

Grandmother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Grandma had a Cabinet with a tin sugar bin nailed to the door; Granddaughter's has an ant proof, automatic valve, crystal glass one, swinging to the Cabinet side.

Grandmother and Grandmother hid their ironing-boards behind the kitchen door. In our Cabinet an ironing-board instantly comes from underneath the table top, and when ironing is done, Presto—out of sight it goes.

Don't buy a Cabinet until you see this.

PIE HUNTERS

Getting In Line For The Pie Counter at Washington.

Lexington, Nov. 8.—Kentuckians who are forming the line to the pie counter at Washington are trying to kid themselves, one another and everybody in general into the belief that the Democracy of the commonwealth using a steam shovel in handling the majority of popular suffrage that put the state's 13 electoral votes into President-elect Wilson's pile, but the fellow who has kept count of the returns of Tuesday's election knows it was a wheelbarrow they had and there was no heaping load in that.

That there was something badly out of joint in this state last Tuesday is evident but just what it was cannot be positively stated at this writing. It will take an analysis of the vote that can be properly made only after the official canvass of the returns is complete at Frankfort.

The unofficial returns give the aggregate of the vote at approximately 441,765. Of these 215,567 are credited to Wilson, 122,598 to Taft, 101,372 to Roosevelt, and 15,000 to Debs, Chafin and others. This shows a decrease of 48,822 in the total vote, as compared with that of the presidential election in 1908, which was 490,887, and an increase of only 5,149 over the total vote in the gubernatorial race in 1911, which was 435,814.

In 1908 Bryan's plurality over Taft in this state was $381, and in 1911 Governor McCreary, Democrat, carried the state by 3,333, over O'Rear, a Republican, with announced progressive views. The Wilson plurality over Taft is approximately 108,000, and over Roosevelt approximately 114,000, but his majority over Taft and Roosevelt combined is only about 5,000.

The slump appears to have been heaviest in the Democratic column and forces the conclusion that the division in the Republican household was a fortunate thing for the Democracy. In 1908 Bryan received 244,092 votes and Taft 235,711. Therefore the Democratic decrease last Tuesday was approximately 38,000 and the Republican-Progressive decrease was approximately 25,000.

Though there was known dissatisfaction in the Democratic ranks for some time after the defeat of Speaker Champ Clark by Governor Wilson for the nomination at Baltimore, it was believed by the Democratic leaders that the breach had been healed to such an extent that Campaign Chairman John N. Camden last Saturday announced from headquarters at Louisville that his forecast was for a total vote of 468,000. He figured that Taft would be second man on the ticket and that he would get 116,000 votes. He did not forecast an estimate of the Roosevelt strength, but announced that the Democratic majority over Taft and Roosevelt would be 33,000.

Chairman Will D. Cochran, of the Republican Campaign Committee, was far out of line, for his forecast was for 528,000, of which he gave 227,500 to Wilson, 220,000, and Roosevelt and others, 72,000.

Chairman William S. Lawwill, of the Progressive Campaign Committee, did not publish a forecast, but he did express the opinion that Roosevelt would poll two votes to Taft's one and that Wilson would run behind the normal Democratic vote. In the first instance he was decidedly out of line and in the second he was correct.

The Cincinnati Enquirer's straw vote, which was most carefully, honestly and conscientiously taken and counted, indicated on the whole that Wilson would get about 55 per cent of the vote, while 25 per cent would go to Roosevelt and about 17 per cent to Taft. The vote that was taken during the last 10 days, however, indicated that there was a drift to Taft, and it was so stated in the final review that was made in connection with the straw vote taken at Louisville, but it at no time gave basis for belief that Taft's vote in this state would exceed Roosevelt's.

Now the questions are: Who were the stay-at-home Democrats? What was the chief cause of the dissatisfaction? Could they have been agriculturists undecided in their mind as to the safety of Wilson, and unwilling to vote for Taft, though believing in part the scare stuff that his campaign managers put out under the caption, "Back to Taft and Prosperity."

Were they all sore in the belief that William Jennings Bryan has swayed the Baltimore convention to turn down Clark for Wilson? Was it that they were prejudiced against Wilson because of his reputed views on the subject of religion and immigration? If none of these causes, what was it that kept them at home? Now, as to the Republican stay-at-homes. It is easy to attribute that to the feeling that there was no chance to win with Taft and a disinclination to vote for any other candidate.

The better showing in the aggregate made by Taft over Roosevelt is attributable chiefly to what might be called "death-bed repentance" on the part of the Republicans, principally negroes, who had declared for Roosevelt and then could not get away from the habit of stamping their ballots in the circle under the log cabin.

But whatever it was all about, the fact remains that the Democratic managers in Kentucky have little to glory in unless it be the realization of Chairman Camden's declaration for "100,000 plurality for Wilson" which appears to have been fully realized. Dispatch in Sunday's Enquirer.

The Democratic Victory.

The triumph of the Democratic party at the polls is complete. It is neither local, limited nor sectional, but is national to a degree beyond that of any party's victory since that of 1852, when the Democratic candidate, Franklin Pierce, carried the country with sweeping success.

Mr. Wilson has every reason to feel honored by this testimonial of the confidence of his countrymen.

His party has every reason to congratulate itself upon its return to political power through the support of the voters after such a prolonged period of probation.

The country has accepted Mr. Wilson's assurances as to sound and safe policies with implicit faith, and has given him the necessary legislative forces to place those policies in actual operation.

An executive he will not be embarrassed by hostile or antagonistic Senate or House, and the country has the assurance also that he is not incumbered with pledges of any nature or of official favors of any nature.

From the very day of his election he is arbiter of the success or failure of his own administration to an extent far beyond that of many of his predecessors. He, above all others, assumes responsibility for the future of his country, the fortunes of his party and the place in history of himself.

That he shall make that future glorious and prosperous is the wish of every American, regardless of party affiliation or personal advantages, and the well-known saying "He serves his party best who serves his country best," can well be amplified to make honor personal through patriotic service.

Yet, as Executive of the republic and the chosen and accepted leader of his party, Mr. Wilson enters into most arduous duties and assumes burdens that cannot be cast off, ignored nor slighted.

Which the Republican party has followed the Federalists and the Whig parties to the political cemetery, there remains a numbing and strong opposition to Democracy in the National Progressive party, and that opposition will not be slow to recruit itself from the disorganized, defeated and dependent forces which have vainly endeavored to prevent the final overthrow of a once powerful political organization.

The great central states of Pennsylvania, Michigan and Illinois exercise a political force that will ever remain a strong factor in national political results, and it will not be long until it will be found that opponents of Democracy in Vermont, Utah, Idaho and Wyoming will be in full and active co-operation with those who have held the larger states in opposition to Democracy in its day of greatest victory.

A disrupted effort and worn-out party will be succeeded by a new and vigorous one, ready to take advantage of every Democratic legislative mistake and of every blunder of a Democratic administration.

While we rejoice, it is but wisdom to consider well the future and its responsibilities, probabilities and dangers.—Enquirer.

PRESIDENT-ELECT WILSON Has Not Decided Upon The Personnel of His Cabinet.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 7.—President-elect Woodrow Wilson has not decided upon the personnel of his future Cabinet and he intends to keep his mind open on the subject for a long time before he takes office. He was manifestly concerned today about certain speculations emanating from Princeton with respect to the probable make-up of his cabinet. "I put an end, if possible, to all gossip about such appointments," he issued the following statement:

"Such speculations are perfectly fruitless. I will be perfectly open with regard to appointments of the first consequence until a final announcement is possible. No announcement will have the least authority that is not made over my own signature. These are matters which must be determined by very deliberate counsel and not by gossip."

What Texans Admire is hearty, vigorous life, according to Hugh Tillman, of San Antonio. "We find," he writes, "that Dr. King's New Life Pills surely put new life and energy into a person. Wife and I believe they are the best made. Excellent for stomach, liver or kidney trouble. 25 cents at all dealers.—Adv.

Both of Boone county's candidates are well known with the race he made for election to Congress—Mr. Rouse because of his magnificent majority, and Mr. Wallace because of having received more votes in the district than were cast for the Taft electors.

"A Quiet Election."

In Kentucky, at least, it was a quiet election and reports of the same tenor come from various parts of the country at large.

All elections ought to be quiet. In these days of the secret ballot there is no reason why an election anywhere should be uproarious. Many of the present day voters remember the old time elections when viva voce balloting was the rule instead of the exception. Some of those elections were anything but quiet. Not infrequently a general election was characterized by a more or less general fight. It is an easier matter nowadays for the voter to vote his sentiments. In the privacy of the polling booth he may stamp under whatever emblem pleases him and, if he so elects, no one may be the wiser as to how he marks his ballot.

In the United States there have had a quiet, presidential campaign, singularly free from anything reminiscent of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," or the later hard-cider days, which the oldest inhabitants are fond of recalling. It would be better and more sensible if all our campaigns were quiet. The election of President of a great country is a serious piece of business. The voter should go seriously about voting and should not be too strongly moved by extraneous influences. In other words, he should do his own thinking and not depend on a party boss or a ward heeler to instruct him in his constitutional privileges.

There are some hopeful indications that the voters of the United States are becoming more independent in their voting and are not so easily swayed by political buncombe, always abundant, as has been the case with the voters of past generations and past campaigns. If the trend shall continue in that direction it will be no bad thing for the country. We can get along without a good deal of the red fire and the useless extravagances that have characterized our national political canvasses. Also we should be thankful for quiet elections. The more of them the better. There is plenty of time for shouting when the returns come in, and, in politics, he that shouts last shouts best.—C. J.

Burlington 32—Bellevue 0.

Burlington High School journeyed to Bellevue and defeated the High School of that place 32 to 0 last Friday. Bellevue was soundly outclassed and Burlington's goal was not in danger for one minute during the entire game. The trick plays and formations of the Burlington team were the belle of the aggregation off their feet. Again Hager was the shining star for Burlington, his end runs and line bucking being nothing short of sensational. The game was slow and the Burlington boys played a much weaker game than heretofore. The line-up was as follows:

Burlington	Bellevue
Ross left guard	Boyle
Walton center	Walton
Gaines right guard	Snelling
Crigger right tackle	Clorr
Dye right end	Northeast
McGlosson quarter	Brady
Tolin right half	Clorr
Dempsey full back	Scott

The protracted meeting at the local Baptist church closed last Sunday. During the meeting there were six additions to the church, three by letter—Bud Goodridge, wife and daughter, and three by confession—Mrs. Lucien Clorr, Sarah Ryle and Walter Hall. The last three were baptized last Sunday morning and during the morning services. The several sermons delivered by Rev. Wayman were able and interesting.

Hubert Gaines paid $15 for a Hereford male yearling at J. J. Walton's sale, but never went after it until last Monday. He fed the animal in his wagon and in its efforts to free itself it broke its neck. It was cleaned at once for the market.

Bang! bang!! bang!!!—Friday.

Keep in readiness for bad weather.

Three weeks from today is Thanksgiving.

So far this fall this community has been generally healthy.

Only two more weeks in which to pay taxes and avoid the penalty.

There is plenty of grass yet, which is very convenient for the farmers.

You can go hunting tomorrow, provided you have taken out your license.

It is not much trouble to name the States that Woodrow Wilson did not carry.

Jack Eddins has joined the ranks of Boone county auto owners. Keep out of his road.

Assessor T. G. Willis was busy in this neighborhood last week. He is making considerable headway with his official work this fall.

The Boys' Corn Club should make the show at Hebron on the 30th inst., very interesting with their exhibits. What say you, boys?

Attend Green's Cloak opening in Rising Sun on the 16th, 17th and 18th. There was never such a line of Cloaks shown in that city. The prices are right.

In this issue you will find the advertisement of the Boone County Corn Show, which will be held at Hebron on Saturday, Nov. 30. The advertisement carries the premium list.

John Crisler, of Union neighborhood, was a visitor to Burlington, last Friday. He was very much pleased with the way Woodrow cleaned up in the election on the Tuesday before.

It is said that several of those who expect to be candidates before the next Democratic primary election are doing considerable quiet work. That is right, keep quiet at least until the first of the year.

Raymond Goodridge, who lives about two miles southwest of Burlington, killed a hawk that measured three feet from tip to tip. This was one of the largest birds of that species ever seen in this part of the country.

The cabinet makers are now very busy constructing a cabinet for President-elect Wilson, but doubtless he will be found having considerable to say concerning the make-up of his advisory body, before it is ready for service.

Leonard Kite, of the Waterloo neighborhood, reports the biggest yield of potatoes of anyone in the county, heard from so far. He planted one pack and dug therefrom eleven and three-quarter bushels. Who can beat it? Len says they are as fine as ever grew.

Don't waste your money buying strengthening plasters. Chamberlain's Liniment is cheaper and better. Dampen a piece of flannel with it and bind it over the affected parts and it will relieve the pain and soreness. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Son and E. E. Kelly.—Adv.

Local Democrats were not worked up in the least over the election returns as they came in on Tuesday night of last week, although they remained up until it was certain how the election had gone, and if you remember that did not require them to keep very late hours.

John Jackson and family, who resided at the first tollgate out on the Petersburg pike for many years, moved to Indiana, last week, where Mr. Jackson will have charge of a large farm belonging to his brother-in-law, Nick Oberding. The many friends of the family wish them all the good luck imaginable in their new home.

Thos. Howe, formerly of Gallatin county, and Mrs. Katie Weldon were married at the tollhouse on the Anderson Ferry and Limaburg turnpike, last Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Revs. Duncan and Fredericks, of Ludlow, officiating. The attendants were Lowell and Katie Tanner, Richard Garnett and Stella Popham. There were about fifty guests present.

The weighing of the mail at the local postoffice during the month of November shows that the incoming mail amounted to 3,460 pounds, while the outgoing mail was 1,773 pounds. Rural route No. 1 delivered 923 pounds, route No. 2, 710 pounds; Route No. 3, 610 pounds. This shows that the Burlington postoffice is doing a considerable volume of business.

Ralph Edwards, of Walton, came over last Friday morning to assist in making the official count of the vote cast on the 15th inst. He was not in the capital very long as the vote had already been tabulated when he arrived and he only had to sign the certificates of election which were prepared and ready to receive his autograph. Mr. Edwards is one of the county election commission.

NOVEMBER TWENTY-EIGHTH

Named As A Day of Thanks By President Taft.

Washington, Nov. 1.—President Taft issued today the Thanksgiving proclamation setting aside November 28 for the observance of that day.

The proclamation follows: "By the President of the United States of America:

"A God-fearing nation like ours owes it to its unborn and sincere sense of moral duty to testify to the devout gratitude of the All-giver for the countless benefits it has enjoyed. For many years it has been customary at the close of year for the national executive to call upon his fellow-countrymen to offer praise and thanks to God for the manifold blessings vouchsafed to them in the past and to unite in earnest supplication for their continuance.

"The year now drawing to a close has been notably favorable to our fortunate land. At peace within and without, free from the perturbations and calamities that have afflicted other peoples; rich in harvests so abundant and in industries so productive that the overflow of our prosperity has advantaged the whole world; strong in the steadfast conservation of the heritage of self-government; bequeathed to us by our fathers, and firm in the resolve to transmit that heritage unimpaired but rather improved by good use, to our children and our children's children for all time to come, the people of this country have abundant cause for contented gratitude.

"Wherefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America in pursuance of a long-established usage and in response to the wish of the American people, invite my countrymen, wheresoever they may be, to join on Thursday, the 28th day of this month of November, in appropriate ascription of praise and thanks to God for the good gifts that have been our portion and in humble prayer that His great mercies toward us may endure.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington this 17th day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

(Signed) WM. H. TAFT.

"By the President: ALVY A. McADOO, "Acting Secretary of State."

Celebrated His 80th Birthday.

The nieces and nephews, children and grandchildren and numerous other friends of my father, Richard Clements, tendered him a very pleasant surprise in honor of his 80th birthday at his home near Hathaway, Boone Co., Sunday, Nov. 3d. Fifty-nine persons were in attendance, most of whom were near relatives. A long table loaded with every delicacy known to country people was provided by the friends, to whom many thanks are due. In the afternoon a sermon, a discourse most appropriate to the occasion, was delivered in a very touching manner by Rev. McMillan, pastor of Big Bone Baptist church. It was pronounced most excellent by all who heard it. The day was most beautiful and bright and benighted such a joyous occasion.

Those from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. "Billy" Elliston, Miss Bess McNeely, Paul McNeely, Miss Lily Clements and Rose Chapman, of Gallatin county, Mrs. Len Clements and children, Sidney, Elizabeth and Irene; Mr. and Mrs. Ryle, Mr. and Mrs. Courchey Ryle and baby and Mrs. Hal Presser, of Latonia, and Covington; Rev. Geo. Smith, of Georgetown College; Fred McAlister, of Indiana. Others in attendance were Rev. McMillan, L. J. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Pink Neal, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Clements, Mrs. Emma Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Lafe Presser and children, Mr. and Mrs. Omer Adams, Robt. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. John McNeely and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. McNeely, Ernest McNeely, Lee McNeely, Mr. and Mrs. Mat Ryle and children, Robt. O. Ryle, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McAtee, Miss Elma McAtee, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wil Ryle, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Clements and children.

If there were others and I have failed to remember them, I beg pardon, as I have depended solely on memory, and you may know you were just as welcome, as would have been others of our old neighbors who might have desired to come.

I am so glad my father is a typical Kentuckian of the old school, whose latch string always hangs on the outside, and I am proud to claim myself a chip off the old block.

A thousand thanks are due Bro. McMillan and the relatives and friends, and the Editor of the Recorder for publishing this lengthy article, but Bro. Riddell, you don't get the opportunity to publish an account of the celebration of the 80th anniversary of the birth of Boone Co. people every week, but I hope you will have many more as pleasant as this one.

Thanking you in advance, Mrs. Annie Clements Ryle.

A postoffice inspector was in Burlington, last Monday, coming to overlook the Union rural route in regard to a change which is desired so those living on Gum Branch below Big Bone Baptist church will be supplied. The inspector had a hard time showing the route, and when the desired change or extension was explained to him by Congressman A. B. Riddell he said he would recommend it.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Good Times Coming.

It was not strange that a number of gentlemen in and about Raleigh yielded to an overmastering impulse to visit newer lands, nor was it strange that the initial steps looking toward the indulgence of their desires should have been taken in secrecy. Mr. Pegloe was one of the first to leave; Mr. Saul had informed him of the Judge's declared purpose of shooting him on sight. Even without this useful hint the tavern-keeper had known that he should experience intense embarrassment in meeting the Judge; this was now a dreary certainty.

"You reckon he means near all he says?" he had asked, his fat sides shaking.

"I'd take his word a heap quicker than I would most folk," answered Mr. Saul with conviction.

Pegloe promptly had a sinking spell. He recalled the snuffing of the candles by the Judge, an extremely depressing memory under the circumstances; also the reckless and headlong disregard of consequences which had characterized so many of that gentleman's acts, and his plans shaped themselves accordingly, with this result; that when the Judge took occasion to call at the tavern, and the hostile nature of his visit was emphasized by the cautious manner of his approach, he was greatly shocked to discover that his intended victim had sold his business overnight for a small lump sum to Mr. Saul's brother-in-law, who had appeared most opportunely with an offer.

Pegloe's flight created something of a sensation, but it was dwarfed by the sensation that developed a day or so later when it became known that Tom Ware and Colonel Pentress had likewise fled the country. Still later, Pentress' body, showing marks of violence, was washed ashore at a woodland clearing. It was thought, conjectured that he and Ware had set out from The Oaks to cross the river; there was reason to believe that Pentress had in his possession at the time a considerable sum of money, and it was supposed that his companion had murdered him and robbed him. Of Ware's subsequent career nothing was ever known.

These were, after all, only episodes in the collapse of the Clan, sporadic manifestations of the great work of disintegration that was going forward and which the Judge, more than any other, perhaps, brought about. This was something no one questioned, and he quickly passed to the first phase of that unique and peculiar esteem in which he was ever after

The Tobacco Outlook.

Owing to the drouth that prevails throughout the white-burley tobacco section of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri, preparations for the marketing of the crop have been brought to a standstill and warm rains must come before the farmers and the growers can accomplish the stripping of the crop. With notification from buyers representing the big manufacturing plants of the country that no bids would be made on tobacco stripped in any other way than the natural way, farmers have been compelled to discontinue the use of artificial means for bringing tobacco in case and well they might heed the lesson. The sprinkling of tobacco with water and putting it in bulk for the purpose of stripping, which was largely practiced in former years, was during periods of drouth, was both damaging to the texture of leaf and had a marked tendency to turn the product dark, has been practically discontinued and when the rains come and to which beco goes upon the breaks it will be uninjured both as to quality and color and the farmers will be well repaid for their patience and care.

The crop to be marketed is one of unusual quality and color and is bound to bring good prices. The manufacture of cigarettes and purposes has so increased of late as to make the demand for the light colored and chaffy sorts unprecedented and the 1912 crop is largely of this sort of tobacco.

It will be but a few weeks, indeed the opening of the market is right upon us and with a good tobacco season the work of stripping the crop and marketing it in wagonload lots on the floors of the loose-leaf warehouses throughout Central Kentucky will be prosecuted with unusual celerity.—Ex.

held. His fame widened with the succeeding years; he had offers of help which impressed him as so entirely creditable to human nature that he quite lacked the heart to refuse them, especially as he felt that in the improvement of his own condition he had bettered himself and was moving nearer those sound and righteous ideals of morality and patriotism which had never lacked his endorsement, no matter how inexpedient it had seemed for him to put them into practice. But he was not diverted from his ultimate purpose by the glamour of a present popularity; he was able to keep his bearded eyes resolutely fixed on the main chance, namely the Pentress estate and the Quintard lands. It was highly important that he should go east to South Carolina to procure documentary evidence that would establish his own and Pentress' identity; to Kentucky, where Pentress had lived prior to his coming to Tennessee.

Early in November the Judge set out by stage on his journey east; he was accompanied by Yancy and Hannibal, from neither of whom could he bring himself to be separated; and as the woods, flaming now with the torch of frost, engulfed the little town, he turned in his seat and looked back. He had entered it by that very road, a beggar on foot and in rags; he was leaving it in broadcloth and in linen, visible tokens of his altered fortunes. More than this, he could trust his hands deep down into his once empty pockets and hear the clink of gold and silver. The Judge slowly withdrew his eyes from the last gray roof that showed among the trees, and faced the east and the future with a serenely confident expression.

Betty Malroy and Carrington had ridden into Raleigh to take leave of their friends. They had watched the stage from sight, had answered the last majestic salute the Judge had given them across the swaying top of the coach before the first turn of the road hid it from sight, and then they had turned their horses' heads in the direction of Belle Plain.

"Bruce, do you think Judge Price will ever be able to accomplish all he hopes to?" Betty asked when they had left the town behind. She drew in her horse as she spoke, and they went forward at a walk under the splendid old oaks of the forest and over a carpet of vivid leaves.

"I reckon he will, Betty," responded Carrington. Unfavorable as had been his original estimate of the Judge's character, events had greatly modified it. "He really seems quite sure, doesn't he?" said Betty.

"There's not a doubt in his mind," agreed Carrington. He was still at Belle Plain, living in what had been Ware's office, while the Cavendishes were domiciled at the big house. He had arranged with the Judge to crop a part of that hopeful gentleman's land the very next season; the fact that a lawsuit intervened between the Judge and possession seemed a trifling matter, for Carrington had become infected with the Judge's point of view, which did not admit of the possibility of failure; but he had not yet told Betty of his plans. Time enough for that when he left Belle Plain.

His silence concerning the future had caused Betty much thought. She wondered if he still intended going south into the Purchase; and was not sure but it was the dignified thing for him to do. She was thinking of this now as they went forward over the rustling leaves, and at length she turned in the saddle and faced him.

"I am going to miss Hannibal dreadfully—yes, and the Judge, and Mr. Yancy," she began.

"I am to be missed, too, am I, Betty?" he inquired, leaning toward her.

"You, Bruce?—Oh, I shall miss you, too, dreadfully—but then, perhaps in five years, when you come back."

"Five years!" cried Carrington, but he understood something of what was passing in her mind, and laughed shortly. "Five years, Betty?" he repeated, dwelling on the numeral.

Betty hesitated and looked thoughtful. Presently she stole a surreptitious glance at Carrington from under her long lashes, and went on slowly as though she were making careful choice of her words.

"When you come back in three years, Bruce—"

Carrington still regarded her fixedly. There was a light in his black eyes that seemed to penetrate to the most secret recesses of her heart and soul.

"Three years, Betty?" he repeated again.

Betty, her eyes cast down, twisted her rein nervously between her slim, white fingers, but Carrington's steady glance never left her sweet face, framed by its halo of bright hair. She stole another look at him from beneath her dark lashes.

"Three years, Betty?" he prompted.

"Bruce, don't stare at me that way, it makes me forget what I was going to say. When you come back—next year—" and then she lifted her eyes to his and he saw that they were full of sudden tears. "Bruce, don't go away—don't go away at all—"

Carrington slipped from the saddle and stood at her side.

"Do you mean that, Betty?" he asked. He took her hands loosely in his and relentlessly considered her crimsoned face. "I reckon it will always be right hard to refuse you anything—here is one settler the Purchase will never get!" and he laughed softly.

"It was the Purchase—you were going there!" she cried.

"No, I wasn't Betty; that notion died its natural death long ago. When we are sure you will be safe at Belle Plain with just the Cavendishes, I am going into Raleigh to wait as best I can until spring." He spoke so gravely that she asked in quick alarm. "And then, Bruce—what?"

"And then—Oh, Betty, I'm starving! All in a moment he lifted her slender figure in his arms, gathering her close to him. "And then, this—this—and this, sweetheart—and more—and—oh, Betty! Betty!"

CHAPTER XXXV.

The End and the Beginning.

When Murrell was brought to trial his lawyers were able to produce a host of witnesses whose sworn testimony showed that so simple a thing as perjury had no terrors for them. His fight for liberty was waged in and out of court with incredible bitterness, and, as Judge and jury were only human, the outlaw escaped with the relatively light sentence of twelve years' imprisonment; he died, however, before the expiration of his term.

The Judge, when he returned to Raleigh, resumed his own name of Turberville, and he allowed it to be known that he would not be offended by the prefix of General. During his absence he had accumulated a wealth of evidence of undoubted authenticity, with the result that his claim against the Pentress estate was sustained by the courts, and when The Oaks with its stock and slaves was offered for sale, he, as the principal creditor, was able to buy it in.

One of his first acts after taking possession of the property was to have Mahaffy's remains exhumed from the grove of oaks below his bedroom windows, and he marked the spot with a great square of granite. The Judge, visibly shaken by his emotions, saw the massive boulder go into place.

"Hush and rugged like the nature of him who lies beneath it—but enduring, too, as he was," he murmured. He turned to Yancy and Hannibal, and added: "You will lay me beside him when I die."

Then when the bitter struggle came and he was wrenched and tortured by long years, his strength was in remembering the result that his dead man and it was his custom to go out under the oaks and pace to and fro beside Mahaffy's grave until he had gained the mastery of himself. Only Yancy and Hannibal knew how fierce the conflict was he waged, yet in the end he won that rest against all vicissitudes, the victory over himself.

"My salvation has been a costly thing; it was bought with the blood of my friend," he told Yancy.

It was Hannibal's privilege to give Cavendish out of the vast Quintard tract such a farm as the earl had never dreamed of owning even in his most fervid moments of imagining; and he abandoned all idea of going to England to claim his title. At the Judge's suggestion he named the place Earl's Court. He and Polly were entirely aglissed with their surroundings, and never ceased to congratulate themselves that they had left Lincoln county. They felt that their friends, the Carringtons at Belle Plain, though untitled people, were still of an equal rank with themselves; while as for the Judge, they doubted if royalty itself could buy him.

Mr. Yancy accepted his changed fortunes with philosophic composure. Technically he filled the position of overseer at The Oaks, but the Judge's activity was so great that this position was largely a sinecure. The most arduous work he performed was spending his wages.

Certain trifling peculiarities survived with the Judge even after he had entered what he had once been prone to call the Portal of Hope; for while his charity was very great and he lived with the splendid air of plenty that belonged to an older order, it required tact, patience and persistence to transact business with him; and his creditors, of whom there were always a respectable number, discovered that he esteemed them as they were aggressive and determined. He explained to Yancy that too great certainty detracted from the charm of living, for, after all, life was a game—a gamble—he desired to be reminded of this. Yet he was held in great respect for his wisdom and learning, which was no more questioned than his courage.

Thus surrounded by his friends, who were devoted to him, he began Hannibal's education and the preparation of his memoirs, intended primarily for the instruction of his grandson, and which he modestly decided to call "The History of My Own Times," which clearly showed the magnificence of his mind and its outlook.

A Few Thoughts About Gold.

Gold has held as the most precious metal from the very earliest times, and has always been eagerly sought after. All nations have recognized its value, and in the great and destructive wars that have swept the earth from time to time, gold, and silver also, has been greatly prized and seized as booty by invading tribes who destroyed palaces, temples and works of art that were priceless. By the Israelites it was supposedly first counted as money in the time of Ezra, but was used as a medium of exchange as early as the days of Abraham. No native gold was found in Palestine, but it was imported from Ophir, Sheba, and other places. It has aroused the cupidity of man from the days when Heseleah showed all the treasures of the Lord's house to the king of Babylon, making sure of the destruction of his family thereby, down to later times, when, following the great discovery of Columbus, greed for gold was made the chief object of the voyages undertaken at that time, and failure to find it in satisfying quantities to satisfy this greed led to the indignities heaped upon the great discoverer, as though the finding of gold was of more importance than the discovery of a world. The same greed for gold led to the conquest of Mexico and Peru, and the seizing of the enormous treasure found in these countries, and also to the destruction of their ancient and wonderful civilization. In our own times the narrowing lust for gold leads to the greatest injustice and cruelty.

Men and women will sacrifice all the finer and nobler emotions and become mere machines for the getting of gold or its equivalent men will brave any hardship, and even death itself, whenever there is news of the discovery of fresh goldfields, however distant and perilous the way may be. I have never wondered what has become of all the gold that has been gathered through the ages. While much has been worn away and scattered bit by bit by the waiting hand of time, some that has come down from the most distant ages may have taken on new life of late, stamped as the coin of some realm, and some that has been acquired by the grossest cruelty and outrage may now be the means of the greatest blessing to the world under the direction of our churches. Gold, like fire, is a good servant, but a poor master. It can buy many things, but there are other things it cannot procure. The means for building the most splendid edifices are furnished by it, but the skill of the architect who plans it is the gift of God. The finest works of art may be bought with it, but not the artist's soul that took the cold canvas and made it glow with life and beauty. You may buy with gold the works of the greatest masters of poetry and prose, but the comprehending mind that takes in the beauty and glory of the universe, and fine language to interpret it, is also the gift of the infinite God. Gold will not purchase true love or happiness, health or a conscience void of offense. Neither will it win for us the inheritance that is incorruptible and undefiled and that fades not away. Gold has always been held as an emblem of Purity. Job says, "when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold," and the streets of the heavenly city are described as being of pure gold. To obtain gold in its primitive state it must be dug out of the earth from the veins where it is hidden and be refined and separated from its native elements before it is fit for its manifold uses. So there is many human souls, deep buried under the wreckage of sin and misfortune, who, through the help of consecrated men and women may be sought out, cleansed and purified by power divine from the gross of sin, stamped with the image and superscription of the king, and made to shine as bright jewels for His kingdom. To carry on this blessed work, gold is needed, flowing through many channels, and it can never be put to a nobler use than in helping to lift up fallen humanity through the mediumship of our ministers and influence of christian people.

Escapes An Awful Fate.
A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. B. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with dreadful cough," she writes, "Sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctors' treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery. But I owe my life to this wonderful remedy for I scarcely ever cough at all now. Quick and safe, its the most reliable of all throat and lung medicines. Every bottle guaranteed. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at all dealers.—Adv.

The way Ohio treated Mr. Taft was the worst feature in the Presidential election from a Republican view point. No other man was ever so thoroughly repudiated by his people as was Mr. Taft, not so much because of the individual but because of those with whom he had surrounded himself as his advisors in official business.

Lexington defeated the negro who was nominated for commissioner at the recent primary election in that city.

The result of the election has had no effect on the business of the country as yet.

The work of excavation and preparing for the double track system on the Q. & C. Railroad is progressing rapidly at Walton, and the contractors O. F. Peterson & Sons are well pleased with the progress they are making with the use of a steam shovel and steam drill. Considerable blasting has to be done in the rocky cuts, but care is being exercised to prevent any damage to adjacent property.
Walton Chapter Eastern Star had a most enjoyable meeting last Monday night when the degree was conferred on John Ingram and Clarence Menefee in a most impressive and beautiful manner, the sisters of the chapter being very proficient in the work and taking a great interest in conferring the degree in a first class manner. Following the work a very appetizing luncheon was served by the sisters.
Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Hall of Burgin, Mercer county, were visitors here part of last week en route home. Mr. Hall is the cashier of the Deposit Bank at Burgin and was called to his old home at Ghent by the sad news of the fatal illness of his wife's mother Mrs. H. Bersot, arriving there two hours after Mrs. Bersot had died. Mr. Bersot is an invalid and accompanied his daughter Mrs. Hall home with the expectation of remaining.
Sunday evening a very pretty and happy wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. McGrudder, when the hearts and hands of Nicholas T. Welsh and Miss Kathryn Bollinger were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock in the presence of about thirty relatives and invited guests. Rev. L. A. Kohler, pastor of Walton Christian church, performed a very impressive and beautiful ceremony that bound the two happy lives in one. The pretty bride was very becomingly attired in white serge, tastefully trimmed and mainly groom after the hearty congratulations of those present, the happy couple left on the evening train to spend a couple of days in Cincinnati. The groom is the fireman of the L. & N. Railroad, and is one of the cleverest and most popular men in Walton. His charming bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bollinger, and has a large circle of admiring friends, who esteem her for her pleasant manner and happy nature. She had been the night operator at Walton telephone exchange for several years and was very popular. On Saturday preceding the wedding Mrs. McGrudder gave a miscellaneous show-er to the bride-elect, and about one hundred responded, all bringing presents, useful and ornamental, and a very pleasant afternoon was spent together. Nice refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Welsh will go to house-keeping in the property of Mrs. M. L. Lathrop, who recently moved to Covington. The best wishes of a host of friends are tendered Mr. and Mrs. Welsh for a long, happy and prosperous future.

PUBLIC SALE
Of Three Desirable Boone County Farms.
On Saturday, Nov. 30th, 1912, I will offer at public sale on the premises, three improved Boone county farms, all in one tract, and being on Bullock Pen Creek adjoining my Grant county farm about two miles from Crittenden and the same distance from Verona.
FARM NO. 1 contains 100 to 115 acres and has a comfortable house, stable and other buildings on it. Also a nearly new oak frame tobacco barn 40x60 feet and 20 feet to the eaves, with a capacity of 20,000 lbs. of tobacco. This is a fine body of land and is situated about one-half mile from the Verona and Bracht turnpike. It offers a great opportunity as a money maker.
I estimate that the corn crop this year will average 60 bushels to the acre.
FARM NO. 2 adjoins the above and has a good five-room house, stable, hen house, smoke house, etc., all recently built, and contains 70 to 85 acres. The most of it is rich limestone soil, and it will make a splendid home for somebody.
FARM NO. 3 adjoins the above and contains 33 1/2 acres. It is improved with a good three-room house, also a tenant house, a barn and other buildings. The crops on this place for a few years ought to pay for it. Some alfalfa is growing and one-third or more of the farm is adapted to alfalfa. About ten acres have been sown in rye.
Sale begins at 10 a. m. at the big barn on farm No. 1.
The tract of 218 acres will also be offered as a whole.
TERMS:—One-third or more cash and the balance in one and two years at 6 per cent. interest. I reserve the right to reject any and all bids.
Come at once and look these farms over.
For further particulars address F. S. POLLITT, Crittenden, Ky.

Good Prices for Tobacco.
Growers of tobacco this year seem likely to secure good prices for their crops. Several crops have been sold in this county at prices averaging about ten cents per pound. Other buyers have been paid in some instances. On account of the dry weather not much of the crop has been stripped, hence it is not in condition to be shown. With a good general rain within the next few days the work of stripping the crop will begin and buying will become active. The loose-leaf market will probably open about the first of next month, altho no announcement has yet been made. When it will open.—Grant County News.

Messrs. Baatz & Love of Covington have bought a great many crops of tobacco in Gallatin county during the past two weeks and it is probable that their purchases aggregate half a million pounds. They are buyers have also been in the county and made purchases and if the present rate of buying continues a few weeks more Gallatin's crop will have all been bought up, as it is hardly likely that the entire county crop is much in excess of 2,000,000 pounds. The quality is unusually good, there being plenty of color in a great proportion of the crop, although it is a trifle light in weight. Prices paid have in most instances run from 10 to 12 1/2 cents, altho some small quantities have been sold as low as 7 1/2 cents. The early buying and prices paid are somewhat unusual, and the probability is that the great proportion of the tobacco which has been sold has been bought for speculative purposes.—Warsaw Independent.

The Road Question.

The bond issue lost by a good sized majority, but we are not in the least discouraged about roads. We are for a bond issue to build roads because we believe that is the only way they can be built, but if roads can be built any other way we are for that way. It does not matter to us how it is done, let it be a bond issue, special taxation, militia or what. Give us roads.—Mt. Vernon Signal.

Almost a year has elapsed since the Legislature established a state department of Good Roads to supply the counties with instructions in building roads. The yearly expense of the bonded thing is about $25,000. Show us a road it has encouraged or built. How much better it were to use that $25,000 on road building directly, than to fatten up a petted clique of petty politicians! Undoubtedly it would be more democratic to appropriate the sum to paper counties each year.—Hazel Greep Herald.

It is perfectly safe to say that by the slushy way in which the stone roads have been built in this section the loss through inevitable wear and tear exceeds several times over what it would have cost originally to make a good roadbed. This does not need iterating and reiterating. People who will stop to consider the matter will realize this. The road work should be taken up systematically by the counties, and each year they should add something to the mileage of permanent road improvement, and that improvement should be lasting and built for comfort and economy—economy in the wear and tear of vehicles after the work is done.—Monticello Outlook.

Last year about nine miles of gravel roads were built in this county. This year will see about ten or twelve miles more finished, and the work now being done on the La Center, Barlow and Wickliffe road is being handled by experts in road building and when finished it will be the best road in the county, and as good as any in Western Kentucky. But there is much complaint about the half-and-half plan, and many say they do not favor building any more roads on this plan. They say bond the county and build all the main roads at once. This is what should be done—what we have been advocating for more than a year.—Wickliffe, Yeoman.

Farmers are you going to stolidly by and let the association go out of business? If you do, you will never regret it but once.—La Center Advance.

With money organized into a tobacco trust it seems to us like it will be necessary for tobacco growers to organize and stay in an organization to prevent a recurrence of low prices.—Fulton News.

Tobacco buyers are skirmishing around the country in this and adjoining counties buying up tobacco shreds to grow and sell. A number of crops in this vicinity were sold at 14 and 15 cents. Much tobacco was grown in the Burley District this season, and the quality is exceptionally fine.—Mayville Bulletin.

Owners of land are making a great mistake in permitting tobacco shreds to grow and sell. A regular crop has been cut. Such a draw more strength out of the land than is needed in the production of the main crop. (I don't know the shreds, or better still, plow them under. This fall may be a repetition of the fall of '31—thirty-one years ago. It will be remembered tobacco shreds grew thickly until nearly Christmas before there was sufficient freeze to wilt them.—Mt. Olivet Tribune-Democrat.

Tobacco Talk.

will be secured to hold the organization and make it a strong factor in the tobacco world.—Murray Ledger.

Escapes An Awful Fate. A thousand tongues could not express the gratitude of Mrs. J. E. Cox, of Joliet, Ill., for her wonderful deliverance from an awful fate. "Typhoid pneumonia had left me with a dreadful cough," she writes, "sometimes I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery. I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery. I had such awful coughing spells I thought I would die. I could get no help from doctor's treatment or other medicines till I used Dr. King's New Discovery."

Alfred Cason Dies Aged 92.

Mr. Alfred Cason, one of the county's oldest and best citizens, and who resided about two miles southwest of Burlington, died last Sunday night after about two weeks' illness of ailments incident to old age. His family Bible records his birth as having occurred February 6, 1820, according to which record he was 92 years, eight months and 11 days old at the time of his death. Mr. Cason's wife, who was a daughter of Nathaniel Green, has been dead many years. Five children, all grown, survive their father. Mr. Cason came from Harrison county, and spent most of his life on the farm where he died. He was a quiet, unassuming man, who never tired doing for his friends, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. After prayer by Rev. Edgar C. Riley the remains were placed in the vault in the cemetery east of town, Tuesday, to await final interment.

Teachers' Meeting.

The teachers' meeting of the Hebron school last Saturday. The following teachers were present: Prof. E. L. Dix, H. L. Harrison, Omer Dix, Mrs. John Hogan, Miss Edna Riley, Lizzie Mae McGilgason, Katie Mendall, Sadie Reiman, Mammie Haley and Pearl Stephenson. The meeting was called to order by the Chairman, H. L. Harrison. Devotional exercises were conducted by Supt. Riley. Prayer by Prof. E. L. Dix, after which all teachers present responded with interesting and well prepared talks on subjects assigned them, which was certainly of interest and importance. 1st subject discussed—Mind Training by Miss Sadie Reiman, who had prepared an interesting paper. 2nd—The Teacher as a Student, Miss Eunice Stephens—this subject was also discussed by Prof. Dix and Supt. Riley. 3rd. Kind of problems that should be taught and used in the farming sections of Kentucky, Miss Katie Mendall, who was well prepared. 4th. How to secure the active interest of parents in the school, by Miss Pearl Stephenson, was also discussed by Prof. Dix. This is indeed a very important subject, and I know each teacher who was present desires the interest of the parents of their pupils in the school. 5th. The school as a social center, Miss Edna Riley, which was well discussed. 6th. The Reduction of the Rural Schools along more Utilitarian lines, Prof. E. L. Dix, who certainly gave an excellent talk. 7th. The County Supt. as a Supervisor, as an Administrative Officer, by Supt. Riley, who explained the importance and use of having a good supervisor to devote his time in the schools of the county, advising and training the young teachers, which certainly would be of an advantage to our schools. Mr. Riley also explained the importance of a Correspondence Course of Study. The teachers present decided to take the course. The teachers who did not attend certainly missed some excellent talks of school interest. All teachers should attend their meeting unless they have some reasonable excuse. To the Patrons of Hebron School: You are requested to visit our school as often as you possibly can in order to unite our school with your home and arouse an interest in your children. Pearl Stephenson, Secretary.

Box Social.

Don't forget the Box Social to be given for benefit of the Hebron school, Wednesday evening, Nov. 27, at Library Hall. Everybody come. Ladies, bring well filled boxes and gentlemen well filled purses. The following program will be given: Piano Solo—Alice Walton. Piano Duet—Ruth and Alberta Kelly. Rock Trial. Piano Solo—Sadie Lee Snyder. Song—Male Quartet.

The annual election of directors for the Boone County Consolidated Telephone Company, was held at the office of the President, M. J. Crouch in Union, last Wednesday. The old board was reelected and Dr. Crouch was made President and General Manager for another year. No dividend was declared but the property is increasing in value by reason of the improvement in the system, while new subscribers are being added to the list all the time, thus increasing the scope of the service and making it more to be desired.

Is your husband cross? An irritable, fault finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A man with good digestion is nearly always good natured. A great many have been permanently cured by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Son and E. E. Kelly.—Adv.

The corn crop in this county is perhaps the greatest in twenty-five years, and the yield is far in excess of that of former years. Yields of from 15 to 20 barrels are not uncommon, and the quality is excellent as well as the quantity. Blue Grass Clipper.

For Sale—Pure Red Blooded Rockers. Also Banded Rockers. For sale at once. Mrs. B. C. G. Richwood, Ky.

Arbor Day at Petersburg.

Arbor Day was very enjoyably observed, Wednesday, Nov. 14th, at Petersburg Graded School. Devotional exercises were conducted by Prof. J. H. Huey, after which a very delightful program by the Primary and Intermediate Grades, conducted by Miss Allen and Mrs. Bondurant.

A sumptuous lunch was served at noon to which all did full justice. At 1:30 after the singing of "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," Supt. Riley gave an interesting and instructive talk on Agriculture and Domestic Science in the schools. In spite of the fact that no men and few women were present, we hope that the new arts which have been introduced into this school will have received the hearty appreciation and cooperation of the patrons.

After Mr. Riley's speech an old fashioned spelling bee was enjoyed by all present. Ira Lee Thompson carried off all honors while Supt. Riley received the booby prize.

The school was tastefully decorated in class colors and autumn leaves. There was a fine display of the pupils' accomplishments in sewing and drawing under the supervision of Misses Hance and Aiken.

The following are the names of all pupils who made an average of more than 90 per cent in their work during the second month of school:

1st Grade—Gaines Yerkes, William White, Ethel Eggleston, Laura May Mathews, Over on Whiting.
2d Grade—Robt. Nixon, Lucille Hoffman, Teddy Nixon.
3d Grade—Mayme Louise Hensley, Argus Paper, Laura Long.
4th Grade—Leola Klopp.
5th Grade—Leo Geisler.
6th Grade—Marguerite Peters.
7th Grade—Agnes Thompson, Beulah William.

The Petersburg High School Literary Society will give an entertainment and lunch on Wednesday, Nov. 27th, at 2 p. m., at the school building. Everybody is cordially invited. Admission 15 cents.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church, South, are arranging to give a supper and entertainment, Friday evening, Dec. 27, and request the announcement to be made through the columns so that everybody will get good and ready.

Miss Queen Tillman, the stenographer in the law office of Tomlin & Vest, has been confined to her room since her return from Newport last week where she underwent an operation in a hospital for a nasal trouble.

Spent the week with Mrs. Wm. McBe.

Thursday a team of horses hitched to a wagon, belonging to W. H. Young of Kenton Co., took fright and ran away, doing record time for about two miles when they were stopped by the exhaustion of one of the horses who had passed the voting age and could not stand the pace of the other, a three year old, who ought to be a candidate for the free for all at the Latonia running races. No injury resulted except the strain on the old horse's wind.

Considerable complaint is being made by some of the residents about the nightly visitation of a crowd of young people who annoy them by "tick tacking" their homes, and some threaten to appeal to the authorities unless the practice is stopped, as they say they want to enjoy the quietude of their homes in the evening instead of being annoyed by the senseless practice of what the young people may consider fun for them but very aggravating to their unwilling victims.

The sixty acres of land belonging to the estate of the late Lamora Huey was sold at public outcry in front of the bank in Belton, last Thursday, by N. E. Riddell, agent for the heirs. Wm. Huey, one of the heirs, was the purchaser at $5,350. After the sale complete sold about fifteen acres of the united land to W. D. Arnold. The land was sold as ordered by the son Wedge P. Garnett on the river just at the new Bellevue.

WOMAN IS TO BE THE DIRECTOR

DR. ANNA LOUISE STRONG, EXPERIENCED WORKER, TO HAVE CHARGE OF EXHIBIT.

TO PORTRAY CONDITIONS

Many Deaths Among Kentucky Children Could be Prevented—This will be an Important Subject Before the Conference.

The scope of the Kentucky Child Welfare Conference and Exhibit at Louisville, November 21-30 is limited only by the conditions surrounding child life. Dr. Anna Louise Strong, a young woman in her early twenties, is the Director of the Exhibit. Dr. Strong is a Ph. D. from the University of Chicago and has directed the Child Welfare Exhibits in New York, Chicago, Kansas City and Montreal and is the most notable figure in America in this work. Under her supervision nearly $100,000 was spent in preparing for the New York exhibit. The great bulk of this money was spent in securing views and screens of child life in the school, in the home, in tenements or palaces, in settlement grounds and industrial conditions, as well as to show its moral and religious life and to show the operation of phi-will have photographs and charts showing how they are combining religious, physical and mental training.

Schools.

Boys and girls learn more quickly when education is varied to meet their individual needs and capacities. One of the largest exhibits will be that of the Louisville public schools, composed of photographs, charts and class rooms, where the parents may see the children actively engaged in kindergarten and primary and other grade work, as well as domestic science, drawing, music, manual training, and other modern school room activities.

Photographs of schools in other cities, with charts giving facts as to cost, equipment and organization, will indicate some of the lines along which the Louisville schools hope to develop. A room will be devoted to an Exhibit of the Wider Use of the School Plant, including Social Centers, School Gardens and Vacation Schools and Parent-Teachers' Associations.

The Kentucky School for the Blind will make an exhibit of its interesting and important work.

Recreation.

Play time can teach children how to pull together and to "toe fair." A model playground, fully equipped, will open to the children under the direction of regular supervisors. Photographs and charts showing what Louisville is furnishing the children in the way of recreation, can be seen here, also some of the future plans of the Board of Park Commissioners. Striking features of moving picture shows, dance halls and other commercial amusements will form part of this section.

Country Life and Schools.

Kentucky farms, forests and streams are waiting for the boy and girl who is learning to use them. The child in the country needs as fine a school as the child in the city. Conditions that affect child life in the country as distinguished from the city will here be made clear. The valuable lessons country boys and girls are learning from the Corn and Tomato Clubs will be shown and rural schools and housing conditions explained by photographs and models.

This Exhibit will be the first of its kind ever made in a Child Welfare Exhibit.

The Child and the Law.

The law is to protect, not to oppress, the child.

This section will show the work and the needs of institutions established by law for the care of neglected, dependent and delinquent children. It will also present the laws now existing for the protection of children, with suggestions for further legislation.

Industrial Conditions.

The wages in a family and the kind of work done decide largely the child's manner of life.

Figures and charts will give the wages of men and women, the accidents to industrial workers, the cost of living, and the result of these wages and accidents upon the child's life. Pictures and stories will show the harm done a child by selling papers, delivering messages and working indoors.

Homes.

The ideal place for the child should be his own home.

This section will be one of the most attractive of the whole exhibit. Here will be shown a three-room apartment furnished for a hundred dollars, a model playground with toys that are playable and durable and games and home occupations for children, practical outfits of children's clothes made of materials that will wear well. A

The Cause of It.

The Muncie (Indiana) Press, after having laid awake for many nights following the recent political avalanche, trying to ascertain how it all happened has given out the following postmortem findings:

On the face of the returns the "Progressives" cast more votes at the polls on Tuesday than did the Republicans. (The lead of the "Progressives" is apparent rather than real, however. For instance, in California Taft's name was not permitted to appear on the ticket, through the machinations of Bull Moose politicians. The 280,000 votes counted for Roosevelt in that state were cast under the Republican emblem. The Republican is that state voted for Wilson. The same situation existed in South Dakota and Oklahoma. But all over the country thousands upon thousands of Republican votes were cast for Wilson. The real Republican vote of Tuesday must have approximated five millions, and the real Democratic vote about the same, while Roosevelt's vote ran something over four million. As much of Roosevelt's vote came from the Democrats, Socialists and Independents, and the total was only four and a third millions, and much of the Republican vote went to Wilson to prevent Roosevelt's election, the falsity of the charge that Taft's nomination did not represent the majority sentiment of the Republic in the Republican vote that went in fear to Wilson. It is evident that he was the choice for President of the majority of the Republicans. And it is evident also that for the bolt engineered by Mr. Roosevelt when the Republican party denied him a third term nomination President Taft would have been reelected. Wilson fell a million short of a majority over Roosevelt and Taft.

Reports from all over the State as to the crop of quail indicate that the severe cold and heavy weather in the early part of the year killed the birds by the thousands, and the crop this year will be far below the average.

lathrop movements and the management of philanthropic homes. To this invaluable collection of screens was added about $50,000 worth of screens prepared for the Chicago Child Welfare Exhibit and subsequently valuable additions were made on account of the Kansas City and Montreal exhibits. All the screens used in the previous exhibits, as well as hundreds of views of Louisville and Kentucky conditions, will be shown at the Kentucky Exhibit and Conference this month.

The officers of the exhibit, who have given generously of their time, money and energy to further the enterprise for the sake of the Kentucky boy and girl, have endeavored to enlist the active co-operation of philanthropic workers throughout Kentucky, but owing to the newness of the venture have met without a great deal of success. However, they have secured reduced railroad rates into Louisville for the occasion and Mrs. Morris B. Belknap, president of the association and chief worker in preparing for the Louisville Exhibit, expresses the hope that every county and community in Kentucky will be largely represented. Miss Adele Brandles, a notable settlement worker of Louisville, is the assistant director of the Louisville exhibit.

Health.

Then Kentucky officers have compiled statistics showing that a large number of deaths among children can be prevented by proper feeding and care, as well as showing the startling fact that one child died for every four that are born.

In the health exhibit will be shown a milk station, babies' hospital room, dental clinic, pure food show, anti tuberculosis exhibit and a model dairy. This exhibit will be under the supervision of the Kentucky State Board of Health, which is co-operating with the officers of the Kentucky Child Welfare Association to its fullest extent in an endeavor to exhibit the cause and prevention of feeble-mindedness and blindness. Numerous photographs and charts have been collected along this line.

Moral Life.

The larger part now taken by the church in the child's weekday amusements makes religion more real to him than it was to his grandfathers and grandmothers in their boyhood and girlhood days. Under this heading the institutional church will show what they are doing for the reclamation of the children, as well as for the reclamation of the young men and young women. There will be a model Sunday School room with couples going on at stated hours. The united C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Y. M. W. C., and the Girls' Friendly Society will be at the exhibit.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

SMALL POX

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO PREVENT IT?

Getting vaccinated at proper intervals, especially before you go to school, is the best way to protect yourself.

Why Vaccination?

ALL WHO ARE EXPOSED TO SMALL POX SHOULD BE VACCINATED.

Smallpox is a disease which is highly contagious and often fatal.

It is caused by a virus which is present in the blood and secretions of the infected person.

It is spread by direct contact with the infected person or by contact with his clothing or bedding.

It is also spread by the air in the case of the varioloid form.

The farmers could largely increase their profits if they could be induced to decrease their acreage and better the quality of their tobacco crop, but we do not believe it either desirable or possible to cut out the 1913 crop.—Cynthiana Log Cabin.

To 40,000 Burley Tobacco Growers Stockholders in Strater Bros.' Branch Factory

Here are ten brands of tobacco. All of you know their worth, for you supply the leaf. It comes from your own tobacco farms. Most of you smoke or chew one of these brands, for they represent the cream of your crops. You know of none better, none richer, and you know that each sale brings a profit to you. You are partners in each of these brands. Here's a way to increase your profits on each.

40,000 Partner-Salesmen

We want 40,000 more salesmen and men, Mr. Grower, are one of them. We want you to work with us, to help sell these brands, and thus increase your revenue from them. Your cooperation, individually, can result in gigantic sales. Here's how it works out.

Let Each Man Tell Ten Friends

Let each of you growers tell ten friends what you know of Strater Bros. Branch Brands, the brands for which you grow the leaf. Always keep one of these brands in your pocket and give to these friends to try. Explain that the leaves were the pick of your crop and that no better crops are grown. Point out the reasons why these brands of tobacco should be every smoker's and chewer's choice since it is your choicest growth. 40,000 men, each telling ten friends, will thus get a powerful sales message to nearly 400,000. If each of those friends tell five others, nearly 2,000,000 men are affected. Think what an increase this would make on these brands in one section. You are selling to us. We are selling to them. So let us work jointly to sell the utmost that we can.

Tell Dealers, Too

Tell dealers, too, when you buy these brands, what you know of their quality. Let them know of their nation-wide popularity, how they repeat, and how they make friends of consumers. BE A BOOSTER OF BURLEY GROWERS' BRANDS, then boosting the sales and your profits.

TO ALL DEALERS WHO SELL TOBACCO

These brands of tobacco are famous sellers as all who sell them know. They are made from the best, from the cream of the crop, from forty thousand farms. They form the greatest repeaters known, a steady source of profit. Put them into your stock for a trial and see what they do. You will sell them for years if you sell them one week.

Man from Monkey

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

My lady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

My Mother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Grandma had a Cabinet with a tin sugar bin nailed to the door; Granddaughter's has an ant proof, automatic valve, crystal glass one, swinging to the Cabinet side.

My Mother and Grandmother hid their ironing-boards behind the kitchen door. In our Cabinet an ironing-board instantly comes from underneath the tabletop, and when ironing is done, Presto—out of sight it goes.

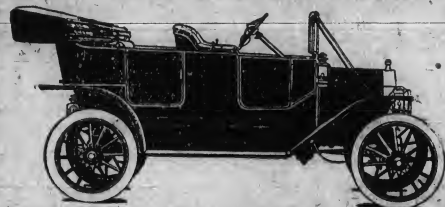

Don't buy a Cabinet until you see this.

An Old Resident.

Probably the oldest resident of southeastern Indiana, who can say that he made a trip of 2,000 miles on foot is M. L. Henderson, who is spending the winter season with his daughter, Mrs. T. T. Miller.

In company with fifteen others Mr. Henderson left Aurora April 8, 1892, to seek gold in California. The party went by boat as far as St. Joseph, Mo., before beginning the long overland stretch for the far west. At St. Joseph they bought horses and oxen to transport themselves and supplies on the journey. When four days out Indians stole all of the horses, making it necessary for the men, when not sick, to walk the remainder of the distance, more than 2,000 miles. Mr. Henderson says that he did not ride to exceed fifty miles on the trip. About four months were required for the journey, counting from the time they left Aurora until they reached a point seventy-five miles east of Sacramento.

Not finding goldmining altogether satisfactory Mr. Henderson engaged in testing and other occupations during the more than two years he remained in California. On his return to his home in Indiana he came by way of Panama, paying $1 a mile railroad fare for a distance of twelve miles in crossing the isthmus.

Although sixty years have elapsed since Mr. Henderson made his long walk, he retains vivid recollections of the journey. Water was frequently scarce. An unusual source of supply was found at a place called Ice Valley. Anywhere in that valley by digging down eighteen inches ice could be obtained from six to eight inches thick that made the finest water. No one knew how the ice came there. A curious formation recalled by Mr. Henderson was Chimney Rock, about thirty feet in diameter and rising 400 feet in a desert plain, where no stone was to be seen cropping out anywhere. Another isolated formation called Court House Rock, covered between five and ten acres. Mr. Henderson says he has never read anything about these great curiosities, and is unable to tell in what state they are located, as the country when he passed through it was unsurveyed territory. Of the sixteen men who made up the company which left Aurora Mr. Henderson, now eighty-two, is the sole survivor, with the notable exception of one named Wesley Markland, who formerly resided in Chattanooga, but in all probability is not now living—Lawrenceburg Press.

Kentucky Politics.

Roosters have advanced 5 cents on the pound.—Nicholasville News.

Kentucky's 105,000 plurality looks awful big, but Kentucky's 8,000 majority looks awful small.—Elizabethtown News.

The bushes since the Presidential race are full of aspirants for county offices.—Brandenburg Messenger.

The Republican party received more votes in Kentucky than the Bull Moose, and is at right the dominant minority party.—Glasgow Republican.

John O'Riley is at the head of the class now qualifying for the position of postmaster at Hardinsburg. There are ten in the class. Col. E. L. Robinson says his hat is in the ring for the postoffice at Glendale.—Hardingsburg Leader.

It seems strange that as long as the people have been voting by secret ballot and as much instructions as they have had on the subject they should continue to make blunders. About twenty ballots in this county were stamped with the cross opposite one of the electors.—Hartford Herald.

We met the enemy, two of them, begad, and between the two we were almost mashed out of existence. For the next four years we shall spend our time getting the fragments together and when 1916 comes we will give them the best we have. Mean time we will watch the Democratic fight over the postoffice.—Beattyville Enterprise.

The change of the national administration, it is expected will bring forth a large crop of applicants for the post office here among the Democrats, and to avoid the bother of answering numerous inquiries Postmaster Harbison on the morning after the election posted a notice in front of his office stating that his time as a handler of Uncle Sam's mail here would not expire until April 13, 1914, which will be a long time for some of the hungry pie hunters to wait.—Flemingsburg Gazette.

A Lexington man who went to New York some months ago is doing a thriving business in selling hams. He buys them in the Blue Grass region and the New Yorkers fairly fall over one another in their anxiety to place orders for the old Kentucky hams. In this they show their good sense, for there is nothing better in the eating line than the country cured ham. They are infinitely superior to the packing house product, and that smart Lexington man should be blessed and patronized of all New Yorkers.—Frankfort Journal.

If all others lie, then speak you the truth and be one true man among many bad ones.

The Original Bryan Man.

I notice letter in the Recorder of the 7th inst. written by Rev. Edgar D. Jones, eulogizing W. J. Bryan. I have been personally acquainted with Bro. Jones since he entered the ministry, and he, like Mr. Bryan, has made good, and I am proud to say he has risen from the pulpit of the rural churches to one of the first churches in one of our large cities, and I know him to be sincere in what he says of Mr. Bryan, and I agree with him in every word he has written. I am not claiming to be an original Wilson man as many do, but claim to be an original Bryan man. When Mr. Bryan came before the people at Chicago sixteen years ago I took a stand for him and have read and talked for him all the time and never faltered, for I knew right would prevail, and on Tuesday, the 5th inst. my belief came true. I look upon W. J. Bryan as being the greatest man living or dead that this world has ever produced. My reason for saying so, is where is there another who would have gone forth preaching his doctrine of the great social odds and was denounced by as many men. None, no not one. But after sixteen years of hard struggle and work, he comes out victorious with a character as pure and holy and as white as the driven snow, and in my opinion Mr. Wilson and his advisors, if not handicapped by some of our own party, will carry out the platform to a letter, and this nation will be upon the same found as when it was in our forefathers' time, equal rights to all and special privileges to none, and at the end of 4 years the Democrats will nominate W. J. Bryan for the presidency by acclamation and he will be elected by a majority as large as that received by Mr. Wilson. I can see the old Democratic ship sailing into Westington on the 4th of next March with Woodrow Wilson as her captain. Thomas Marshall, master, W. J. Bryan, pilot and A. B. Rouse, purser, with banners spread to the breezes, and inscribed on those banners, "A government of the people, by the people and for the people," and the band on board playing Hallelujah, happy land, while in the distance, around the balcony of the White House, there will be answered back, "There is a hot time in the old town tonight." W. T. STOTT.

The Proper Thing To Do.

The report that the United States Department of Agriculture has decided to establish a horse breeding farm in Central Kentucky furnishes considerable evidence that somebody connected with the department knows his business.

The United States already has a farm of that kind in Vermont and it has been determined to establish one in Virginia and one in Kentucky. There has been some pressure to establish one of these farms for Indiana, but the department officials felt that Kentucky would be the better place for it, and so they have decided to do so. The farm will be under the control of the Bureau of Animal Industry and its object will be to provide first-class animals for Government use. Kentucky is headquarters for that kind of horse and is better adapted for the successful conduct of such a farm than any other State in the Union.

The Federal Government has been buying horses in Kentucky for many years for the use of the army, thus recognizing the superiority of the Bluegrass-grown animal. It is quite natural that when the Department of Agriculture decides to engage more extensively in raising horses that it should select Kentucky as one of the places for maintaining a breeding farm. That is the course the world has followed by the wise individual breeder, and in this instance, at least, what is to the individual should be equally advantageous to Uncle Sam.—C-J.

It matters cannot be better let us be glad they are not worse.

Here's The Plumb Bob

It's just another proof that Tubular Cream Separators are just up to the minute—miles ahead of any other. No other machine has it.

What's It For?

It enables you to level the Sharples Dairy Tubular Cream Separator in a minute—quicker than you could find the spirit level you must use to level all other separators. A glance at the plumb bob, hanging there on the back of the Tubular, will always tell you whether the Tubular remains level. In that way you get the very best work out of the Tubular, for all Separators should be kept level to do their best work.

Tubulars have dozens of exclusive fine points and are sold on the level. Bring the wife in. See how simple, perfect and different from others Tubulars are.

Poor Spelling as a Lure.

The critical eye of a conscientious orthographer was attracted by the sign above a Third Avenue luncheon, and he went in to set the proprietor right. "Yes," said the luncheon sign, "I know 'sandwiches' is wrong, but you see that sign attracts a lot of Mid-Cent Alacks into the store who can't teach me how to spell and until they come they usually stop and enough to order something at the young be?" Men Need Help—Not Charity.

There is a higher duty than to build almshouses for the poor, and that is to save men from being degraded to the blighting influence of an almshouse. Man has a right to something more than bread to keep him from starving. He has a right to the aid and encouragement of his fellow men, by which he may fulfill the destiny of a man, and until society is brought to recognize and reverence this it will continue to groan under its present miseries.—Channing.

"Eddie" Westbay Dead.
Edward Westbay, aged 53 years January 8th, last, died at the home of his brother, Chas. Westbay in Burlington, Tuesday afternoon. He was a son of the late James and Louisa Westbay. He had been an invalid all his life but none until within the last week. He had given up and taken to his bed, when it was at once evident he was in a critical condition. He was always of a cheerful and happy disposition preferring the society of children to that of grown people, yet courteous and obliging to all. He was a member of the churches and Sunday schools, and his presence at these was noted every Sunday so long as his health would admit. Ever since the death of his mother, he has been looked after and cared for by his brother Charles in the most tender and careful manner. His illness and convalescence was repaid by a devotion unsurpassed after a funeral service at the Methodist church by Rev. Edgar Riffe, today at 10 a. m. the interment took place in the old cemetery.

Friday evening a very sad and sudden death took place here that brought sorrow to many hearts. Jacob Kipp, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Walton passed away to the great beyond. He had been ill for some time, but he was not complaining and had been at work at his shoe shop all day. Not appearing at the boarding house at the evening meal his landlady, Mrs. Diers, went to his place of business and was horrified to find him in the embrace of death. He had been working at his bench and had fainted. His death was a sudden and instantly expired as there was no evidence of a struggle or painful end. Physicians were summoned, but he had passed all earthly aid. His three sons were summoned and came to perform the last sad mission to their beloved father. Mr. Kipp was born in Westmoreland, Germany, April 2, 1842, and came to this country in 1867, moving shortly afterwards to Walton, where he was a citizen for forty-five years. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Graf of Covington, shortly after his arrival in this country, and to that marriage was born three sons and two daughters. His wife and daughter Elizabeth preceded him to the grave some years ago, and the sons, John G. Kipp, is now in the city of a large electrical supply house in New York City, while the other two sons, Edgar and George, are similarly located in Cincinnati. Mr. Kipp was an ice cream maker, and was generous to everybody, and his life is worthy of emulation. He was a man of most modest means, yet he was always interested in the welfare of his fellowmen. His kindness of disposition and his generous nature caused him to be beloved by everybody, and no one would be missed more from the community. He was a member of the German Lutheran church at Foster, and for over 40 years he was a valued and worthy member of the Walton Odd-Fellows Lodge, and that order had charge of his funeral which took place from his late home Monday afternoon at two o'clock, the remains being taken to the Baptist church where Rev. A. Kirtley Johnson delivered a beautiful eulogy to the memory of the departed brother, the house being filled with sorrowing friends. The Odd-Fellows then took charge and performed the last sad rites of burial service, tenderly placing the remains to rest in the city of the dead. The seventy years of a life of a citizen of Bro. Kipp leaves an example worthy of emulation, and the memory of this good man will be treasured by all. To the bereaved children he tendered the heartfelt sympathy of everybody in their sad affliction. All of the children were present at the funeral, and request that we express through these columns their heartfelt gratitude to the friends for their many acts of kindness to the deceased and to them in their hour of bereavement. Rev. Johnson for his words of consolation, and to Edwards Bros., the undertakers, for their kindness and care in the services rendered.

Congressman A. B. Rouse will leave today for Washington, D. C., to resume his duties in the legislature.
Mr. Rouse has kept in close touch with his constituents during his stay at home, visiting numerous localities to ascertain exactly the needs of the people, realizing that going upon the ground in most cases is the best way to secure information. He is looking after the needs of the district closely, and deals frankly with all who approach him on business matters, and when he believes the efforts of anyone in any direction will prove futile he does not hesitate to so inform him. He makes no promises that he knows at the time of making them, and will be able to deliver a political opinion sure to be popular with the public.

PASTOR RUSSELL IS CHALLENGED

A Complete Answer to the Query, "Who Ordained Him?"

The Whole Subject Clarified For the Public Benefit—Clergy and Laity Unscriptural Terms.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 17.—As always, Pastor Russell got the crowds today. We report his discourse on Ministerial Ordination and Titles. Very evidently it is a reply to an attack recently made upon him by a Mr. W. T. Ellis, the editor of The Continent, and alias, the "Religious Rambler." Ellis claims that Pastor Russell's ordination as Pastor is fraudulent. The address shows that Pastor Russell fully understands the situation. He fully grasps his position before his vast audience and showed up the "Rambler" editor in the unenviable light of either being ignorant of the subjects discussed, or attempting to deceive the public. His text was, "Not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised Him from the dead" (Gal. 1, 1). He said:

"The time has come for telling the people what the Bible teaches respecting ordination to teach and preach. The doctrine of Apostolic Succession started in the second century A. D. The bishops claimed that they had the same authority that Jesus gave to the twelve Apostles. Upon this claim they ordained the inferior clergy. This principle is wholly unscriptural. According to the Bible, the Church of Christ is not composed of two parts. The clergy and laity. Jesus declared, 'All ye are brethren; One is your Master, Christ.' St. Paul shows that in the early Church the ministers were the servants of the flock. They were of the people, chosen by them by the stretching forth of the hand. Many of the reformers coveted the titles accorded the Catholic clergy. They did not care to tell the congregation that their word was supreme, and that its ministers were merely its servants. Others, realizing that these titles were unscriptural, declined to use them; preferring to be called pastor. My Bible Student associates, knowing my objection to the title 'Reverend,' address me as Pastor. I am the elected Pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle congregation, and also of the London Tabernacle congregation, and I feel to see ground for criticism in this respect, nor do I attack Christian brethren who accept other and unscriptural titles."

Must Pastors Be Ordained? Ordination is necessary to the office of pastor. The question is, What constitutes an ordination to preach amongst the people of God? This question has received various answers. The Roman, Anglican and Greek Churches, claiming Apostolic Succession, declare that authorization to preach must come through their apostolic bishops, and have not allowed Protestant ministers to enter their pulpits—until the Episcopalians, about a year ago granted this concession. Of course, if their position were correct, I am just as much unordained as all other Protestant ministers—and no more so.

Each denomination at its beginning was opposed by all others; yet each taught that the clergy were separate from the laity. Only since the organization of the Evangelical Alliance (1846) have the different sects of Christendom acknowledged each other's ordinations. Each denomination makes use of such ceremonies as it deems proper. If, therefore, the congregation of Christian believers in Brooklyn and London ordain or appoint me as their pastor, it is their own choice what ceremonies, if any, shall accompany that ordination. Who can dispute this? No Protestant denomination, surely; for their own ordinations are on this very basis. The subject of ordination seems to have fallen into confusion during the Dark Ages. St. Paul particularly emphasizes the fact that he did not receive his commission as preacher and Apostle of Christ from his brother Apostles, but by Divine authorization. This is the Scriptural principle underlying Divine Ordination to the ministry of Christ.

No denomination claims that the ordination of its ministers either under or kept them perfect. All admit that there have been sad failures amongst their ordained ministers. Neither would they claim that ordination has given their ministers superior discernment of Divine Truth. On the contrary, it has injured the clergy by making many of them domineering and lordly, contrary to the spirit and teachings of Christ and the Apostles; and the laity by leading them to conclude that merely secular matters should engage their attention.

The True Ordination. Finally the Pastor showed the true ordination to be the impartation of the Holy Spirit. Whoever receives this has God's authority to be His ambassador and mouthpiece. Such is the work of the Holy Spirit regenerating their minds and hearts, giving them insight into the Scriptures, and enabling them to be God's mouthpiece at all times.

INTRODUCTION OF QUEEN BEE

They Are More Prolific During Their First Two Years and Should Then Be Supplanted.

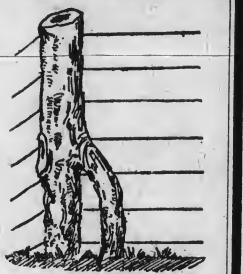

Queen bees will ordinarily live and preside over the colony for four or five years before being naturally superseded, but like a hen they are much more prolific during their first two years. For this reason, and also to improve your stock, this is a good time of the year to queen your apiary. Remove the old queen and the bees at once proceed to repair the loss by constructing queen cells for the production of a young one to take her place, writes I. F. Tillinghast in the Country Gentleman. So if you are satisfied with the stock nothing more is necessary for about two years from the removal of the old queen a young one will hatch. In such cases from two to twenty cells will be formed, and if your old queen is of choice breeding stock, remove her to some other colony, and on the tenth day after cut carefully all except one or two cells, and give them to your other colonies at the time that you destroy their queens. In a day or two these cells will hatch and any colony will accept a newly hatched virgin.

At some times of the year it is difficult to introduce an old queen to a strange colony without leaving her caged among them for several days, but I have no trouble in removing a queen and introducing another at the same operation at this time of year, while the honey flow is on, without caging or loss of time, by sprinkling her freely with a mixture of flour and confectioner's sugar, and running her in before their loss is known. Under these conditions the bees usually accept her at once.

STRONG CORNER FENCE POST

Substantial Space May Be Constructed From Small Tree by Following Instructions.

A satisfactory corner post may be made from a small tree, as follows: The tree is cut the size wished for the post (the tree forked, of course). The fork is cut a foot shorter than the body. The post is put in the ground and the fork turned on the inside corner with a rock placed under the prong.

It is impossible for a post made in this way to pull away.

Returns From Good Seed Bed. There are very few farms on which additional labor expended in preparing seed bed would not yield handsome returns. It costs about 15 cents per acre to harrow land, and about 35 cents per acre to disk land. For $1 land can be double disked and harrowed twice. One bushel of wheat or barley, two bushels of corn or one-half bushel of flax increase per acre will pay for this extra labor.

Bees and Farm Notes

Do not overload the team. Better make another trip. The silo correctly used will solve the question of profit from $100 an acre land.

Circumvent large feed bills by growing plenty of protein feeds on the farm.

The silo is the only safe and sure way and the cheapest way to handle the corn crop.

To jerk the horse is not a very nice way for the hired man to get even with his boss.

The ground for sweet clover seed should be prepared the same as for alfalfa or clover.

With good equipment and willing workers hay is not altogether a disagreeable task.

The best garden seed are not always found in the prettiest pictures. Demand for good, productive farm property is steadily increasing. Some very high prices are paid for well improved farms.

If your asparagus turns yellow it is a sign of rust. Every affected plant should be at once cut and burned or well sprayed.

There are very few farms on which additional labor expended in preparing the seed bed would not yield handsome returns.

The sooner manure is spread in the field the smaller the loss of fertility incurred and the smaller the amount of labor required to handle it.

The common disk harrow is more generally used than any other implement to cultivate alfalfa, and when properly adjusted does good work.

Consider the clovers. It often means the difference between failure and success. The clovers are almost indispensable in the farm scheme.

Parcels Post Stamps.

Arrangements have been made by Postmaster General Hitchcock for the engraving and manufacture of a series of twelve postage stamps of a novel size and design for use in the Parcels Post system that will become operative on the first of January next. These special stamps will be somewhat larger than the ordinary postage stamps and will be so distinctive in color and design as to prevent possible confusion with the stamps used for other classes of mail. There will be three series of designs in the issue. The first series will illustrate modern methods of transporting mail, one stamp showing the mail car on a railway train, another an ocean steamship, a third stamp, one of the automobiles now used in the postal service, and a fourth the dispatch of mail by aeroplane. In the second series there will be shown at work in their several environments the four great classes of postal employees, namely: Post-office clerks, railway mail clerks, city letter carriers and rural delivery carriers. The third series will give four industrial scenes showing the principal sources of the products that are to be transported so extensively by Parcels Post. It is planned to have these stamps ready for distribution by December 1 in order that they may be supplied to the sixty thousand postoffices before the first of January. Under the law ordinary stamps will not be used on matter sent by Parcels Post and the new stamp will be used exclusively for this purpose.

There are six Presidential postoffices in this Congressional district for which applicants are quite numerous. The offices are Covington, Newport, Falmouth, Williamstown, Warraw, Carrollton. For these offices Congressman Roe has a pocket full of applications, and the returns are not all in by several. The fourth-class postoffices all being under Civil Service relieve the Congressman of considerable pie he otherwise would have at his disposal, and far which there would be numerous applicants.

Burley Tobacco Growers Boost Your Own Brands

We, as you know, are using your choicest tobacco in the brands of Strater Bros. Branch, and you know that nobody grows better tobacco than you do. You know how we manufacture, so you know that these brands are perfection. Now we want you to help us sell these brands this year even better than our best previous years. The reasons you should so help are as follows:

You Are Part Owner

The fact that you grow the tobacco makes you part owner of all these brands. Every time that you sell you profit. Every word that you say in favor of any helps to increase these sales. Every brand that you buy for your own use helps make those profits better. All our interests—your interests and ours—are pooled in these several tobaccos. It is logic that you should bend all of your efforts, however small, in the selling.

The United Power of 40,000 Buyers

40,000 men in a section wield an enormous buying influence. If all ask for these brands when they buy tobacco there results a gigantic sale. And big sales are the best advertising known.

Smokers and chewers flock to brands that they see the most people buying. 40,000 steady users indirectly make 40,000 more. Get them for Strater Bros. Branch Brands—the brands that you grow for—by using these brands yourself.

Tell Every Friend

Tell your friends of these brands. Tell them what you know of the tobacco. Tell them you grow it and smoke and chew it yourself, so you know. Tell them it comes from Kentucky, from the center of the richest Burley sections. Let them know it's the cream of your crops and that they can buy these brands from the most any dealer, because dealers know that these brands are the best they can buy.

Burley growers should be Burley Boosters and the best way to boost is to BUY Burley—YOUR OWN BRANDS—YOURSELF.

To Dealers! Dealers throughout the United States know these famous tobacco. They are Nation-wide sellers—popular brands. They are helping these dealers to prosper. They are made from the pick of the famous crops of 40,000 growers. Every one of these growers is boosting them as well as all of their crops. This method is bringing the profits to dealers—to those who sell these brands. Are they working for you? Here are the brands: GOLDEN GLOW—PENNY POST—FULL PAY. Here are the delicious chewing brands—INDEX—BY JOE TWIST—CUP-DAY'S WORK—ON THE SQUARE—TORCHLIGHT—STRATER'S NATURAL LEAF. Put them into your stock. See how they sell.

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

Q-Milady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

Q-Mother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Care of the Farm Auto.

We have owned and operated a machine for five years and pride ourselves upon its appearance and durability. Care is the keynote of keeping a machine looking well. The farmer is differently situated from his city brother who just runs around the corner to the garage for his repairs, adjustments and cleaning up, pays the garage keeper his bill and tells the whole world that the automobile is a terribly expensive affair explaining an authority in Farm and Home. The farmer buys gasoline, does his own repairing, adjustments and washing up, and knows little about expense save first cost and tire upkeep.

There is the same secret in keeping a machine looking good that there is in keeping a horse and carriage in good shape—same driving and horse sense. You can knock anything to pieces if you start knocking; know the thing is not to start. Clean up and adjust matters every time you run. There is no dust allayer so complete as a cloth as a slightly with gas engine oil. We use one all the year to remove the dust from the hood, finders and other parts. It keeps the parts clear and clean of dust and makes the machine like new.

Every time we run we go over the machine. These cloths are stored in the tool box and kerosene cloths are used to wipe the engine and metal parts. Once in two weeks the carbon is dislodged from the cylinders with kerosene and the oil removed from crank case, strained and returned if fit. We have a machine that we shall be operating 20 years hence, barring accident.—Ex.

Fish That Catch Turtles.

In the neighborhood of Havana a most peculiar method of securing turtles is pursued. They train or at least take advantage of the instincts of a certain species of fish called by the Spanish reves (meaning reversed), because its back is usually taken for its stomach.

It has an oval plate attached to its head, the surface of which is traversed by parallel ridges. By this plate it can firmly adhere to any solid body it may choose. The boats which go in quest of turtles each carry a tub containing a number of these reves. When the sleeping turtles are seen they are approached, and as soon as they are judged near enough a reves is thrown into the sea. Upon perceiving the turtle its instinct teaches it to swim right toward it and fit itself firmly upon the creature by means of its disk. Sooner would the reves allow itself to be pulled to pieces than give up its grip.

A ring which is attached to the tail of the fish, which is fastened, allows the fisherman to pull in his prize. By a peculiar manipulation the reves is pulled off and returned to the tub to be ready for use the next time a turtle is sighted.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

ELEVEN RULES FOR HEALTH.

Advice Prepared By the Association For Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Good Air—Avoid badly ventilated, badly lighted, dusty, dirty, overheated, crowded or damp rooms.

Avoid House Dust—Breathing dust, notably house dust, often causes disease. Have no tacked-down carpets or matting; use rugs, not attached to floors and clean them frequently in the open air. Lower the upper windows when sweeping or dusting; keep the lower windows down. Never sweep with a broom that raises dust.

Pure Water—Drink pure water; avoid water from shallow or unprotected wells and from ponds and streams. When in doubt, boil the water. Shun the public drinking cups.

Safe Milk and Cream—Tuberculosis, typhoid fever and other disease are often caused by drinking dirty, raw milk or cream. Investigate your dairyman. Patronize the dealer with clean, up-to-date methods.

Keep Clean—Take a tub bath or a sponge bath every day. A warm bath should be followed by a cool shower. Use soap freely. Wash your hands before handling food. Don't use fingers, money, paper or pencils in your mouth. Don't bite your finger nails. Clean your teeth morning and evening.

Food—Don't eat raw food which has been exposed to flies or dust or touched by unclean hands. Fruit or vegetables should be rinsed or washed thoroughly with pure water before eaten raw. Chew your food well.

Sleep—Get enough sleep. The average adult requires not less than eight hours sleep. Sleep with the bedroom windows open, or, better still, sleep outdoors.

Sit Up—Sit and stand erect. Practice deep breathing. Breathe through your nose.

Exercise—Take plenty of outdoor exercise. Avoid excess in athletics—it may cause heart trouble. Don't eat or drink while overheated from exercise.

Colds—Don't neglect coughs or colds. If you do not recover as quickly as you should, see a doctor, or go to a dispensary for advice or treatment. Never cough, sneeze or breathe into another person's face. Don't spit on the floors, sidewalks or street cars.

Sunshine—Permit sunshine to flood your home and admit it into your life. Cultivate cheerfulness and kindness—it will help you to resist disease. Your state of mind has much to do with your state of health.

Learn to Forget.

To forget—that is what we need just to forget. All the petty annoyances, all the vexing irritations, all the mean, spiteful, unkind acts, the deep wrongs, the bitter disappointments—just let them go, don't hang on to them. Learn to forget. Make a study of it. Practice it. Become an expert at forgetting. Train the faculty of the mind until it is strong and virile. Then memory will have no power to keep the member, and it will become quick and alert in remembering. It will not be cumbered with disagreeable things, and all its attention will be given to the beautiful things, to the worthwhile things. No matter what business you are pursuing, no matter what scientific problem you are trying to solve, take up the study of forgetting. The art of forgetting will give added lustre to your literary business or scientific attainments, and it will add immeasurably to health of mind and body.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Fall Care of Spraying Outfits.

In leaving spraying pumps for the winter, see in the first place that they are stored under cover where they will be kept dry. Clean them thoroughly, taking particular pains to drain out any water which may remain in the pumps and from the jacket of the gasoline engine if pump is used, bearing in mind that a valuable engine can be practically ruined by water being left in the water jacket and freezing. A liberal application of kerosene oil to all the working parts of the engine in the fall will do much to keep off rust. Nozzles and hose should be cleaned out and dried. Any wooden barrels or tanks used as reservoirs should be put away from the sun, preferably in a moist place. If any insecticides are left over put them on a shelf out of the way, properly labeled. Remember that Paris green deteriorates by being kept in the open air. Arsenate of lead which one desires to keep for the following year, should have a good covering of water to prevent its drying.—F. L. Washburn, Division of Entomology, Minnesota Experiment Station.

Prof. H. Garman, State Entomologist and Botanist at the Kentucky Experiment Station, has issued a bulletin in which he warns the people of Kentucky against receiving fruit trees which are not guaranteed to be free from destructive diseases and insects. Prof. Garman says that the San Jose scale has spread this year more rapidly than ever before probably because some of the Kentucky nurserymen are not complying with the law or on account of many affected trees being brought from outside the state. As this is the season for planting trees, Prof. Garman calls particular attention to the danger of receiving infected fruit stock and urges purchasers of trees to see that the law has been complied with.

Boone County Recorder,
BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY

Next Monday is county court day

You have quite a number of things for which to be thankful today.

Jesse Kirkpatrick built a pump house at the creamery the first of this week.

This is the last day in which to pay taxes and avoid the six per cent penalty.

Lee Cropper, of Bullittsburg, killed seven hogs last week that made ninety-two gallons of lard.

A little son of Wm. Ryle, who lives near McVillie, died of diphtheria or scarlet fever Tuesday night.

County Clerk Rogers issued license yesterday for the marriage of Chas. Carpenter and Miss Kate Carey today at the Catholic parsonage in Florence.

Deputy Sheriff Geo. M. Hart, of Clark county was assassinated by a negro on the main street in Winchester, last Sunday night and the murderer made his escape.

Garnett Tolin has just completed a fifty page record for the court of appeals, it being the first job he undertook on his typewriter which he purchased a couple of weeks ago.

Keuben Hager, of East Bend, brought to this office, Monday morning, two nice ears of corn that grew on his father's farm this year. He says they are a sample of the general run of their corn.

Don't waste your money buying strengthening plasters, Chamberlain's Liniment is cheaper and better. Dampen a piece of flannel with it and bind it over the affected parts and it will relieve the pain and soreness. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Son and E. E. Kelly.—Adv.

Thomas Rouse's sale, Tuesday, was attended by a very large crowd of people who came from every neighborhood in the county. The day was bright but a disagreeable wind prevailed. The bidding was lively at all times and as a rule good prices were obtained. Fresh cows up to $80; strippers up to $30; heifers up to $35; two year old males $125. The sale was not completed until after dark.

LACK OF FUNDS

Blamed For The Falling Off of Votes In The Recent Election.

Frankfort, November 26.—Voters in Kentucky at the recent election cut little figure as to results. In some of the strongest Republican sections President-elect Wilson carried counties for the first time a Democratic candidate for President had that honor. In these same sections, counties lying side by side, one would give Roosevelt almost a solid vote and others would give Taft almost a solid Republican vote. In cities Roosevelt outran Taft, showing that the organization among the standard-bearers is better in the rural districts than in the cities. A marked falling off in the Presidential vote is the future. This is caused by the lack of funds to get out the vote. It requires money in Kentucky to get out a full vote, and all of the money subscribed in Kentucky by both Republican and Democrats was used to maintain headquarters, or was sent to the national headquarters.

An Old Political Register:

Chas. Wilson, of Rabbit Hash, left with the Recorder, a few days since, a small book, which is a political register of the Presidential and Kentucky State elections, beginning in 1836 and ending in 1903. In those days it was Whig and Democrat, the Whigs generally getting the best of the Democrats in the county election. Among the many election records in the book is that of the vote between John P. Gaines and R. H. Stanton for Congress in 1819, when the latter won by a majority of 363 in the district which was then the 10th district and composed of Boone, Grant, Kenton, Bracken, Campbell, Mason, Pendleton, Harrison, Nicholas and Gallatin. Boone gave Gaines 130 majority in this election.

In 1841 there were five voting precincts in this county—Burlington, Petersburg, Florence, Union, Verona and Landing. In that year Clay for President carried the county by 176 votes; Webb, for Congress, by 211; Webb, for Representative by 22 over Cave. In 1849 the vote was taken on the adoption of a new constitution, in favor of which the county voted by a majority of 285, while the free Thomas, who carried the county by 161 for Senator over Chastine Scott, while W. B. Murphy defeated Ben Watts by nine votes for Representative. This was a Democratic year in Boone At his election there were nine voting places in the county—Burlington, Union, Petersburg, Taft, Florence, Waton, Verona, Hamilton, Rabbit Hash.

In 1852 James Calvert and Cyrus Riddle were candidates for Sheriff, Whig and Democrat respectively. Calvert carried every precinct in the county except Union and Hamilton, his majority in the county being 289.

The book is a mass of political tales the perusal and study of which gives one back to the old times when elections in this county were hotly contested by the Whigs and the Democrats, the successful party very often having the advantage of only a few votes.

Local Happenings.

Your presence is expected at the box social tonight

Eara and James, W. Avlor were transacting business in Burlington yesterday.

T. Jeff Brown, of Hebron neighborhood, was transacting business in Burlington, last Friday.

L. T. Clore united with the local Baptist church last Saturday and was baptized that afternoon.

Catching pigs in dead falls is not a profitable business as some of the local trappers can testify.

The "Meek Trial" which will be put on at the box social tonight is said to be very amusing. Go out, and see it.

Depositions were being taken last Saturday in the suit to settle the estate of the late Harvey P. Marshall.

There has been a fine fall for plowing, and those who do that class of work have been given an excellent opportunity.

The Walton sale was extended into the second day, notwithstanding two auctioneers were engaged all the afternoon of the first day.

The remains of Mr. Alfred Cason were taken from the vault last Saturday, and interred in the family lot, in the Odd-Fellows cemetery.

There will be a big ball and supper given at the Odd-Fellows' building in Hebron on the night of the 6th day of December.

Harry Tanner, of Florence, made the trip from his home in that town to Burlington, last Saturday morning in seventeen minutes, which was some going.

Wm Green, of Rising Sun, has something of importance to say to Boone county people this week. It will pay you to heed his advice in this issue and read it closely.

The box social was called off last night on account of the death of Eddie Westbay. It was called off three times last year on account of deaths in Burlington.

Sheriff Hume is busy getting his work for check-out done in time for the December term which will begin on the 9th day of that month, which will soon be here.

It is believed that a gang of counterfeiters are showing ten and twenty dollar gold certificates in Cincinnati. Quite a number of the bogus bills have been detected.

Perry Ryle and wife are now citizens of Burlington, occupying Mrs. O. J. Ryle's residence in the north end of town. They are good, people and the citizens gladly welcome them.

Lawson Brown, who has been living on Bart Avlor's farm out on Woolper Heights for some time, has moved to Idlewild, from which place he will haul milk to the milk depot at Hebron.

Herbert Kirkpatrick has entered the fur business again for the season. He is a good buyer and handles a large lot of furs every season. He is now known as the Boone county fur man.

Born—On the 23rd inst., to V. O. Keys and wife, a fine 3 1/2 pound boy. Beat the drum, blow the horn, in town let him hear joy, Butler has advanced 5 cents a pound, because our butter-maker has a boy.

There is general complaint on the part of the farmers of chaffy corn this fall. Although the weather conditions were favorable to the growing of it, it seems to have failed to mature properly. As for size there is no complaint.

Up to the present the farmers here had to do with a feeding of stock, a work they seldom escape so far into the fall season. They have plenty of food stored and are well prepared for the roughest kind of a winter, which it is hoped they will escape.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall announce the marriage of their daughter, Charlotte,

Mr. Harry W. Shearer, Wednesday evening, December 11th, 1912, at Grace Methodist church, Newport, Ky.

Newton Sullivan, Jr., the Burlington grocer, has added trapping as a side line and has taken Mont. Slayback in as a partner in the trapping enterprise. They have already taken the pelts of several skunks and raccoons. By the time the trapping season is over they will have about cleaned up on the fur bearing animals in this quarter of the globe.

J. E. Smith is building a commodious garage for the automobile he will receive in the next few weeks. Build it plenty long, James, so you will have enough room in which to stop without going up against the end wall, which you will find rather difficult for a while after you begin handling the machine. Take the advice of one who has had experience. No charge for this dope.

Personal Mention.

Garnett Tolin went to Danville to spend his Thanksgiving. County Attorney N. E. Riddell made a business trip to Verona yesterday.

Jesse Kirkpatrick and Bert Sullivan were shopping in the city, last Saturday.

Miss Marie Unglesby, of Riverside, Ohio, is the guest of Miss Bessie Kirkpatrick.

Miss Mary Thompson is visiting Mrs. Corine Riley of the Burlington neighborhood.

Mrs. Lavina Kirkpatrick is visiting her aged father, Jackson Utz, at Milan, Indiana.

Mrs. John Stewart, of Cynthiahah, Harrison county, is the guest of Miss Shirley Tolin.

Rev. Baker and wife came over last Saturday in his new auto. They had quite a nice trip.

Elmore Ryle and Edward Parsons, of Locust Grove, were business visitors to Burlington, Monday.

William Riddell, of Dayton, O., was the guest of his brother, M. L. Riddell and wife, last Friday night.

Messrs. Joe W. Cleek and Chas. Sleet, of Beaver, were among the business visitors to Burlington, last Saturday.

C. C. Hughes, who is stationed in New York, is the International Revenue service, spent last Sunday at his home in Burlington.

Spencer Smith and son, of Union neighborhood, were callers at the office Tuesday. The older Mr. Smith gets the younger he looks.

H. L. Tanner, of Erlanger, was transacting business in Burlington, one day the past week. Mr. Tanner is well pleased with his new home.

Jerry Fowler, of Athens, Ohio, left for his home last Monday morning, after a protracted visit with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Blythe.

Herbert McKim came out from Cincinnati, last Friday, to spend a few days with his cousin, Garnett Tolin, hunting the festive quail and the shy little rabbit.

Dr. Yelton and family arrived from New York in Monday evening and are now located in their new home, that which Dr. Peddicord vacated a few days ago.

Jerry J. Tanner was in town, last Saturday afternoon, selling country sausage. Jerry has the knack of putting up a superior quality of that class of home product.

Robert Ayler, of Hebron neighborhood, was an early Monday morning business visitor to Burlington. Mr. Ayler does not visit the county seat often than once a year.

W. A. Gaines, who is a director in the Union Insurance Company, spent a day or two in Frankfort, last week, attending a meeting of the directors of the company.

Grover Snyder and wife, of Aurora, are guests of her father and wife, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Cowen. Mr. Snyder is spending part of his time at the home of his father, who is unusually scarce.

Mrs. J. A. Riddell, of the Hebron neighborhood, who has been ill of appendicitis at the home of her father, is sufficiently recovered last Saturday, to be taken to her home.

Johnnie Hogan, the Hebron tobacco merchant, was among the visitors to Burlington, last Friday. He appears to have given the rheumatism that was annoying him so much last year, the shake. He is now fat and frisky and full of fun.

T. G. Graves, of Bullittsville, called on the Recorder, last Saturday afternoon, to take it to task for something of which he thought was its short-comings, but when the circumstances were explained to him he conceded the Recorder the right to have acted at it, did in the premises.

Mr. James Stewart, of the Bark Works, Indiana, and his niece, Miss Sutton, of Bellevue, were callers at the office last Tuesday.

In the early seventies Mr. Stewart was a citizen of this county, residing with his uncle, the late Robert Mooby, in the neighborhood of Petersburg.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Henfling, of Parlor Grove, were brief callers at this office, last Tuesday, while in Burlington. They brought to the office a treat in the way of some fine apples which were delicious both in name and taste.

They had quite a crop of these very fine apples, but the demand for them was so great that they could not begin to supply it.

Dr. and Mrs. F. L. Peddicord became ex-citizens of Burlington, last Friday. They went to Bracken county to spend a few days before the Doctor enters upon his duties as assistant physician at the Lakeland asylum for the insane. The doctor and his wife made friends of all the people in Burlington where he had built up a very fine practice, and their leaving brings sorrow to the entire town. They take with them the best wishes of all who know them.

Rouse & Hume have placed half a dozen Ford automobiles since they became agents for that machine, the following parties being the purchasers: Robt. Rice, Florence, a five passenger; Martin Michaels, Erlanger, a five passenger; A. B. Rouse, Burlington, a five passenger; J. E. Smith, Burlington, a five passenger; W. L. Riddell, Burlington, a runabout; C. Scott Chambers, Walton, a five passenger. They have good prospects of several more sales.

For Sale—21 shots. Apply to Chester L. Stephens, Burlington, R. D. 2.

Timothy Sandford, of McVill, was in town one day last week, and when asked about the corn crop in this neighborhood, said that there is but one good crop between Petersburg and East Bend. That crop was raised on a field near McVill that has been cultivated year after year since a time which no one knows to the contrary. A crop of cow peas was turned under and revived the soil in a remarkable manner to the surprise of those who knew how the land had been run down, and as a result everything in the neighborhood is now talking about sowing cow-peas to restore the productive properties of their land which they expect to plant in corn hereafter.

Last Sunday was a typical winter day throughout. Old Sol made a brief at shining early in the morning, but by ten o'clock the clouds had shut off his smiles and scattering flakes of snow began to drift lazily about and by noon the snow was coming down in genuine winter fashion while the wind howled around the corners and made the pedestrians draw their wraps close about them. By four o'clock about an inch of snow had fallen, when it appeared to moderate some and the snow soon disappeared from the streets. Monday dawned beautiful and bright, and there was little indication that there had been a break in the weather.

A friend objected to the Herald's headlines last week calling the election a "landslide," because, he says, the vote for Wilson was less than the vote for Bryan in one of the three campaigns in which he was defeated. This is true, but what constitutes a landslide in politics depends not so much on the size of it as on what is under it. A landslide on the Panama canal may overwhelm only a razor-back hog, while a cave-in on a dredge ditch may catch a bunch of good men. Looking at the recent phenomenon from the under side we still call it a landslide—Monticello Herald.

In some neighborhood of the county nearly all of this year's crop of tobacco has been sold, and the growers are awaiting weather suitable for stripping in order to prepare it for delivery. The prices at which the crop has been contracted range from eight to twelve dollars per one hundred, not many crops reaching the last figures. The crop in the county will fall a little short of an average, but at the prices for which it has been selling the last figures are a very large amount of money into Boone Co in the next few months.

John Bradley, of Gallatin county, came to Burlington, last Monday and bailed his sister, Mrs. Licher out of jail. Her bond had been reduced to $500 by Judge Cammack. Her trial is set for next term of the Boone circuit court. It will be remembered that she was indicted at the last term of the circuit court for shooting her husband in Petersburg shortly before the August term of that court. Mrs. Licher's departure leaves Dr. Tiley the only occupant of the jail.

A couple of negroes who were engaged on the work of double tracking the Q. & C. Railroad got into a fight near Erlanger last Sunday night and one of them used his gun with deadly effect. The one who did the shooting made his escape.

Bear in mind that next Saturday the big corn show will be held in Hebron. Quite a number of good premiums will be awarded, and no doubt the show will be a good one. Go out and see it.

J. F. Blyth has not recovered from the shock that resulted from the discovery that he had killed his best dog a few days ago when he shot a rabbit while the dog was in the danger zone unknown to Mr. Blyth.

Attorneys Sidney Gaines and N. E. Riddell, were in Petersburg, last Thursday taking depositions to be used upon the trial of the suit of Mrs. Nannie Gaines vs. B. R. Gaines' administrator, pending in the Boone Circuit Court.

Quite a number of Big Bone citizens were in Burlington one day last week giving depositions in a big divorce suit from that neighborhood, that is expected to be called for trial at the December term of the Boone Circuit Court.

Some hogs have been slaughtered. Stock water still scarce in some sections. Splendid weather for slucking and cribbing corn. Some sales of corn have been made at $2.00 per barrel. The ruling price seems to be $2.25.—Georgetown Times

As Reuben Hager entered the gate at home as he returned from school, last Friday evening, his horse became frightened and he ran the horse into a bank, turning his buggy over, which stopped proceedings before any serious damage resulted to him or his vehicle.

J. F. Blyth caught some nice bass down on Gunpowder creek, last week, that weighed two lbs., a piece, and refused nice minnows and showed their preference for the artificial bait he tendered them. It is not often that persons go angling at this time of the year in this latitude.

The Parcel Post.

The Parcel Post will become a reality on the first of next January and it behooves the people to become familiar with its provisions as rapidly as they can, in order that there may be no delay in the transporting of the article which they desire to send by it. The law provides that packages up to eleven pounds may be sent by Parcel Post, but in no event can letter postage stamps be used on the parcels in payment of the postage, a regular and special Parcel Post stamp is being provided by the government. In the event the sender should use the letter postage stamps the package will be held for postage and they will be a total loss to the party who attempts to use them. On a fourth class package of mail under the 4 weights over four ounces a Parcel Post stamp will have to be used after the first of next January. The above are a few things that will have to be remembered by the people, and other necessary instructions will be published by the Recorder from time to time as it can obtain them. Don't forget that you must not use the regular postage stamp on your Parcel Post packages.

The Demons of the Swamp are mosquitos. As they sting they put deadly malaria germs in the blood. Then follow the icy chills and the fires of fever. The appetite flies and the strength fails; also malaria often paves the way for deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters kill and cast out the malaria germs from the blood; give you a fine appetite and renew your strength. "After long suffering," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Louisiana, N. C., "three bottles drove all the malaria from my system, and I've had good health ever since." Best for all stomach, liver and kidney ills. 50 cents at all dealers.—Adv.

Hubert White, overseer out on the East Bend road is doing some good work on his highways. He is hauling all the stone he can get and placing it along where the road got the worst last winter, and so soon as he can he will have the stone broken and spread, which will make a great improvement in the winter condition of the road. Mr. White believes in doing work that will last for some time. Later on the people in this neighborhood will be singing his praises for the good work he is doing.

Hardin county has sold this year $75,000 worth of sheep, $200,000 worth of hogs $300,000 worth of cattle and will sell near $500,000 worth of mules this winter and there are enough turkeys in the county to feed the whole population from now until the first of January—Elizabethtown Times

The price of eggs would seem to indicate that the hens have begun their winter vacation unusually early this year. The feathered sisters can thank their stars that the election did not go Bull Moose else they would probably not have gotten off for the Christmas holidays.—Lawrenceburg Press

The horse driven by young Stephens, of the Locust Grove neighborhood, and who attends the Burlington High School, scared at Lennie Eddin's auto, last Friday evening, and upset the buggy and damaged it some. The horse got loose from the vehicle but was caught and the young man drove it home.

A. C. Corn, of Bullittsville, sold to Wingate & Thompson, of Petersburg, last week, seven cattle, two of them three year olds, that weighed 3,200 pounds, while five of them were two year olds and weighed 1,200 each. They were sold at 7 1/2 cents a pound and brought Mr. Corn $600. They were a handsome lot of cattle and had consumed considerable of Mr. Corn's blue grass.

Card of Thanks—We desire to extend to our neighbors and friends our heartfelt thanks for the kindness shown us during the fatal illness and death of our beloved father, Alfred Cason. Especially do we thank Rev. Edgar Riley for his services and undertaker C. Scott Chambers for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.

The Children.

Thomas A. Adams, who resides on Henry Clore's farm down on Gunpowder creek, came very near having another burn-out last Sunday. He and his wife spent the day with a neighbor and when they came home they found a large section of carpet burnt off the floor, soot having fallen out of the stove pipe hole in the flue and started the fire, which, fortunately, did but little damage.

Sheriff B. B. Hume made a trip through the extreme northern part of the county on official business in his auto, last Thursday. Much of the road over which he traveled is scarcely passable for a buggy, and being a beginner with the machine his trip is the more surprising to those acquainted with the roads. He was told by several that he was the first to travel their road in a machine, when he replied that he would also be the last unless another stranger came that way.

The advertisement of Jesse L. Hamilton, the new undertaker at Verona, will be found in this issue. He purchased the undertaking establishment of the late M. T. Wilson at Verona, last Saturday, from the administrator, and will continue the business at the old stand, with Mrs. M. T. Wilson, the widow of the late undertaker, as his assistant. Mr. Hamilton has had considerable experience in the business and is up-to-date in his methods and equipment. He will appreciate your patronage and friendship in his new venture.

Farmers of the Green River tobacco belt are facing a crisis in the sale of their year's crops and present indications are that the tobacco will be stored for months as all negotiations are at a standstill with the buyers holding the year's crop is not worth more than $8, while the association claim they will not dispose of the pooled crop for less than they received last year, which was $10 to $8 for the leaf and $ugs and down to $3 for the trash. The officials of the pooling organizations control nearly 40,000-000 pounds of tobacco.

The election of Judge C. C. Turner, of Mt Sterling, from the Seventh Appellate District, makes the Kentucky Court of Appeals solidly Democratic for the first time in many years. In fact, the first time probably since the membership of the highest court was increased to seven, Judge Turner succeeds Judge Robert H. Winn, Republican, who was appointed when Judge E. C. O'Rear resigned a year ago. Judge Turner will assume office just as soon as he receives his commission from the Governor. He will have five years of the unexpired term of Judge O'Rear to serve.

In Owen every thing is on the hum, farmers have been selling hogs, lambs and cattle and other products of the farm all the year. The farmers have sold their tobacco in many neighborhoods and only need a rain to finish stripping. Corn gathering and hog killing are occupying the attention of the people and everything indicates a prosperous Holiday and New Year. The stores of the county are filled with bargains and the pretty Fall has made business good in all lines. The promoters of the new railroad are getting ready to complete the road next season and the future of the county is bright—Owen County Democrat.

Mayville—The first shipment of dressed turkeys from this county this season went to Boston. Two large refrigerator cars containing 200 barrels, 10,000 birds, were shipped from Marshall station. Most of them were chestnut fattened and are for Thanksgiving.

To Prevent Gypsy Moth.

State Agricultural Commissioner Newman has decided to take steps to check the progress of the gypsy moth among the fruit trees of Kentucky. Some days ago the United States Government notified Prof. Garman, at Lexington, that some steps should be taken by the Kentucky authorities to eradicate the pest, so as to prevent a quarantine against Kentucky by other States. Prof. Garman, having no funds at his command in his department, notified the Governor, who, in turn, referred the matter to the Commissioner of Agriculture. Mr. Newman says he has no funds at his command for this specific purpose, but he proposes to use some of the money at his command for other departments to aid in the stamping out of the gypsy moth, if it is possible to do so.

Miss Hazel Craven, daughter of Walter Craven, of Walton, has been at the home of Dr. J. C. Slater the past week taking treatment for a diseased thumb, and the condition was such as to make amputation necessary for the health of the patient, and Dr. Slater performed a very successful operation Monday, Mrs. B. K. Menefee, A. N. Jones and C. C. Metcalfe being present and assisting.

W. M. Hudson, of Independence, deputy sheriff of Kenton Co., who has been very ill for some time with stomach trouble, was operated on in a Cincinnati hospital last Friday, and he has excellent prospects for restoration to health, which was very doubtful in the beginning. Mr. Hudson has a host of friends in this quarter and is very popular everywhere and all join in an earnest wish for his speedy recovery.

Dr. H. W. Hamilton left Monday for Chicago where he has purchased a dental office and will practice his profession there. He has a large suite of rooms at 8 N. State street, the center of the business district, and succeeded to a large and profitable practice. Dr. Hamilton is a first class dentist and is thoroughly versed in his profession and his prospect is very flattering. His patrons and many friends regretted his departure from Walton because of his professional skill and his excellent gentlemanly qualities.

Frank P. Mann, a well known and highly esteemed citizen of near Morning view, Kenton county, died very suddenly Monday evening at the home of his son-in-law Robt. Elliott, in Kenton Co.

Mr. Mann had been in his usual health and was on a visit to his son-in-law when he suddenly fell and expired in a very short time. He was about sixty years old and leaves a wife and several children. He was one of the prominent citizens of that locality, and was the member of the Board of Control of the Burley Tobacco Society for the State.

He had many warm friends and his sudden death was a great shock to all. The funeral took place yesterday, Wednesday.

Last Friday a most delightful surprise party was given Mrs. Julia Adams-Rouse by the pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of the Walton Graded school at her home in Walton. A most enjoyable evening was spent together. Each of the visitors brought a present of something good to eat and made a collection that would tickle the appetite of the most fastidious epicure. Mrs. Rouse was given a genuine surprise, and more than appreciated the kindness and thoughtfulness of her pupils. Those present were Marie Menefee, Mary Houston, Emma Jane Miller, Madge Miller, John Johnson, Marion Johnson, Erma Stephenson, Lois MaGruder, Kathryn Hicks, Mabel Colston, Susie Johnson, and Lucy Williams; Fred Callender, Bryan Beverly, and Clifford Youell.

PUBLIC SALE

Of Two Desirable Boone County Farms.

On Saturday, Nov. 30th, 1912, I will offer at public sale on the premises, three improved Boone county farms, all in one tract, and being on Bullock Pen Creek adjoining my Grant county farm about two miles from Crittenden and the same distance from Verona.

FARM NO. 1 contains 100 to 115 acres and has a comfortable house, stable and other buildings on it. Also a nearly new oak frame tobacco barn; 40x96 feet and 20 feet to the eaves, with a capacity of 20,000 lbs. of tobacco. This is a fine body of land and is situated about one-half mile from the Verona and Bracht turnpike. It offers a great opportunity as a money maker. I estimate that the corn crop this year will average 60 bushels to the acre.

FARM NO. 2 adjoins the above and has a good five-room house, stable, hen house, smoke house etc., all recently built, and contains 70 to 85 acres. The most of it is rich limestone soil, and it will make a splendid home for somebody.

The crops on this place for a few years ought to pay for it. Some alfalfa is growing and one-third of the farm is adapted to alfalfa.

Sale begins at 10 a. m. at the big barn on farm No. 1.

The tract will also be offered as a whole.

TERMS:—One-third or more cash and the balance in one and two years at 6 per cent interest. I reserve the right to reject any and all bids.

Come at once and look these farms over.

For further particulars address F. S. POLLITT, Crittenden, Ky.

Sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Mary Nettles Batchelor, Mrs. Jasper McGuire and daughter, Lulu, were shopping in Aurora, Tuesday. Great preparations are being made for an entertainment by another party. Mr. Gerin, Hubert and Miss Edith Loden, are shopping in Aurora, Friday. A nice rain fell Sunday night. It was needed badly, several cisterns were nearly dry.

Good Roads.

Conservation is a strong note in the hymn of social and economical progress. The conservation of energy and power is as important as the conservation of any of our resources. Nation wide and even international is the agitation for good roads. The Missouri Pacific entered Coffeyville, Kansas eggs sold for five cents a dozen at that place. Today the railroad has brought a market for Coffeyville's eggs. This county of Boone, I have been told, has fine markets all around it. As high prices are realized in the suburban cities of Home City, Delhi and Fernbank as in other suburban cities of our county, but just a few miles away, vegetables and country produce is sold to hucksters, who haul this stuff through water and mud to market at quite a cost. With the coming of the parcel post much of the country produce could be sent direct to the consumer. Already manufacturers are at work making cartons to hold eggs, butter, lettuce, radishes and other vegetables, so as to cut down the middle man's profits.

The government has already sounded the warning to the patrons of Rural Routes, who live on mud roads now, why should not Boone county have good roads? This county is rich. Her people are intelligent and energetic. Every year many of her people move away to countries of good roads and better schools. Hundreds of Boone county citizens blame the Fiscal Court. This court is to blame get a new one, as have been informed, some county days done away with this court altogether. Get the work of caring for the roads made a business. This is a most important issue to the people of this county than the election of a President. Boone county does not want better roads or the could have one. One thing we suggest is to have good roads and that is vote good roads. That may or may not mean "Free Pikes." The people of this county should make the pikes free the whole county will have to pay to make the mud roads pikes. National State aid for roads will only come to those who help themselves. Let the people of this good county, who pay the least taxes of any people, who are as liberal and charitable as any people, began an agitation that will make a strong sentiment for progress. There will be "Star-patters" who will oppose this but the world "do move." Let us have some discussion of this subject. P. Q.

Appraised at $19,062.

Kenton county contemplates the purchase of the eight miles of the Lexington pike that lies between the Boone county line and the city of Covington and making a free road of it, and for that purpose commissioners appraised the road, last week, fixing its value at $19,062. It is hoped that Kenton county will succeed in her undertaking, for in a few years that very important artery of travel will be impassable if it does not receive better roads than has been given it in the last few years. Making a free road of the Lexington pike will be a testimony to the Covington merchants, who are striving hard to reclaim the trade in a very large territory to which the city of Covington is entitled, which has been in a manner taken from them by improved facilities for reaching Cincinnati.

FORTUNE MINING CO.

Local Stockholders Thoroughly Satisfied With The Progress of The Work.

H. J. Marshall, of Aurora, Indiana, Vice-President of the Fortune Mining Company located in Arizona, and A. W. Davis, Secretary and Treasurer, of the same company, were in Burlington, last Thursday, and held a meeting of the local stockholders in the company. Mr. Davis who is the one of the ground all the time made a statement as to the progress of the work developing the mine, the present condition of the work and as to future prospects, and in the course of his remarks said if there was a stockholder present who is not satisfied with his investment that he was free to draw him a check for his money he had paid in and take up his certificate of stock. This was an unusual statement for a man who is out selling stock in an undeveloped enterprise, but shows that Mr. Davis believes in the Fortune mine. He said further, he had never found but one person who wanted his money back and he got it. It seems that the Burlington stockholders were satisfied with Mr. Davis' statement as he returned to Burlington last Saturday, when nearly all the stockholders here increased their holdings at double the cost per share of their first investment.

BIG TOBACCO DEAL

14,000 Acres of Dark Tobacco Sold at Price Fixed By Association.

Bowling Green.—It was learned from an authoritative source that the sale of the entire crop of tobacco of the Bowling Green One-Sucker district has been practically closed with a Louisville tobacco-man, whose name is withheld. The Louisville buyer was in Bowling Green last Saturday, and was closed the whole day at the Mansard Hotel with the local growers. The deal is understood he has taken the entire crop, subject to certain conditions not yet made public. The sale affects the entire pooled crop of the district, which embraces 14,000 acres and an estimated yield of over 11,000,000 lbs. The tobacco is expected to weigh over seven cents and means that about $800,000 will be received for the crop.

Dr. A. M. Yelton, moved this week from Neave to Burlington, Ky., having purchased the property, good will etc., of Dr. F. L. Peddicord, who has taken charge of the State Central Sanitarium. Dr. Yelton has been located here for about seven years and has enjoyed a splendid practice, and the confidence and admiration of the citizens of that community. He is a most capable host, not only a good doctor, but a good citizen who took an active interest in schools, churches and social organizations. While we regret his leaving the county, we most heartily congratulate the citizens of Burlington, for having secured his permanent location.—Bracken County Review.

Gordon Gaines, son of A. W. Gaines, who resides out on the Florence pike, and Mrs. C. M. Gaines, of Covington, were married about ten days ago. They spent Thanksgiving with the parents of the groom.

Prosecuting Attorney Martin L. Downs.

The above is a good picture of M. L. Downs, the new Commonwealth's Attorney in this district, and the following is what the News, one of his home papers had to say of his appointment immediately after it was made by the Governor:

The News, with sorrow, performed a painful duty in announcing the untimely death of our faithful friend, Hon. Everett E. Winn.

In our distress from the loss of such an efficient official and distinguished neighbor, the clouds truly hung heavily about us. The sun in all its brightness will never be fully able to convince us that behind "each cloud" is a silver lining.

There comes only too quickly the reminder that we also owe a duty to the living; leaving us all only the eternal hope for the dead. Thus it is that the wheels of time revolve so fast and so surely that nothing is left of yesterday but a cherished memory of today, a faded hope, and tomorrow a well beaten path. So it is our places are filled, or the gaps closed up—and merrily the world goes on.

Likely at no time have we felt that the mantle of a friend ever fell so lightly and so justly Judge Martin L. Downs who has received the appointment as Commonwealth's Attorney, was a true and true friend of the deceased. There existed between them a close and admirable friendship for years—confidential in the extreme, and his appointment will bring gladness to the hearts of Everett's true friends.

He nor his friends made no unbecomingly sensible for the place. That the appointment should have been unasked for by him is only another evidence of that friendship and the faithfulness of his friends. That he is a man who is qualified and thoroughly equipped, no one will question.

He has filled to the satisfaction of the Democrats of Carroll the office of city attorney. The administration under which he served has to its credit the best streets in Carroll today. It placed on the city books the first ordinance paving the side walks of the city.

He next served the county of Carroll as county attorney and the administration under which he served purchased the first improved road machinery, and while he was county attorney he accomplished his greatest achievement in our opinion. Almost alone and single handed, he, under the guidance and backing of Jas. F. Jett and M. L. Baker, built the Kentucky River bridge, which has added more to the prosperity and convenience of the citizens of city and Carroll county than any other improvement. During his term of office toll-gates were removed, Carroll county's pikers being made free to all comers.

Mr. Downs served the county two terms as county judge, during which time the roads and bridges were his principal work. These improvements, today, testify to his aggressiveness. He abrogated the old system of working the road six days in the year. Under his administration Carroll county's taxes were never raised by the State Board of Equalization, yet he was able during that period to reduce the county taxes.

He formed a law partnership with Hon. John S. Gaunt in 1883. That partnership exists to this day. Under the tutelage of Mr. Gaunt he became and remains a Democrat of the old school, never being able to cast entirely aside the old doctrines of free trade and sailors' rights, so opposed to the subsidy in all its forms and to all infringements by the general Government on the States. He is a thorough Democrat, and has represented the Sixth District in two National conventions as his party's delegate. He has been honored by his party at home and abroad. His progressiveness has placed him at the head of all his associations.

Feeding Cattle.

We feed cattle to produce milk or beef; sheep to produce wool and mutton; hogs to produce pork. The horse we feed to produce energy alone, and the amount and quality of the feed should be graduated according to the expenditure of energy to be demanded from the animal. If the horse is highly fed and no sufficient outlet provided for the energy developed by the feed, the result is disease and injury—sometimes fatal. If a great expenditure of energy is demanded of him, while he is fed sufficiently for its production, the demand is met by the consumption of the animal's own tissues, and by such a drain upon its vital powers as, again, may seriously impair his value. It is seen, then, that from the standpoint of the horse's physical well being alone the proper adjustment of rations to the amount of work performed is something well deserving of serious study. But on it, too, depends the question of the cost of horse labor and of the comparative value of the horse and the machine in operation of the farm. Wasteful or inconsiderate feeding may often cause the question to be determined to the disadvantage of the horse, whereas with a ration adjusted each day to the amount of work required he might bravely hold his own for a long time yet against his puffing rival. —Prairie Farmer.

Ends Hunt For Rich Girl.

Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man meets a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Her peach bloom complexion and ruby lips result from her pure blood; her bright eyes from restful sleep; her elastic step from firm, free muscles, all telling of the health and strength Electric Bitters give a woman, and the freedom from indigestion, backache, headache, fainting and dizzy spells they promote. To 40,000 Burley Tobacco Growers Stockholders in Strater Bros.' Branch Factory

Here are ten brands of tobacco. All of you know their worth, for you supply the leaf. It comes from your own tobacco farms. Most of you smoke or chew one of these brands, for they represent the cream of your crops. You know of none better, none richer, and you know that each sale brings a profit to you. You are partners in each of these brands. Here's a way to increase your profits on each.

40,000 Partner-Salesmen

We want 40,000 more salesmen and you. Mr. Grower, are one that we want. We want you to work with us, to help sell these brands, and thus increase your revenue from them. Your cooperation, individually, can result in gigantic sales. Here's how it works out.

Let Each Man Tell Ten Friends

Let each of you growers tell ten friends what you know of Strater Bros.' Branch Brands, the brands for which you grow the leaf. Always keep one of these brands in your pocket and give to these friends to try. Explain that the leaf was the pick of your crop and that no better crops are grown. Point out the reasons why these brands of tobacco should be every smoker's and grower's choice since it is your choice. growth. 40,000 men, each telling ten friends, will thus get a powerful sales message to nearly 400,000. If each of those friends tell five others, nearly 2,000,000 men are affected. Think what an increase this would make on these brands in one section. You are selling to us. We are selling to them. So let us work jointly to sell the utmost that we can.

Tell Dealers, Too

Tell dealers, too, when you buy these brands, what you know of their quality. Let them know of their nation-wide popularity, how they repeat, and how they make friends of consumers.

BE A BOOSTER OF BURLEY GROWERS' BRANDS, thus boosting the sales and your profits.

TO ALL DEALERS WHO SELL TOBACCO

These brands of tobacco are famous sellers as all who sell them know. They are made from the best, from the cream of the crops, from forty thousand farms. They form the greatest repeaters known, a steady source of profit. Put them into your stock for a trial and see what they will sell them for years. If you sell them one week.

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

Q-Milady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

Q-Mother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Grandma had a Cabinet with a tin sugar bin nailed to the door; Granddaughter's has an ant proof, automatic valve, crystal glass one, swinging to the Cabinet side.

Q-Mother and Grandmother hid their ironing-boards behind the kitchen door. In our Cabinet an ironing-board instantly comes from underneath the table top, and when ironing is done, Presto—out of sight it goes.

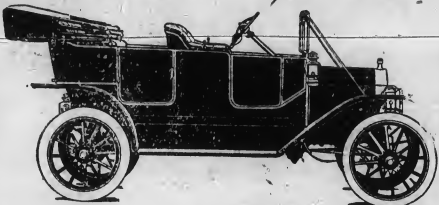

Don't buy a Cabinet until you see this.

Pale Faces

Pale-faced, weak, and shaky women—who suffer every day with womanly weakness—need the help of a gentle tonic, with a building action on the womanly system. If you are weak—you need Cardul, the woman's tonic, because Cardul will act directly on the cause of your trouble. Cardul has a record of more than 50 years of success. It must be good.

Take CARDUL The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Effie Graham, of Willard, Ky., says: "I was so weak I could hardly go. I suffered, nearly every month, for 3 years. When I began to take Cardul, my back hurt awfully. I only weighed 99 pounds. Not long after, I weighed 115. Now, I do all my work, and am in good health." Begin taking Cardul, today.

FARMERS AND THEIR AUTOS.

Not Bought for Pleasure, but Because Machines Can be Used to Much Advantage in Farming.

Recently there has been considerable pessimism expressed by country bankers over the alleged reckless extravagance of farmers in buying automobiles, and some state bankers' associations have gone so far as to express in official resolutions their disapproval of farmers taking their money out of the banks to buy machines and intimating that credit will be refused those who go to borrow money for that purpose.

These pessimistic "warnings" by the banks are so uniform in character and are sent with such marked regularity as to arouse the suspicion that they emanate from a certain source and are intended to conceal a sinister purpose. Perhaps this activity on the part of certain powerful financial interests may be explained by the reports that a great trust is being formed to take over all the principal automobile factories in the United States, and if the business can be demoralized by frightening people and thus preventing them from buying machines the central plants can be bought for less money.

While it is true that thousands of farmers have bought autos, it is equally true that on proper investigation that most of them had the money in the bank to pay for them, and that very little borrowed money has been used for this purpose. The report sent out by a Wall street agency that farmers all over the west were mortgaging their land for this purpose and that one bank in Kansas City held 58 farm mortgages which had been placed to get money to buy automobiles, have been proven to be entirely untrue.

Farmers are buying automobiles—not as bankers do, for pleasure—but because they have learned that they can use them to a great advantage in their farming operations. A trip to town which usually takes three hours with a good team can be made in forty minutes by an auto, a saving of nearly two and a half hours, and the team can be kept at work in the field meantime.

This saving of time and the labor of a team and man in the field is well worth while and highly commendable. Thousands of autos are used every day by dairymen, fruit growers and truckers to deliver their produce to market, and these machines, loaded to the guards, may be seen daily on the streets of market towns in every state, east, west, north and south.

Many farmers also use their autos for power to run separators and other light machinery on the farm, as it is the cheapest power that can be supplied. And if in addition to these needs the farmer uses his auto to take his family to town or to church or to visit his friends with comfort and celerity while the work teams are resting, he is merely showing further evidence of his conservative business judgment and good common sense which we may safely continue to trust.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by J. W. ONLY NEEDED TURNING OVER Remedy Frequently Effective With Small Boy Worked Well With Recalcitrant Mule.

A mule drawing a furniture van down Broadway got tired of the job and lay down. Soon a crowd gathered and ventured all manner of advice to the driver, relates the New York Times.

Louis Scheff, an electrician, of 152 Amsterdam avenue, suggested that twisting the mule's ears would force it to rise, and put his idea into practice, but ineffectually, while the crowd shouted "Whisper in its ear."

Scheff next tried pulling the mule's tail. Mrs. Anna Schott of 304 Omsteddam avenue, a passenger on a Broadway surface car, who is a member of the Humane society, construed the electrician's efforts as cruelty and had Scheff arrested.

Detective Sharp of the West Sixty-eighth Street station, who comes from the south and knows mules, took one look at the fallen mule and said: "You'll never get that mule up—it's lying on its left side."

"What's that got to do with it?" demanded the driver.

"Everything," replied Sharp. "Ropes were tied to the mule's hoofs, and it was turned over on its right side. Sharp gently kicked the animal in the side and it scrambled to its feet.

HIS SYMPATHIES WITH ELK

Somewhat Natural, Since Animal Rescued Engineer From Extremely Awkward Position.

A curious story of adventure comes from Montana. While a freight train was lying over at a small mountain station, the engineer borrowed a shotgun and started out for a short hunt. Finding nothing, he was returning to the train when a cow came running at him, and before he realized his danger, she tossed him in the air.

Getting to his feet as quickly as possible, he dodged behind a tree, and then, to his dismay, found that the gun barrel was bent so as to be useless. The next ten minutes were very lively ones, while the cow chased the engineer round and round the tree. Just when he was about to succumb from fatigue, an angry snort was heard, and a big elk appeared upon the scene, head down and prepared for a fight.

So was the cow, and in another moment the two animals dashed at each other. The engineer watched the combat for a few minutes, until prudence suggested that he should make a retreat as soon as the matter was regained the train in safety, and never knew the outcome of the battle, but he hopes the elk was the victor.

The Dancer.

"His little slanting eyes followed the butterfly movements of Lan-Tin here and there, the free toss of her little head and the graceful abandon of her arms as she swung them over her head, and again brought them down with a sweeping bend to the very ground. Lan-Tin had the makings of a dancer, his regal magnificence. She was playing a pretty little game of make-believe. She was the wind blowing through the plum tree. Tossing and twirling, bending low as did the drooping branches, waving slowly, rushing fiercely at the moment when all his flushed cheeks and glowing eyes she was the spirit of the wind.

"Then a funny thing happened. From outside the windows that opened on the perfumed Chinese night came the sound of loud hand-clapping and deep, strange voice shouting 'Brava!' She dropped the cue and a curtain no longer a wind fairy, but a little wilted flower."—From "The Tale of Little Lan-Tin," by Flo Hingler.

Useful Accomplishments.

Every woman wants a cozy corner all her own—be that corner humble or handsome.

Every woman who does not have the home longed is abnormal. Home is made up of little things.

One of the largest of these little things is the ability to cook "whole-some food."

Sewing and music are next. A woman might be as homely as can be, but if she can cook a good dinner, make a dress, and let her moods slip out of her finger tips on a piano, that woman will have a chance for a truly happy home a thousand per cent. better than her beautiful neighbor who cannot make even an apron, and who cooks badly for her family.

So I say to mothers, whether you have money or not, teach your daughters all the useful and necessary things in life, so that they will make good, homelike wives and mothers.

Elephant Most Intelligent.

The elephant is by a long shot the most intelligent animal under man. Some horses know a great deal, some dogs are exceedingly bright, but for real sound sense and all-around long-headedness the elephant heads the list. He is not only bright, he is a deep thinker and profound philosopher, and has been known to do things that apparently required nothing less than human intelligence. Read the books that have to do with animal intelligence, with the wonderful things that our dumb fellow-beings have done, and while you will find much to be credited to the dog, horse and other animals, you will be impressed with the fact that, next to man, the brain-power of the elephant is the greatest among them all.

The Presidential Term.

From Washington comes the report that in the Presidential primary bill to be proposed at the next session of Congress a provision is to be inserted limiting each President to one term, but increasing the length of the term to six years.

If the bill is passed, as this dispatch suggests, a great reflection will be cast upon the intelligence of the American people. It will, moreover, be a step as far away from the rule of the people as that part of the bill providing Presidential primaries would be a step toward the rule of the people.

The President is the only officer in the United States elected by all of the people. He represents no constituents for whom he would feel inclined to labor to the detriment of other sections of the country. He alone is designated as the leader of the nation. His constituency is the nation as a whole.

Now it is suggested that he should be debauched because he has attained the very experience which, above all others, would fit him for the Presidency. Because he has been President, he should never be President again.

The choice of the people should not be limited in matters in which they have shown again and again that they are perfectly able to deal. In the past those Presidents who have been elected to a second term have been the men most worthy of respect and of a continuance in the office which they have filled with ability. Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Monroe, Madison, Lincoln, Cleveland, McKinley and Roosevelt. This array of names shows that when the people have found a man of power they have put him in the position where he could exert his power for the best interests of all.

Those Presidents who have been inefficient, who have been negligent, who have been weak, have been denied a second term. The examination of the record shows that the American people have uniformly proven themselves able of deciding correctly whether or not a President should be elected a second time.

Certainly if the people are able to choose a President for a first term they are able to decide whether or not he is capable of serving them again, after they have examined him in office for four years. If the people wish a man for President they will choose him. If they do not wish him, they will deny him. Beyond the desire of the people there should be no appeal.

The cause and purpose of such a proposition is clear enough. It is aimed at Mr. Roosevelt by the enemies that fear him. It is aimed at Mr. Wilson by those reactionaries who are already beginning to fear him. No damage could come to Mr. Wilson would be impossible to elect him to a second term, even though the Constitution permitted it.

The proposition has been interpolated in a progressive bill for the purpose of befuddling the issue. The questions of the nomination of a President and of his election to a second term are without relation to each other and should receive separate discussion.—Louisville Post.

Hopkins County's

New Road Plan.

Hopkins county claims to be the first county in the State to put the new road law in operation. Bids are being invited for work on about 100 miles of highway. Contracts will be let on December 7th. Other roads will be advertised as fast as they are laid off until every mile of every road is being worked under the new system.

The 100 miles of highway first to be let has been divided into two-mile sections and worked with mile posts. No one contractor will be allowed to take more than two sections, or four miles in all. The contractor signs an agreement with the County Engineer under which every section allotted must be dragged at least six times with a regulation King split-log drag from the date of contract to April 1st, 1913. One dragging is to consist of pulling the drag over the road twice each way, the work to be done following rains or thaws when the road is wet but not sticky. The contractor agrees to keep the flooring of all bridges and culverts in repair, the county to furnish the material and the contractor to haul it to places where it is needed. The contractor also agrees to keep the ditches and culverts open and free from obstructions.

The County Engineer is to furnish the successful bidders with plans and specifications for making and using the drag in case a new bridge is to be built, a culvert is to be put in, a hill to be cut down or a levee to be made, this will be done by special contract, but the preference will be given to the contractor on the section on which the special work is to be done.

Hopkins county has about 700 miles of public roads. County Attorney Sperry, who has issued a circular outlining the old plan, says that under the old system not more than 400 miles of road was ever worked in any one year, despite the fact that the county paid out $30,000 to $40,000 a year for road work, very little of which money went for new bridges and culverts. Under the new system it is expected that the desired that many farmers will take contracts for maintaining sections of road and that the work will be more thoroughly than it was under the old method. The plan was made by a few men. The plan was made by a few men.

$160 An Acre.

Mr. W. W. Givens, the well known farmer residing in the Shelby City section, has outclassed all farmers in Central Kentucky raising alfalfa, receiving the past season the sum of $160 per acre for his total yield. Mr. Givens has five acres which he planted several years ago. This fall he planted 23 acres more. The past season he harvested four crops from the five acres and each crop averaged two tons to the acre or eight tons per acre for the season. Although hay is plentiful this fall, Mr. Givens found no difficulty in selling his crop at $20 per ton, or $160 per acre for the season. He could have sold his fifth crop but felt that four was enough for one year. In order to produce alfalfa successfully the ground must be put in the proper condition. Usually in this country a certain amount of lime and Tennessee phosphate are necessary to adjust the soil for the proper product. The only enemies alfalfa has are weeds and blue grass. However, they can be easily over come, as alfalfa is deep-rooted while the weeds and blue grass are shallow. Mr. Givens works the land over just as though he was preparing to plant a crop of corn. The weeds and grass are destroyed while the alfalfa cannot be injured as the roots sink deep into the ground. Alfalfa is not only a very profitable crop but it enriches the land equally as well as clover. Those who have had success with it prefer it very much to almost any other crop.—Danville Advocate.

Work a Watch Does.

It is a matter of everyday occurrence for a person to say to his watchmaker:

"Here is a watch which you sold me ten years ago. It has always gone well until lately, when it has taken to stopping without any apparent cause. The people who speak in this way little think of the amount of work a watch has performed in this space of time and might be astonished at the following figures:

In ten years, which includes two leap years, and consequently a total of 3,652 days, the hour hand has made 2,528,800 revolutions, and its extremity has traveled more than 10,820 yards more than six miles. The second hand has made 5,238,800 revolutions, and its extremity has traveled over 22,338,800 times in contact with each tick. The balance has made 1,577,610,000 vibrations, and has pointed to the outside of the rim has covered a distance of about 50,000 miles, and that is equal to twice the circumference of the earth.

The picture of Commonwealth's Attorney M. L. Downs which the Recorder carries on another page this week, is so true to nature that you will not fail to recognize him when you meet him in Burlington, next Monday, and they do say that he is a terror to evil doers.

Very little business was done in the county court last Monday. The last will and testament of Mrs. Harriet Taliaferro was probated and J. L. Frazier and L. H. Voshell qualified as executors. L. F. Ayler was appointed administrator of the estate of his mother, Mrs. Susan Ayler.

There has been some nice weather this week for stripping tobacco.

THE LOVE OF MONEY

Causes People to Be Taxed For The Privilege of Hunting on Other People's Land.

Shame to the State leaders of a grand old party, who seem to blot the principles of Democracy with unfair and British laws, and who seem to cut patterns from Ohio and Indiana laws, and who should remember, if a true Democrat wants Britishism he will vote for the party who prefers to believe it. Can it be for the love of money that they would trample Democracy under their feet? Can it be for the love of money that they would pass laws for the benefit of the trust Co., and can it be that they would preach equal rights to all and special privileges to a few and an equal right to you and don't it look like it is taking a man's money for nothing when they charge him a dollar license to hunt and yet have no place for him to hunt? Don't it look like it is taking the privilege from the land owner, who pays the amount of tax called for and yet his friend cannot go on his place to hunt without paying some one else a dollar, who does not own the land? It's right to have a law prohibiting concealed weapons. It is not the love of money that they will pass a law that if you will pay us we will give you a license to carry a gun? This looks like it's as good as having you can kill your fellowman if you will pay us. Don't it look like it is taking the land owner's privilege when a law causes him loss of time and money, and perhaps friends in order that his friend may hunt on his land? While the school law was being discussed a thirteen year old boy said, "I don't think it is right to tax a man for school purposes if he has no children to send." Even such a tender mind seemed to think the law was taking something for nothing. The leaders of the Democratic party should remember as it seems unfair to the people, but it is a great political party in so long a time, and if they expect to follow in the same foot steps there will likely be another great political party bursted in on a short time. Let the voter remember his vote is a weapon against the laws he does not like and against the party who will pass them.

EVERETT HALL.

Fine on Tobacco. On account of the long period of dry weather this fall none of the 1913 crop of tobacco has been put on the market, several of the looseleaf houses that expected to open for business last week having to postpone their opening sales day because of the weather having been so dry that no tobacco could be received. The rain that came last Sunday night gave growers a chance to begin stripping their tobacco, and with continued favorable weather the crop will begin to move. A large portion of the crop tobacco has been sold and the opportunity to put it on the market is being anxiously awaited.

Owensboro.—A mass meeting of the tobacco growers of the Green River District has been called in Owensboro by the Green River Tobacco Association to take action in regard to the reduction of the 1913 crop. The growers and buyers are still deadlocked on the price of this year's crop. The farmers assert that the first Government census report on the amount of tobacco on hand contradicts the plea of the buyers that there is already an overabundance on hand. The growers are holding out for 10 for the top price, the same as last year.

A. Adams,

PIANOS, TALKING MACHINES AND SUPPLIES,

15 Pike Street, - - Covington, Ky.

The date of A. B. Acra's sale is Tuesday, December 10th, instead of Tuesday, December 12th, as appeared in last week's Recorder. Note the change of the date in the advertisement.

The taxpayers got a move on towards the latter part of last week, and when the hour arrived to put on the six per cent penalty very little tax remained unpaid.

Local Happenings.

It was a beautiful Thanksgiving—clear and crisp.

Hardly a usual Saturday evening's crowd in town last Monday.

Dr. Peddicord is now on his job at Lakeland asylum for the insane.

Water for both stock and domestic purposes was getting scarce last week.

The good cooks showed up strong at the corn show at Hebron last Saturday.

The rain that fell last Sunday night played hob with the fine condition of the dirt roads.

Read Mrs. B. L. Cleek's advertisement in this issue. She will have an auction on the 14th inst.

Do your Christmas shopping early and accommodate the merchants and make it easier on the clerks.

The first of December found the pastures presenting a green appearance, something unusual for so late in the fall.

Charles Clore, of Hebron, has ordered a five passenger auto from B. B. Hume, to be delivered in the next few months.

The supper given by the Odd-Fellows at Hebron next Saturday night will be 25 cents; dancing 50 cents. All are invited.

Business is not quite so lively up at the Sheriff's office as it was last week when so many taxpayers were heading off the penalty.

The December term of the Boone Circuit Court will begin next Monday. About the usual amount of business is on the docket.

A very large proportion of the pork for home consumption was prepared last week. People in every neighborhood were busy killing hogs.

When you have a bilious attack give Chamberlain's Tablets a trial. They are excellent. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Son and E. E. Kelly.—Adv.

The Odd-Fellows' new building at Hebron is progressing nicely and will be completed on contracted time if its present rate of progress is kept up.

The trapping campaign is now in full blast and is being pushed vigorously, and the mink, skunk or ground hog risks on life every time it leaves its den.

Several of the young people of Burlington attended the supper at Florence last Thursday night, and pronounced it a great success in every particular.

If you are troubled with chronic constipation, the mild and gentle effect of Chamberlain's Tablets makes them especially suited to your case. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly.—Adv.

Assessor Willis has about completed his official work for this year. He had one of the best seasons for making his rounds that he ever experienced—the weather has been good all the time nearly.

The postmasters are not sorry that the time during which they were required to weigh the incoming and outgoing mails has expired—last Sunday was the last day on which they had to do that work.

John Hogan, of the Mt. Zion neighborhood, set a steel trap and caught a chicken. He baited the trap with the chicken and caught a fine fox. His next catch was a hawk that measured four feet three inches from tip to tip.

You will find that druggists everywhere are selling of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. They know from long experience in the sale of it that in cases of colds and coughs it can always be depended upon, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly.—Adv.

Ex-Governor Beckham has announced his candidacy to succeed United States Senator W. O. Bradley. It is thought that there will be several other candidates, among them Gov. McCrory. The nomination will probably be made at the next August primary election and the contest will be a warm one.

Keep all the hogs on the place busy. Let them do all the growing, fattening or producing young. Every animal is either losing money, or making it for you. See that every individual is on the right side of the ledger, and that you have a definite subject in keeping it.

Miss Katie R. Allphin, aged 39, and Benj. Sutton, aged 24, slipped quietly away to Rising Sun, Indiana, last Saturday and were united in the wed of holy wedlock to the surprise of their many friends, who wish them a long and happy journey together. The bride is the daughter of J. J. Allphin, of Gallatin county, and the groom is the son of William Sutton, of Berkshire, this county.

CORN SHOW

At Hebron A Great Success.

A Fine Display of Corn, Cakes, Pies and Other Culinary Products.

Boone County Pomona Grange held their annual Corn Show at Hebron, last Saturday. It was a great success in every particular. Corn growers from all parts of the county were in attendance, submitting their samples as the results of their efforts in the production of the king of cereals. Three sides of the town hall were lined with displays of corn, while a large table in the center of the room held the products of the housewives' art. A large crowd of people were in attendance, enough to fill all the standing room in the hall except that occupied by the displays. Prof. Kinney from the State College did the judging. Dinner was served by the ladies in Grange Hall.

A list of the prize winners is published in another column. Harry Stephens carried off his share of the premiums, taking 1st prize on Boone County White, besides several others, as he usually does. Hiram Long took first prize on Johnson County White. Courtney Kelly took first prize on the best 10 ears raised in the Boys' Corn Club. Robt. McGlasson, for the best single ear, in the same class.

Following is the list of premiums awarded at the Boone Co. Corn Show at Hebron, last Saturday:

Boone County White—Stephens Bros., Idlewild; W. A. Gaines, Burlington.

Johnson Co. White—Hiram Long, Florence; J. B. Cloud, Hebron.

Yellow Dent—O. C. Hafer, Hebron; W. P. Cropper, Burlington R. D. 3.

Leaming—E. Hafer, Hebron; B. Paddock, Chester Aylor, Florence R. D.; E. Hafer, Hebron.

Variety not mentioned in the above—J. Din, Hebron; W. E. Walton, R. D.

Single Ear White Corn—Stephens Bros., Idlewild; L. T. Clore, Burlington.

Single Ear Yellow Corn—Stephens Bros., Idlewild; B. Paddock, Hebron.

Single Ear not classed above—E. Hafer.

Sugar Corn, Zigzag—G. O. Hafer Rice Popcorn—Robt. Clore, Burlington; J. B. Crigler, Hebron.

Popcorn another variety—Chester Goodridge; Leona Long.

Boys' Corn Show—Courtney Kelly; Robt. McGlasson, Jr., Jameson Aylor; Harold Crigler.

Best Single Ear Corn any variety—Robt. McGlasson.

Pumpkin Pie—Mrs. Artie Hafer; Mrs. Laura McGlasson.

Sliced Apple Pie—Mrs. Artie Hafer; Mrs. Lillie Comer.

Devil Food Cake—Miss Eunie Willis.

Layer Cake—Mrs. Laura Aylor; Mrs. Hattie Goodridge.

Fruit Cake—Mrs. Clara Hafer; Mrs. Stella Cloud.

Quart Sorghum Molasses—Benj. Paddock.

Quart Apple Butter—Mrs. Bertha Smith.

Cucumber Pickles—Mrs. Joseph Graves.

Apple Vinegar—Milton Southern.

Corn Husk Mat—G. O. Hafer.

James Aylor, who returned, recently from North Dakota, where his brother Buford is engaged in farming, handed the Recorder the following statement of his crop yields this year: Wheat, 20,700 bushels; rye, 4,561 bushels; barley, 4,310 bushels; oats, 7,421 bushels; flax, 472 bushels; speltz, 1,411 bushels; potatoes, 7,000 bushels. Total, 43,851 bushels. Besides the above he cultivated 120 acres of corn. That's some farming.

While the recent rains in Argentina may have possibly have caused some losses to the new wheat crop, the field there is a bumper affair, and advises say the quality will be excellent. The harvesting of wheat will begin in that country within a few days and it will be pushed as rapidly as possible until the harvesters arrive at the southern limit of the wheat belt. Steamers are said to be on their way to Argentina having been assured cargoes of wheat.

Of the five premiums offered to members of the Boys' Corn Clubs at Hebron students of Boone County High School took four. Premiums for 10 best ears were as follows: 1st—Courtney Kelly. 2nd—Robt. McGlasson. 3rd—Jameson Aylor. 4th—Edgar Riley. A student of B. H. S. last year, Robt. McGlasson took the prize for the best single ear. This puts Prof. Dixon on record as offering a gold medal to the winners at the corn show, provided they were students of the County High School.

The Burlington and Ludlow football teams played an interesting game at the Burlington ball park last Thursday, the score being 14-0 in favor of Burlington. It was the closest contest ever witnessed on the local ground, and for quite awhile the result of the contest was very much in doubt. Hager's touchdown and forty yard run were the features of the game on the side of the home team. Everything passed off nicely and there were only one or two slight accidents to players. This game closed the season, during which Burlington won one out of four games played, defeating Bellevue 32 to 0 one game.

Personal Mention.

R. O. Hughes, of Richwood, was a business visitor to Burlington Tuesday.

Jeff Murphy, of Covington, was transacting business in Burlington, last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Davis and children, of Prescott, Arizona, are guests at the Boone House.

Mrs. Lavina Kirkpatrick was the guest of Mrs. Emaline Kerkshire, a few days last week.

Mrs. B. D. Hawes, of Lakeland, was visiting the relatives of her husband in Burlington last week.

M. L. Riddell and wife were in Hebron neighborhood, last Sunday afternoon, visiting his parents.

Mrs. Elbert Roberts, of Florence, is the guest of her father, Mr. Asa Cason, out on the East Bend road.

W. C. Johnson, of Beaver, was the guest of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Sam Johnson, last Sunday night and Monday.

Circuit Clerk James A. Duncan and County Attorney N. E. Kiddell were transacting business in Cincinnati, Tuesday.

Mrs. Eliza Rouse left Thursday morning for Covington, where she will spend the winter with her sister, Mrs. F. P. Walton.

Dudley Blyth and wife spent the latter part of last week in Petersburg, visiting Mrs. Blyth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Blyth.

A. B. Renaker and wife and W. D. Cropper and Miss Olga Kirkpatrick attended the theater in Cincinnati, last Saturday night.

Dr. Gordon McKim and his brother, Herbert McKim, all of Cincinnati, were guests at Atty. S. W. Tolin's, last Sunday afternoon.

H. J. Marshall, of Aurora, and A. W. Davis, of Prescott, Arizona, were guests of G. W. Sandford and wife at dinner, last Thursday.

Mrs. James A. Riddell, of Hebron neighborhood, was taken to a Cincinnati hospital, yesterday, where she will undergo an operation.

Misses Mary and Sallie Castman, of Erlanger, were the guests of Burlington friends the latter part of last week, the former being entertained by Miss Pauline Kelly and the latter, by Miss Laura Frances Riddell.

Mr. B. H. Fenton and his two sons, Bascom Fenton and wife and son, and Thomas Fenton and wife, all of the city, enjoyed a Thanksgiving dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Berkshre, last Thursday.

The gathering was very much on the order of a family reunion.

Col. Graddy came up from Petersburg, to spend Thanksgiving day with Burlington friends. The Colonel does not appear to be much disturbed by the recent political upheaval, and thinks it will take the Democrats some time to get down to so small a piece of pie as that which he is enjoying, in their distribution of pie among the faithful.

Wilber Rice, who departed this life November 6th at his home near Idlewild, was one of the county's most estimable citizens, whose quiet and retired life limited his number of acquaintances, but the estimable traits of character with which he was endowed endeared him to all embraced in that circle. His moral character could not be challenged and his industrious habits were unsurpassed, while his judgment touching business problems with which he was repeatedly confronted was unerring. At the death of his father, Morgan Rice, many years ago he became the recognized head of the family consisting of his mother and two brothers, Edward and Lot F., and with a heavy debt hanging over the farm on which they resided he labored incessantly, exercising his rare judgment, until he saw the debt discharged and the farm restored to a high state of cultivation. Under the most trying circumstances he was cool and deliberate and never acted until he was sure of his position and the family, having implicit confidence in him never for an instant questioned the advisability of pursuing the course mapped out by him. He was ever mindful of the interest of those around him and particular solicitous for the welfare and comfort of his aged mother, whose grief over his death is unconsoled. Wilber Rice's life from childhood was a model in every particular and his family will be proud of his memory and the position and the family, having implicit confidence in him never for an instant questioned the advisability of pursuing the course mapped out by him. He was ever mindful of the interest of those around him and particular solicitous for the welfare and comfort of his aged mother, whose grief over his death is unconsoled.

The short term of the Sixty-second Congress convened Monday with over a billion dollars in appropriations to dispose of. It is predicted that this will be one of the last short sessions of Congress, as many of the members agree with President-elect Wilson, that the short session should be abolished.

I take this means of thanking my many friends for their unceasing kindness shown me and their kind wishes during my illness and assure them that they have placed me under obligations that I will never be able to repay. I desire to so thank Rev. Edgar Riley for the very consoling funeral discourse that he delivered.

RUN-DOWN PEOPLE

Made Strong by Vinol. Run-down conditions are caused by overwork, worry, too close confinement, a chronic cough or cold which it is difficult to cure.

We want to say to every person in this condition—you need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, the great strength creator. It will supply iron to the blood in the most easily assimilated form, create a good, healthy appetite, strengthen your digestive organs and make you eat better sleep better and feel better.

A case has just come to our attention from West Scranton, Pa., Mrs. Chas. Proper says: "For three years I was all run down, weak and had no appetite, and after all that time I am glad to say Vinol has brought back my health and strength, which is just what I was told it would do." We are confident that Vinol is the best body-builder and strength-creator we have ever sold.

SHEEP RAISING.

Sheep suffer less from low temperature than any other class of live stock on the farm. The wool that is accreted from the skin of the sheep for the nourishment of the wool makes the skin of the animal rather insensitive to cold. A sheep with an excessively greasy coat, however, cannot withstand cold as well as one with a more moderately oily fleece. The wool on the sheep prevents the escape of animal heat from the body to some extent, and these conditions of skin and fleece make it necessary to house sheep warmly. In fact, sheep do better in moderate cold than when kept warm. Those that are being fattened will stand a considerable degree of cold.

The bad effects of too great warmth arise as follows: The moisture exhaled from the lungs of sheep confined in a close pen makes the fleece damp, and when the animals are turned out into the cold air they catch cold, resulting in catarrh or influenza, generally designated "snuffles" by sheep men. The sheep has a weak circulatory system and cannot stand any inflammatory disorders, and so speedily loses constitutional strength and vigor. The presence of this moisture in rooms where animals are kept may be easily seen in stone buildings where it congeals on the walls. If it is not condensed on the walls it goes into the fleeces of the sheep.

The natural desire for sheep to be outside is a good guide in respect to housing. But they should not be exposed to storms or drenching rains. It takes additional food to meet the expenditure of animal heat occasioned by exposure. The commonest argument in favor of protection against extreme cold is seen in the increased appetites of animals in cold weather. The combustion necessary to furnish animal heat in cold weather has to be supported by an increase of fuel in the form of food, particularly of carbonaceous food.

Sheep in confinement should be given as great freedom as possible, and no close or overwarm housing; but they should be protected against great exposure to cold winds or cold rains. To this end a shed should be provided that is free from draughts, and should open on to a roomy yard on its lee side. When the weather is suitable they should be fed outside as far as possible, particularly with respect to foders which engage a great deal of their time. Fodders should likewise be protected on their windward side.

The site of the sheep shed should be high and dry, so as to prevent the ground underneath from becoming damp. Sheep sheds are not generally cleaned during the season; but owing to the animals being fed usually on rough fodder, a great deal of which is unconsumed and trodden underneath, it will absorb all moisture secreted without fermenting, and the shed will remain practically dry throughout the winter.

While exercise and fresh air are at all times desirable, the shed should be so made as to be closed in cases of extreme cold, and should be close enough in the walls to be free from cross draughts or any chance of exposure.

Regularity in the handling of stock counts for much, and especially so with sheep. They are sensitive to every minute that passes after the usual feeding hour has arrived. They will announce its arrival by restlessness, which means wear on their system and loss of flesh. Therefore, the more regular and systematic we are in feeding, the less food it will take to keep them in good condition. The intervals should be so divided as to secure the full digestion of the food. At each time they should be fed no more grain than they can consume. Water, good pure, is, of course, an absolute necessity at all times, and the sheep will do better and relish their feed more if a little salt is sprinkled over the fodder portion of their ration.

Sheep require different feeding and handling from any other class of animals on the farm. Even though one may be an experienced sheep raiser, he should not get too ambitious and endeavor to manage a larger flock than he can keep up to the standard of excellence. A Few Good Trapping Hints.

Never set a new trap without having it rusted or stained.
Never set a trap without using gloves.
Never take your dog with you when you go to set your traps.
Never forget to visit your trap each day and as early in the morning as possible.
Never place any animal bait on the pan of your trap. Always place it on a stick or log near the trap.

Never cover your trap too heavily. Place a covering of straw or soil over the top as thickly possible.
Never disturb the ground around your trap any more than absolutely necessary, and put it back in as natural a condition as possible.
Never use deadfalls or figure-4 traps if you can secure steel traps. Steel traps are cheap and are by far the most successful.

It is said that the Government dam at Fernbank, on the Ohio river, is in a bad condition on the Kentucky side of the river, caused by the water cutting under the concrete work. How serious the damage is has not been ascertained yet.

JESUS IS GOD'S GIFT TO ALL HUMANITY

Salvation Is of God's Love, Not of Justice or Necessity.

Misunderstanding of What Constitutes the Divine Penalty For Sin Has Misled Us In Respect to Every Feature of God's Program For Our Recovery
From the Penalty.

Rochester, N. Y.,
Nov. 24. - Pastor
Russell of Brooklyn is here. We report one of his addresses from the text, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable Gift."
—II Corinthians
ix. 15.

The Pastor said that in order to appreciate the Scriptures on all subjects, we must handle the Word of God honestly. We must recognize that our Lord Jesus is one person and the Father another person. The oneness between the Father and the Son is that declared by our Master Himself, saying that He and the Father are one in the same sense that He desires all of His disciples to be one in mind, in purpose, in will, in effort. (John xvii.
21, 23.) Our Lord Jesus is God's unspeakable Gift.

The Scriptures declare that the Redeemer took the nature of men in order to redeem sinners; but that in Him there was no sin. Only a sinless one could give to God a Ransom for Adam, and thus redeem from destruction, not only Adam, but all his posterity, involved in sin and death through him.

The speaker then showed that God set before our Lord a great joy, the influence of which led Jesus to endure cheerfully the bitter experiences of His earthly life. This joy is intimately connected with the Father's will; (2) His privilege of "bringing many sons to glory"—the Church; (3) His pleasure and joy in being by and by the world's Redeemer, delivering them from the power of Satan, sin and death. "Wherefore," St. Paul says, "God hath highly exalted Him," far above "angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named."

An Opposite Course From Satan's.
Pastor Russell then contrasted the course pursued by Satan with that followed by our Lord. Meditating ambitious designs, Satan found an opportunity in Eden. He beheld in our first parents a new order of beings, designed to bring into existence a race that would fill the earth. Satan essayed to be ruler or prince over man's creation; and by so doing, he not only became a rebel against God, but brought sin and death into the world.

Our Lord Jesus pursued an opposite course, and demonstrated His loyalty and obedience. St. Paul intimates that although the Logos was much higher than was Lucifer, yet He was humble, and "meditated not a usurpation," as the Greek text declares. (Phil. ii.
6.) He thought not by robbery to be equal with God. On the contrary, our Lord willingly accepted the Divine proposal that He should be humbled to the human plane, for a time in order to carry out the Father's plan.

To the Church, Jesus is God's unspeakable Gift. He is indeed a Gift to the whole world, unspeakable in value, but He is more to the Church than to the world. To His footsteps followers. He is the "Captain of our Salvation," their Bridegroom, their "Elder Brother," their great High Priest. Through Him they are privileged to be the Royal Priesthood.
Through the merit of the sacrifice of Christ, they are privileged to "present their bodies living sacrifices, holy, acceptable unto God."

The Pastor then said that Justice is the foundation of God's Throne. In the past, endeavors to harmonize Justice with our great Creator's dealings with humanity have involved us in difficulty. We were assured that the prominent creeds that God had knowingly brought, mankind into existence under such conditions that the great majority would spend eternity in torture. We perceived no Justice in any such arrangement. But while desisting from criticising the Creator, we could not indorse such a course, nor see it to be in harmony with the Divine regulations governing ourselves.
If we are to love our enemies, should more be expected of fallen human beings than of our perfect Creator?

The Scriptures declare only the consecrated Church see the "lengths, breadths, heights and depths of the Love of God," which passeth understanding. "This class alone is in any sense prepared to give thanks to God now for His unspeakable Gift. Their thanks go up, not only in words, but also in actions, which "speak louder than words." These thanks ascend as sweet incense to God.

By and by, "All the blind eyes will be opened, and all the deaf ears will be unstopped." Then the whole world of mankind, including those awakened from the sleep of death during Mes-siah's reign, will be in condition to recognize God's unspeakable Gift and render thanks. When wilful evil doers shall have been destroyed, then every creature in Heaven, on earth and in the sea shall be heard saying, "Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth on the Throne, and to the Lamb forever," through the unspeakable Gift.

Bob-White.

So much can be said about the value of this little quail to the farmer! Bob-white has an esthetic as well as pecuniary value to the farmer. Of the latter, his services to the husbandman run well up into several dollars per bird per year. We might say that each quail earns a dollar a week throughout the year for the farmer. All they ask in return is to be protected.

Does it not make you feel glad in mind when you hear, loud and clear,
"bob-bob-white?"

Have you ever thought of the valuable service bob-white renders you for the privilege of your land for his home? Bob-whites destroy bushels and bushels of noxious insects of various kinds all summer. They feed on boll-weevils, grasshoppers, cotton (boll-weevils, beetles, potato bugs, locusts, and long list of other insects. During the late fall, winter and early spring they feed upon waste grain and weed seeds such as they find upon the fields.
Here, to, then, they save the farmer much labor.—Ex.

Mrs. Mollie Ford has returned home from a very pleasant visit of two weeks to her son, Claude E. Ford and family at Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Veach and little son, Charles, of Kenton county, spent Sunday here with his parents, R. S. Veach and wife.

Robert W. Jones spent part of the week in Cincinnati on business, and during his absence Dr. C. C. Metcalfe superintended the drug store.

Mrs. T. C. Coleman and daughter Elizabeth, of Woodlake, Fayette county, spent part of last week here, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. F. Curley.

J. D. Renaker, of Dry Ridge, spent Friday here with his kinsman, J. D. Doubman, who has been very ill but is now improving slowly.

W. O. Richey has been confined to his home several days the past week with the grip, and was unable to fill his position in Cincinnati as carpenter until this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Williams and family have moved from their farm near Verona to the property recently purchased from S. C. Hicks, and they are gladly welcomed to Walton.

Mrs. W. N. Hind, of Covington, spent a part of last week here with relatives and friends, coming out in her automobile. Her niece, Miss Mattie Hudson, accompanied her home and spent the week as her guest.

McClure Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, conferred the Mark Master degree last Friday night, on Carl Neumeister and Ira Stephens, of Kenton county, and on Wednesday night gave them the past and Most Excellent degrees.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church will give a festival on the evening of Dec. 27th. Regular dinner, 35 cents, ice cream and cake, 15 cents. They will be ready to serve at five o'clock. All are cordially invited.

David Haley, who has been at Frankfort making a delivery of nursery stock came home last week to spend a few days with his family. He had a very large business the past season and his deliveries were the largest he has ever made.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Elliston, of Williamstown, and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Elliston, of Elliston Station, were visitors here Saturday, the latter being on their way home from a visit to the former at Williamstown who brought the visitors this far in their automobile.

The Thanksgiving services at the Methodist church were very enjoyable because of the excellent sermon delivered by Rev. W. D. Evans of the Presbyterian church. The pastor Rev. R. B. Baird, assisted in the exercises and the entire program was very much enjoyed by all in attendance.

The protracted meeting at the Beaver Lick Baptist church closed Sunday night with 22 additions to the church. The meeting was conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. Kirtley Johnson and Rev. L. M. Theobald of Louisville, who presented the gospel truths in a very convincing and entertaining manner.

Those interested in the Carpenter cemetery at Richmond met Saturday, to sell the old fencing and posts and receive the new one just completed. G. B. Powers, Covington, was the contractor.

This is one of the largest jobs of iron fencing ever sold in this section. Mr. Powers wishes to thank all those interested for their patronage and prompt settlement.

Judge J. G. Tomlin spent most of the week in Cincinnati attending the National Good Roads Congress held there in the Music Hall, and he states the sessions are most interesting and instructive, and it would be very profitable if most of the people residing in the country would attend and become imbued with the enterprising spirit of good road building.

Experts and practical people from every part of the United States are in attendance and every session has a feature of interest. The convention will be in session all this week.

Married—Harley Baker and Miss Jessie Carroll were united in marriage at Newport on Thanksgiving. The pretty bride is the daughter of Hon. G. E. Carroll, Boone county's Representative in the last legislature, and she is the teacher of the public school at Kensington. The groom is the son of Clay Baker and has made Walton his home for a long time. Both are very popular and deserving young people, and their many friends wish them a long, happy and prosperous future. They will make their home for the present at Walton.

Jno. L. Vest attended circuit court at Covington Monday, and the case of various parties against T. J. Crowe on the question of the control and ownership of a turnpike in Kenton county near Walton was decided in Judge Crowe's favor. Mr. Vest was the attorney for Mr. Crowe. The Burley Tobacco Co. suit in which Mr. Vest and J. G. Tomlin are attorneys for the stockholders has been very favorably adjusted in part for the stockholders, and on the other question will go to the Court of Appeals, though the present officers of the company concede that an election of a board of directors by the stockholders would be right and proper and steps along this line will be taken at an early moment.

E. L. Lambreth, of Liverpool, England, known as "Oklahoma Ed" passed through here Friday on a globe trotting bet with a syndicate of gamblers for a purse of $50,000. The walk is to cover 175,000 miles and was started on Jan. 1st, 1900, and is to be completed by July 4th, 1915. He is now 7,000 miles ahead of his schedule, having completed 75,000 miles of his journey. He has worn out 472 pairs of shoes so far.

Lambreth secures the signatures of the postmasters in the prominent towns as well as the mayors and chief officers, and the rulers of countries outside of the United States. He has 9,000 signatures and addresses and 200,000 letters, and 132,000 postoffice cancellations. He is accompanied by a dog he calls "Casey Jones," and has a partner on his long tramp in the person of Otto Horst of Germany, who branched off at Cincinnati, going to Chicago, but they expect to meet at Memphis. Lambreth is as brown as an Indian, and his limbs are as solid as iron. He went from here to Frankfort and thence to Louisville, and he says he is aided in his journey by the Elks and Masons though he did not claim to be a member of those fraternities.

Four or five autos a day from the city is no unusual sight now in Burlington.

Gov.-elect Cox, of Ohio, has declared himself opposed to spike-tail coat inaugural balls.

F. W. Kasabaum, of Aurora, was in Burlington, yesterday, in the interest of his marble yard.

Miss Nellie Kirkpatrick, head operator at the local telephone exchange, says the business at the local exchange has about doubled in the last year. This is good news for the stockholders, who would like to see a dividend coming their way.

HEBRON.

Leonard Criger was stricken with paralysis Saturday morning. Mrs. Emmet Kilgore and children, of Taylorsport, were guests of her parents Saturday and Sunday.

Chas. Goodridge and family, of Glendale, Ohio, were guests of R. Garnett and family Friday, and attended the ball.

Rev. Wallace, of Springfield, O., will preach a trial sermon at Hebron next Sunday at 10:30. All the members are requested to be present.

The ball and supper given by the Odd-Fellows in their new hall was a great success. A very large crowd was present, and about $100 was collected.

PETERSBURG.

Dickey McWethy is improving slowly.

Wingate & Thompson have received considerable tobacco.

Tobacco growers were busy Friday and Saturday bulking and stripping.

W. C. Henley and daughter, of Ashby Fork, are now citizens of Petersburg.

Stanley Crouch, of Erlanger, was down Friday, in his freight automobile with fencing wire.

Smith McWethy and wife, of Lawrenceburg, visited relatives in Petersburg Saturday and Sunday.

Wm. Henley and son, Paul, and Harry Drake-left Sunday, for Louisville, to take a position in distillery.

John M. Botts, John Geisler and Frank Smith will have the new gasoline ferry boat completed in a few days.

D. M. Snyder, of Erlanger, spent several days last week with his sister-in-law and daughter, Mrs. Orlando Snyder.

The ladies of the Christian church have purchased linoleum to cover the floor under and around the stove.

Tom Happer, who went to a hospital in Louisville, last week to be operated on returned home Saturday much improved.

GUNPOWDER.

L. H. Busby went to Erlanger on business, last Saturday.

W. P. Beemon shipped a lot of nice hogs for market last week.

Mrs. Martha Bradley and Miss Beattie Thibet were guests of Mrs. Day, last Friday.

Mrs. Willa Hartman, of Devon, visited her parents, J. H. Ayler and wife, last Saturday.

Mrs. Otis Rouse visited friends in Cincinnati last Saturday and returned home Sunday evening.

Mrs. Chas. Markberry delivered several dressed hogs at Ludlow at 10 cents per pound, last Tuesday.

This scribe and wife spent last Sunday at the hospitable home of L. M. Rouse and wife in Union neighborhood.

Chas. Clarkson delivered his crop of tobacco to Covington parties last Friday and received nine cents per pound for it all round.

Rev. William Wallace, of Springfield, Ohio, will visit the Boone County Church next Sunday and preach at Hebron at 10:30 a. m.; at Hopeful at 2 p. m.; at Ebenezer at 4 p. m.

Joe Scott and brother, Lewis, two hustlers from way back, made a raid on this writer's corn field one day last week and shucked several shocks of corn unbeknown to the writer. Many thanks, boys, and there will be no trouble over the matter for the Ridgeway farm is not posted against trespass of that kind.

UNION.

Dr. Crouch and Geo. Stephenson are still enthusiastic fishermen, and they catch 'em, too.

Spencer Smith met us where the flowers that bloom in December have nothing to do with the snow. Prof. and Mrs. Voshell are willing and anxious to be clever and all that, but think they only did their plain duty in caring for that wail.

Dr. Senour assisted in an operation on a typhoid patient in a hospital at Newport recently. The patient is recovering and the only case south of Ohio river to do so.

Geo. Fallilove, the affable toll gatherer greeted us with kindness and gave our mind an entirely new thought about starting the second 50 years of a man's life. Let him tell you.

Col. Butler, of Erlanger, came with his auto bus and took a delegation of 14 masons from Union lodge to a meeting held in Covington on Saturday night of last week. Fine time reported.

Messrs. J. W. Kennedy, J. L. Frazier, W. M. Rachal, B. L. Norman, Frank Smith, Thos. Burkhitt, James Ristow and Senator Platt, are doing their best to make Union a point of interest to all people that are hunting business. Oh what a shame! I've got to go. Good-bye.

If spring comes in 1913 at the proper time this will not be a long winter.

Arthur Pitcher and daughter, of Lawrenceburg, were down last week. The score stands 5 and 3. Miss Georgia, who is teaching at East Bend school.

No preaching at the Methodist church in East Bend last Sunday on the account of Bro. Nelson having a funeral discourse to deliver at Petersburg.

Everyone seems pleased with our accommodating rural carrier, and as Christmas will soon be here we are anxious to get Sunday many will remember his kindness with some small token of Christmas cheer.

We are having too much personal trouble in this neighborhood. If people would stop thinking about evil things, stop reporting them one to another stop encouraging others to listen to these reports, how much better off the community would be.

The world series is not in it with the series now going on at Riddell's store between Stephens and Nelson on one side and Riddell and Wilson on the other. Excitement is now at the highest.

N. 383; R. and W. 378. The race is who will get to 1,000 first.

A. W. Smith returned home here last week after a very pleasant visit of two weeks to his daughter Mrs. Berry Noel at Sanford, Florida, and has resumed his position at the prescription desk in the drug store of Robert W. Jones.

Scott Chambers has added to his undertaking business an automobile which will enable him to reach any part of Boone county in less than two hours time, and as he is a Boone county boy he solicits the patronage of the people.

Walton Lodge, No. 719, F. and A. M., conferred the fellow craft degree on A. S. Frye, of Richmond, at the annual meeting, Friday night.

The annual election of officers will be held Friday evening, Dec. 27th, and all of the members are requested to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Hopkins leave next week for a visit to friends at Meridian, Mississippi, where they will be the guest of Frank Maxwell and wife, and will also spend a part of their visit at New Orleans, and expect to remain in sunny southland until after the holidays.

Mrs. D. H. Smith, of Covington, spent a part of last week here with relatives and friends, and while here sold her Walton house and lot for $1,500, and expects to be given by Jan. 1st. Jesse E. Franks and wife, occupying the property and expect to move to Latonia.

John M. Crowe of Covington, spent part of the past week here with his parents Judge and Mrs. T. J. Crowe. He has been suffering from a badly sprained foot, but is now able to get about by a misstep in a bath room at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, a few weeks ago, and the injury has been getting him unable to enter.

Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Hopkins entertained a number of their many friends Sunday in honor of their thirty-second marriage anniversary, and were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevens who were celebrating their eighth anniversary. A fine dinner was spread for the occasion and a very happy day was spent. The friends who were present were Mr. and Mrs. James Powers, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Harris, and 5 Munheld.

The birthday party given by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Powers last Friday evening in honor of their daughter Miss Grace Truman Powers, was a most enjoyable affair and attended by about forty of her playmates. Her teacher Miss Helen Lee Dickey was the guest of honor. Others attending were Mrs. Ed. Hristov, Mrs. Julia Rouse, Mrs. B. F. Stanfield, and 5 o'clock light refreshments were served consisting of grape juice, cake and fruit. Miss Grace was the recipient of about forty presents as a token of the esteem with which she is held by her friends, who were delighted with the feature.

The discussion of the issues between the County Commissioners of Kenton county, and T. J. Crowe over the tax on the land under his control, has developed so much public interest that a mass meeting is to be held at the store of B. F. Stanfield at Bracht Station, Saturday, December 14th, at 2 p. m., when the principal parties are to be present and endeavor to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the matter, and everybody is respectfully requested to attend if they have any interest in the matter. There is one thing that appeals to every fairminded person and that is, that Judge Crowe should be paid for the turpicks for the work he has put on it, and it should then be made a free road.

Walton Lodge K. of P. had a very pleasant meeting at their castle hall last Thursday evening, when the regular semi-annual election of officers was held, the following being elected for the ensuing six months: Chancellor, Commander, Carl Neumann; Vice-Chancellor, Everett Smoot; Prelate, Thos. Curley; Master at Arms, Wm. C. Moxley; Keeper of Records and Seal, S. L. Edwards; Master Eminent, W. O. Rouse; Quill Guard, J. M. McElroy; Inside Guard, S. W. Beavary; Trustees, D. E. Wallace, T. F. Curley, W. E. Dixon. After the election a collation consisting of oyster soup, celery, coffee, etc., was served by Bro. John M. Stamler, following which there were a number of pleasant speeches by the members of the order. There were a number of visitors present, and the evening was a greatly enjoyed by all.

Chas. H. H. Williams, of Mace Tanner and Joseph Kells of Williamstown.

Last week, two young men, giving their names as Frank and Geo. Wabash county, Indiana, and Walter Buchell of Toronto House, Bishopstoke, England, engaged board at the residence of Mr. J. M. Conner, and after remaining several days left for Lexington, and with them disappeared a lot of Mrs. Conner's property, consisting of sheets, underwear, gold watch, silver spoons, a pistol belonging to her husband and several other articles. On the eve of their departure they left her son, Thos. Griffin, and stated that they had been sent to him by Geo. P. Nicholson with the request to give them $750 and Mr. Nicholson would tell him when he came down from home, as he had no money at his residence with which to pay the men for some money he had bought from them. Mr. Griffin gave them the money and Mr. Nicholson was astonished when the request was made from Mr. Griffin to give him back his money, as he did not know anything about the men and had no transaction whatever with them. The two men pretended to be very religious and were selling mottoes, "God Bless Our Home," and others of a similar nature. No trace was secured of the rascals after their departure.

Wm. T. Worthington, of Rouleau, Saskatchewan, Canada, spent a day here last week with friends. He and his brothers have been in the great northwest Canadian territory for the past four years and are very much pleased with the country and its prospects. While in the territory there yet the uniformity of the temperature does not make the extreme cold felt as it is in a changeable climate. It is nothing unusual for the winter weather to be cold as sixty below zero. The early frozes caught much of the grain crop this year, and the prices for all the crops raised in that quarter have been quite low this year. Flax is selling at $1.10 per bushel as compared with $1.50 two years ago; and oats 25 cents as compared with 35 cents two years ago, and even wheat is selling low. The price of land has continued to advance under the influence of the great influx of people into that country, and while the land is selling very high considering all of the conditions yet an increase in value is to be expected. The Worthington brothers sold their land consisting of about a section, 640 acres, at $50.00 per acre, and are investing in a new country where the land is not so high. They are still very much attached to their adopted home and expect to remain there.

There was a delightful gathering of relatives and friends at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Northcutt in Kenton county last Wednesday to do honor to the fortieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Northcutt. The party was a most enjoyable one for all and the pleasant memories of this happy event will long be fragrant to all who had the privilege of being present. The charming bride of 40 years ago when she as Miss Dora Stephenson took this worthy gentleman L. C. Northcutt as her life partner, was as attractive as their fortieth anniversary by her lovable disposition and kindly manner, and her companion of these many years was the same genial, kindly gentleman as in the years of long ago. A magnificent feast was spread and it was most heartily enjoyed by all. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Northcutt, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Northcutt, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Stephenson, Joseph Kaub, Mrs. Eliza Bean, Mrs. and Mrs. Geo. Flynn, Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Hume, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Hume, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Martin, Misses Mayme Northcutt, Bertha Northcutt, Edna Stephenson, Inez, Irene, Edith and Stella Northcutt, Dorothy Northcutt, John and Thos. Stephenson, Thos. Northcutt, Nolan Flynn and Edgar Martin. The sun was shining over the western hills when the guests bid Mr. and Mrs. Northcutt goodbye with wishes for many more such happy anniversaries.

SCHOOL NOTES.

A letter just received from Mr. Dix accepting a challenge for a debate insures a word battle between the Walton and Burlington schools about Feb. 15th. Walton is to choose the subject and submit the question and Burlington to choose the side they desire for the school. The teachers made a property bid Mr. and Mrs. to assume half the obligation and it is incumbent on them to raise this amount. This will be the goal towards which they aim during the rest of the term. The school board decided that the teachers must make up any time taken for a holiday more than Christmas and New Year's day.

Several of the bank statements were not received at this office in time to be put in type for this week so it was decided to carry them all over until next week, when they will appear.

Woodford Arnold, who went from this county to Missouri many years ago died at his home there last week and the remains were brought here by his brother, W. B. Arnold, and interred in the family lot in the cemetery at Bullittsburg church.

The Recorder is sorry to say that it could not meet the vast demand on it for advertising space this week. It yielded the last inch possible to its advertisers, and much copy reached the office entirely too late to be handled. A country office cannot get out a supplement on a few hours' notice.

Circuit Court.

The December term of the Boone Circuit Court convened last Monday, with Judge Cammack presiding, and Circuit Clerk Alvin Steiger, of Owen county on hand to keep the record, while Commonwealth's Atty. M. L. Downes, of Carrollton, was at his post to look after the interest of the State. Judge Cammack started the wheels of justice about 8:30 a. m. and has kept them in motion ever since. The grand and petit juries were organized the first day and are composed of the following gentlemen:

Grand Jury—Robt. W. Rice, Edward Baker, Irvin Rue, Clyde Berkshire, James Snyder, J. L. Kite, J. H. Moody, Cad Sullivan, Lawrence Pope, Jas White, Owen Allen, R. L. Brown.
No. 1—J. G. Jones, Tom Clore, John Eggleston, B. V. Randall, B. T. Kelly, Marion Scott, T. B. Roberts, J. L. Jones, Geo. Bradford, Lewis Clegg, Volney Easton, B. A. Floyd.
No. 2—J. J. Duncan, Robt. Allen, Geo. Kreylich, Chas. Utzinger, R. J. Akin, Nat Rogers, Butler Carpenter, Thos House, John E. Ayer, Lawrence Chambers, Edgar Berkshire, Lou Miller.
The petit jurors were excused Tuesday until Thursday.
The prosecutions against Dr. E. C. Tilley and Mrs. Licher for the shooting and wounding of Mrs. Licher's husband in Petersburg several months ago were continued on account of the absence of some of the witnesses for the Commonwealth, they having gone beyond the jurisdiction of the court.

Since the above was put in type a demurrer to the indictment by Mrs. Licher has been sustained and the indictment resubmitted to the grand jury.

The grand jury has been pretty busy so far, and several parties are on the anxious seat.

The trial of Littrell for the killing of Wilson near Verona several months ago is set for today, Thursday.

James A. Duncan resigned as Master Commissioner and Caddie Maurer, of Bellevue, was appointed in his stead. At the first of the year Mr. Duncan will resign as Circuit Clerk and Mr. Mader will then be appointed in his place.

Miss Martha Nesbeth, of Williamstown, is official court stenographer.
Court will probably adjourn next Saturday.

Stanley Eddins is carrying the mail on route No. 3 for Mr. Conley whose time will expire on the 15th inst., when there will be some one designated as regular carrier, but whom the next carrier will be is not known.

Letter From Nicaragua.

Granada, Nicaragua,
Oct. 18, 1912.

Dear Father--Received your letter today of the 10th. I have written you three times from here, but things have been so bad that I do not know if I left here or not. I have been getting mail O. K. Received a letter and two Times-Stars from Lillie, also a picture of the whole family.

Well, father, will tell of a little trouble we have been having. We left Managua on the 15th of September for here, Granada. When we were 35 miles out of Managua at a place called Masaya we were fired on by the rebels with a three inch gun. The first shell hit about fifty yards in front of the cars. We stopped them and before we could back up the second shell burst a little to our right, and then we backed up out of range and the Major Butler went in under a flag of truce to see the rebel general and we said that he could not see our flag and he thought we were Federal troops when he fired.

Well the train had to pass between two hills and it was like going between two hills as large as the one back of West Covington, so you see it was almost impossible to get a train through. Major said that if the rebels would let the train pass he would not bother them but they refused so we gave them twenty-four hours to let us pass or we would blow them off the hill and we sent back to Managua for three three-inch guns and 500 men. On Thursday morning we prepared for battle. At two o'clock in the morning we started for the hill, and dug trenches and prepared to open fire at six o'clock. At one minute to six the white flag went up and they said we could go through. We were all pretty sore for we had been laying for four days half starved and we were all raving mad for revenge. At 7:15 p. m. we started for Granada. It was dark and a big storm was coming. We were tired, hungry and sleepy when we got in the city of Masaya the dirty, black devils were laying in ambush for us and opened fire. The first shot hit one of the boys and then hell started. For thirty minutes it was one solid streak of fire. When we got out of town we found that we had two boys missing but they returned before morning. We stopped two miles from town, and all wanted to go back and take the towns off the map, but the Major would not let us. The next morning we found we had four men wounded but we had killed 683, and wounded 34.

We went on to Granada when we got in four miles of the town the rebel general sent us word that if we come in town they would open fire on us. The Major just give him 12 hours to let him in or he would blow the town off the map, and they came out to meet us to tell us to come in. We went in on Sunday 1912, just seven days after we left Managua, and had been under fire three times. We started to disarm the rebels in Granada, and were four days disarming 1700 men and we thought we were going to get rest, but got orders to take the hill. We knew we had our hands full as the hill was as large as the hill back of West Covington and covered with twisted wire entanglement. We started on the 2nd of October, and on the third we opened fire with a three-inch gun. We bombarded for eight hours and done very little damage. When the Major said we would have to charge the hill. We were then 300 yards from it, and at 2:30 p. m. we started for the hill and at day break we charged it. Father, I have heard people talk about being under fire and how they felt but I tell you just how I felt. I was pretty nervous--it was enough to make anybody shaky with the black rascals waiting to shoot us down. We opened fire at 500 yards and they responded. I fired the first shot, and settled down and did not mind it so badly. We kept going up the hill and had cut the wire with our bayonets. I saw three boys fall within 10 yards of me. We were in 30 yards of the top when one of the boys was shot through the hat. He said, "pretty good shot, Underhill." That was the last words he said for the next minute his head was tore off with a pound shell. When we got to the top of the hill they broke to run. We killed 48 and wounded 73 and the rest ran off the hill. We took the hill in just 38 minutes, and then captured the town. Between 400 and 500 were killed, in the whole battle. We had four killed and eight wounded. I tell you it is not nice to have some one shooting at you. They can shoot pretty good, believe me. The next battle was at Leon a place 80 miles from here. They asked the rebels to surrender and they shot one sailor and cut him up in small pieces--even cut his heart out and cut it into small pieces. The officers ordered us to open up on anything we saw and it took two hours to get us stopped firing. We shot and cut over 700 men, women and children. They were all the same.

Things have been pretty quiet for a few days, and we hope to go back to Panama in a few weeks. I have had it pretty tough but would not miss seeing what I have seen for twenty years of my life. It may be the only time I will be in action during the four years.

Major Butler got a telegram from Washington complimenting us for our bravery and his sympathy for those who were killed and wounded. We have lost 12 killed and 30 wounded. The trouble is over I guess.

When you answer send mail to Panama and I will get it. Give my regards to all and tell them I am well and happy and enjoying life for I have seen real service. Send this to Uncle Wesley when you get through reading it and tell him I will write to him soon. Love to all goodbye.

I remain your son,
Lloyd S. Underhill.

SYMPTOMS OF CONSUMPTION

Yield to Vinol.

The medical profession do not believe that consumption is inherited, but a person may inherit a weakness or tendency to that disease.

A prominent citizen of Evansville, Ind., writes: "I was ill for five months with pulmonary trouble, and had the best of doctors; I had hemorrhages, and was in a very bad way. Through the advice of a friend I tried Vinol, and I feel that it saved my life. It is all you recommend, it to be. I believe it is the greatest medicine on earth. I have advised others to try Vinol, and they have had the same results." (Name furnished on request.)

Vinol soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces and allays the cough. Vinol creates an appetite, strengthens the digestive organs and gives the patient strength to throw off incipient pulmonary disease.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

HOW, WHEN AND WHY A SECOND ADVENT

Denver Divines on Right Track,
Says Pastor Russell.

No World-Burning-Satan to Be Bound-Sin, Sickness and Death to Be Conquered-Man to Be Delivered.
The Power Vested in Messiah-His Kingdom Near-How It Will Appear.

Denver, Dec. 1.—This city is stirred. Seventeen pastors of all denominations have been discussing the Second Advent for a month. Now comes Pastor Russell telling us all that "the Earth abideth forever"—that it will never be destroyed by literal fire. According to him the great event of Christ's Coming will bring blessings such as we all desire. He seems to have the Bible and logic on his side too.

Pastor Russell declared that false concepts of the Second Coming of Christ had done great injury. The view set forth in all orthodox creeds is that Christ will come again in the flesh. The resurrection will take place within twenty-four hours. The saints will rise in the air to meet the Lord. Then fire will come down from heaven, and consume the whole earth. Premillennialists claim that Christ will reign in fleshly glory a thousand years to bless the living. The majority of Christians disown this as ridiculous nonsense because they believe in the creed or Bible. A minority perceive its inconsistency with the Bible.

What Bible Students Now See.
The "fire of that day" is symbolical, already kindling in society, the elements of which, Capital and Labor are getting hotter. Soon they will melt, the symbolical "earth" will be consumed with the "heavens" also, the ecclesiastical powers. Then, passing away will usher in a "new earth," or social order, and "new heavens," the Church in glory.

The Second Coming of Christ is associated with blessings. Messiah will abolish the curse and bring in wonderful blessings. The Day of Christ will be "the last day," the great Seventh Thousand-year Day. All humanity will be blessed, including the dead who will then be awakened.

Christ Comes to Reign.
As the redemption was necessary for man's salvation so Messiah's Kingdom is necessary to accomplish restitution. The delay of more than eighteen centuries is Scripturally explained: (1) God designed Six Great Ones, Thousand Year Days to reward the exceeding sinfulness of sin. He purposed that on the Seventh Day the blessing of Messiah should come. (2) An important work has been done since Calvary. An Elect Church has been gathered out of all nations—saints made perfect through suffering, a Little Flock, the "Church of the First-born." These are to become the Bride of Christ at His Second Advent. The Second Coming of Jesus is to claim His Bride class, and to exalt them. As regards the world, He comes to bind Satan, to overthrow sin, and to uplift fallen humanity. St. Peter tells that Restitution work, not a literal burning of the world, awaits the Second Coming of Jesus: "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord."—Acts III, 19-21.

Christ's Kingdom to Be Spiritual.
One great mistake we have all made is in not noticing that Jesus was human for only thirty-three and a half years. He was a glorious spirit being before He was made flesh, and He was resurrected to a spirit condition—higher than His original one. How foolish we were to think of Jesus as a man (a little lower than angels) in the midst of the Heavenly host. He is now partaker of the Divine nature; His Church is to be "changed" and made "like Him." As His disciples were from a higher to a lower, so His ascent was from a lower nature to a higher, "far above angels." His is the exceeding glory which "no man hath seen nor can see"—"which no man can approach unto."

It is this glorious Being whose Kingdom is about to be established. Him and His Church will be as invisible to men as are Satan and the fallen angels. The appearances of Jesus in the flesh after His resurrection were materializations, to prove: (1) that Jesus was no longer dead; (2) that He was changed, born of the Spirit, able to go and come like the wind.

Parousia, Epiphania, Apokalupsis.
Messiah's Kingdom will have earthly representatives—the faithful saints of previous ages, raised to human perfection instantly. Through these the invisible Messianic Kingdom will operate. Jesus said, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the prophets in the Kingdom."

The parousia of Jesus will come first—present but invisible. The world will continue with the ordinary affairs of life (while He is gathering the Church), as in the days of Noah.

After the gathering of the Church, there will be an epiphania and an apokalupsis of Jesus. He will shine forth. He will be revealed—not in flesh, but "in flaming fire," the trouble of that Day, in which the present order will be consumed in anarchy, giving place to the Kingdom Dispensation.

A Farmer on Tobacco.

At the Farmers' Institute in Henderson county a few days ago one of the farmers made a vigorous address in favor of "cutting out" tobacco growing, which, he said, was doing more to retard education and create illiteracy in the State than any other one agency.

This speaker asserted his belief that the time was coming when the tobacco barns in Henderson and other counties in the State would be turned into stock barns. Farmers, he said, were waking up to the fact that Kentucky could produce "finer fruit" than any other State in the Union. The man, he added, who now purchased a small farm and planted the entire acreage in fruit trees was no longer regarded as insane by other farmers, as was formerly the case. In concluding the speaker urged the people of Henderson county to raise more fruit, hogs and cattle and less tobacco.

Possibly this farmer may be a little extreme in his opposition to what most Kentucky farmers regard as the chief "money crop" of the State. It cannot be disputed, however, that much of his advice is good and that thousands of Kentucky farmers would be better off if they followed it. Too many of them make tobacco their paramount crop and sacrifice quality in order to produce "the weed" in quantity. Many of these would profit themselves by reducing their acreage of tobacco and giving more time to other products of the farm which now receive scant attention. We do not grow enough fruit in Kentucky and there is room for great expansion of the livestock industry. Then, too, there are various agricultural products worth cultivating as a side line which are ignored on the great majority of Kentucky farms.—C.J.

Why Eggs Will Be High.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside an authority on eggs writes:

"When the poor hatches came off last spring, many poultrymen decided to give up raising any great amount of stock this season and buy pullets later. This idea was so general among both fancy and utility breeders that the outcome seems to be a general shortage of stock all over the country. To make the matter more serious, feed prices began rising early in the summer, and farmers and poultrymen in general from all sections of the country began selling all surplus old stock. Thousands of car-loads were shipped to our cities, and still the prices kept up higher than usual for poultry of all grades.

"As a result from this exodus of poultry the supply is much lower than usual this fall, and the outlook now is favorable for higher prices than last year for both poultry and eggs. Few of our larger egg and poultry centers are now receiving more than enough for daily consumption and our exports this year will be smaller than last, without doubt." New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg and other leading poultry and egg markets have had considerable trouble in securing enough of the best grades to supply their demand, even though larger prices than usual have been paid for over three weeks now. Eastern cities have been buying western eggs at the highest prices known for this time of the year to help out. The second week of September New York City was buying western eggs at 25 cents and 28 cents per dozen, rose count. This is as high as State and near-by eggs usually bring in New York, and the market for fresh hen eggs went from 28 cents to 36 cents in less than ten days."

Georgetown comes to the front with the report of taxpayer, William Abbott, aged 93, paid his taxes last Saturday, and has a record of having never failed to ride eighteen miles each way every year to discharge his obligation to his country. Many of the species would ride eighteen hundred to escape.—Paducah Sun

An old newspaper held in Middleboro, being advised we were to start a daily, said I took nerve and brains. He gives us credit for having the "nerve," but he does not know about the "brains."—Middleboro Sticks.

Neighborhood News.

PETERSBURG.
(R. D. 1.)
Harry Walton was the last to kill hogs in his neighborhood. There was a large crowd at Perry Bruce's sale last Thursday. Mrs. John Eggleston, who has been sick, is able to be out again. Miss Alice Howze spent several days at Petersburg visiting her aunts.
Doc. Howze sold some fat hogs to Ben Berkshire for 7 cents per pound.
Doll Allen is hauling corn from John Eggleston's. He bought 200 bushels.
Miss Edna Berkshire is visiting her sister, Mrs. Harry Walton, near Gasburg.
VERONA.
Rev. A. K. Johnson and wife, of Walton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Powers last Monday. The Baptist Sunday school will give a Christmas tree Christmas eve, at New Bethel church.
Wm. Farrell had the misfortune to lose his dwelling house by fire last Saturday morning about eight o'clock. He saved a part of his furniture.
John Washum and Ernest Porter each sold their crops of tobacco at 13 1/2 cents per pound from the ground up. J. E. Young being the purchaser.
Rev. Edgar Riley, Superintendent of schools, was here a few days ago and delivered a lecture in regard to education and showed views of school buildings in different parts of the State, by means of a magic lantern.
GUNPOWDER.
N. C. Tanner has about recovered from a severe case of rheumatism.
Rev. Wallace, of Springfield, O., filled the appointments as previously announced, and preached to large and attentive congregations.
Enoch Rouse sold a portion of his farm to his son, Wallace, last week, it being the home occupied for several years by A. D. Rouse. Price $600 for six acres.
Wilton Adams surprised his numerous friends on Thursday of last week, by going to Newport and marrying a Miss Davylinvire. They spent the Saturday until Tuesday with his mother, Mrs. Perry Weaver, leaving Tuesday for an extended tour thru the State. They have a host of friends who wish them a long and happy life.

PETERSBURG.
Miss Lella Thompson made a shopping trip to Tuesday. Miss Katie Black, of Hartford, Ind., visited relatives here last week.
Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Arnold, of near Bellevue, visited at Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wendell's, Sunday.
Miss Elvora Crues, of Aurora, was a recent guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crues, Ira Carpenter, of Cincinnati, visited his aunts Misses Belle and Louisa Howze here last week. The Juniors will give their annual entertainment at Xmas eve, Dec. 24th, at Krutz's Hall. Everybody come.
A protracted meeting will begin at the Christian church here Dec. 27th. Rev. Lawson and Rev. Riley to be the ministers.
Mrs. Jule Hoffman and daughters returned Sunday, after a few days visit in the country with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hensley.
Mr. and Mrs. Lee Jones, of Rising Sun, visited at Mr. and Mrs. Richard Acers, Sunday. They came up to attend the funeral of a sister-in-law, Mrs. Bailey.
The funeral of a Mrs. Bailey, of Delhi, Ohio, was held at the M. E. church here Sunday afternoon, after which the remains were interred in the cemetery below town. She formerly resided in Boone county.
Mr. George H. Howze aged 81 years died at his home here Friday, Dec. 6th, 1912. Mr. Howze had been a member of the Masonic order for more than fifty years. He was a member of the M. E. church at Antioch, Ohio county, Ind., where the funeral was held Sunday Dec. 8th, by Rev. J. R. Nelson. Mr. Howze was born and reared in Ohio county, Ind., but has lived in Kentucky for many years. He leaves a son, three daughters and a number of grandchildren to mourn his loss. "Daddy," as he was familiarly called, will be sadly missed as he was greatly liked by all who knew him. His body was placed to rest beside that of his wife, who died sixteen years ago. The community in general extended heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones.
RABBIT HASH.
An entertainment will be given at the K. of P. Hall at Rabbit Hash on Thursday Dec. 26, 1912, under the auspices of Mrs. M. E. Stephens for the benefit of a library at Maple Hill school. Music will be furnished by the Rising Sun orchestra. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. Admission—Adults 15c; Children 10c.

GRANT R. D. 1.
One of Volly Easton's children was quite sick Sunday.
We had good proof that our friend Ezra Aylor killed hogs last Friday.
The fox hunters have not had much sport this fall as it has been too dry.
Allie Parsons and wife of Milan, Ind., are guests of his parents, Henry Parsons and wife.
Mrs. Richard Loudon and granddaughter, Miss Edith Loudon, were Sunday guests at Eddie Kelly's.
Ideas fall weather the past week and the farmers have been on the hustle getting their fall work in good shape.
Jas. G. Smith of Middle creek has been considerably under the weather the past week due to his old enemy, rheumatism.
Capt. John Maurer was called to Paducah, Saturday, to take charge of a boat going South. They don't let John stay at home long, which speaks well of his skill as a pilot.
Spinney Smith will make boat trips to Rising Sun, Monday, Wednesday and Friday and to Aurora, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, leaving Bellevue at 9 a. m.
Some time between now and January 1st Bellevue will lose one of her most prominent citizens, when Charlie Maurer or "Caddy" as he is familiarly called by his many friends here will move with his family to Burlington, to take charge of the office of Clerk and Master Commissioner of Boone Circuit Court. Caddy's many friends here hate to see him go and our loss is Burlington's gain, as family and friends will be a valuable acquisition to the citizenship of Burlington.
We want to say just a word about the new piece of road on R. D. 1. Those who opened the road deserve credit for they have an excellent grade and have kept the road out of the branches only where it had to cross. There is stone practically in piles on each side of the road and some day in the near future the enterprising farmers of that vicinity will have them broken on the road, and we predict the time is not far off when this will be as good a piece of road as any free road in the county. With the advent of Frost good roads are sure to come.
At the entertainment Saturday night given by the Bellevue B. O. E. U. "Candy room" was at a premium. The large crowd was not disappointed for taken all around it was about as good an amateur performance as the writer ever witnessed. The play, "The Deacon," was well staged and each character of the play was rendered in a very creditable manner. Miss Lottie Burns as the "discarded wife" and Emmett Williamson as "Nigger Pete" were especially fine. Talk all in all the evening was very pleasantly spent by the large crowd present. Especially noteworthy was the attention and good order in the audience. Quite a neat sum was realized for the school library.

Mrs. Frank Scott's relatives and neighbors gave her a surprise last Friday. It being her thirty-second birthday. Guests to the number of 20 arrived about the noon hour, bearing baskets containing everything good to eat. It was a pleasant surprise to Mrs. Scott and the day was spent very enjoyably. Those present: Mrs. Stephens, Nanette Stephens, Sallie Stephens, Weltha Scott, and Lizzie Aca, Messrs. C. A. Berkshire, J. R. Stephens, John Stephens, Wallace Stephens, Moses Scott, John Scott, Bert Scott, Kenneth Berkshire, Lewis Stephens, Clifford Ryle, Paul and Wilbur Aera and Miss Bettie Stephens.
DEVON.
Mrs. Sarah Rector is quite sick. Miss Idella Carpenter is improving from a recent illness.
Stanley Rice, who has been quite sick with typhoid fever, is some better.
Miss Olga Afterkirk, of Union, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Afterkirk.
This community is sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Hudson, of Independence.
Harley Baker and bride, Miss Jessie Carroll, were callers on friends here Sunday.
Miss Lillie Moore has returned from a visit to friends at Cold Springs, Campbell county.
Mr. Joseph E. Coombs, of Covington, was the guest of his uncle and family at this place, Saturday and Sunday.
The entertainment Friday evening at Beech Grove was much enjoyed by all present. The literary program was rendered in a manner which did credit to the pupils and teacher. The amount realized from boxes sold was $8.85, which will be used for books for the library.
If you are troubled with chronic constipation, the mild and gentle effect of Chamberlain's Tablets makes them especially suited to your case. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly—Adv.

UNION.
Miss Marietta Riley, of Cincinnati, came out for the wedding.
Mrs. G. O. Hafer, of Helton, was seen on our streets last Saturday.
Mr. H. G. Blanton, of Erlanger, spent last Thursday here with friends.
Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cross spent part of last week with friends at Walton.
Mrs. K. D. Adams, of Covington, spent last week with her parents here.
Miss Virginia Conner and A. D. Riley are visiting friends in Alexandria, Ind.

Miss Nannie Huey had as her guest last week her friend, Miss Miller, of Covington.
Miss Ella Talferro, of Erlanger, is instructing a very interesting class in elocution here.
The Union school is going to give an entertainment. See adv. in another part of the paper.
Mrs. M. A. Allen, of Marion, Indiana, spent part of last week with her aunt, Mrs. Rachel Rice.
Miss Minnie Ryle was called to her home last week by her father's illness and Miss Pope is filling her position at the telephone exchange.
Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Portwood have the sympathy of all in their grief over the death of their little son, Tommie, who passed away December 9th, at Speer's Hospital.
Denady, Conner.
The marriage of Mr. Charles Edward Denady and Miss Rachel Conner, which was solemnized in the Union Baptist church last Wednesday at 6 p. m., was a particularly beautiful one. The church was adorned with ferns and various greenery, and was fittingly attractive to the audience which assembled to hear the vows of this happy young couple. The brides-maid, Misses Nannie Huey and Hanna Hearene, gracefully bowed in white, led the way up the aisle, followed by Little Misses Sue Renner and Norma Rachel, each bearing arms of exquisite brides roses. Then came the cynosure of every eye, the saintly, lovely bride, her robes and veil of white typifying the sweetness and modesty of character that has so endeared her to a very wide circle of friends. In her hands she carried a huge shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley flowers, singularly fitting to the simple beauty of her wedding gown. As the bridal party neared the altar, stepping softly to the wedding march rendered only as Mrs. J. J. Garrison's skillful fingers can render it, the gaiters, groom advanced to meet his bride and led her to the altar, where Rev. Mr. Wayman, in happily chosen words, pronounced them "man and wife." Misses Eugenia Riley and Edith Fields wearing beautiful and becoming frocks of pink silk, and Messrs. Albert Robinson and Reuben Conner were the ushers, immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Denady left for the South, where they will spend their honeymoon visiting Chattanooga, Tenn., Jacksonville and St. Petersburg, Florida; after which they will be at home to their friends at the beautiful home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Denady, near Richmond, On Dec. 17th a lovely shower was given to the bride by the bridesmaids at the home of Miss Huey and on the evening of the 10th Mrs. Rachel and Mrs. Garrison entertained at the latter's home with an elegant dinner for the bridal party.

WALTON.
SCHOOL NOTES.
The Christmas holidays will begin Friday and extend for one week. School days will be made up at the end of school.
On Friday evening after New Year's the Philomathesian Society will have a box social. A literary program will be rendered and then the boxes disposed of at auction.
The boys and girls of school are enjoying the ice that Dame Nature has spread on the ponds.
Miss Johnson, our elocution teacher, who was called away the past week to Washington, G. D., to be with a cousin in her last hours, is back again at her work.
Mrs. J. E. Williams, very kindly and subtly, showed her interest in our school's welfare by sending the principal a check for $5.00 to be used in helping to pay for piano. We are grateful to have such encouraging patron and are glad publicly to acknowledge this donation.

Report of Teachers Meeting

The last Teachers' meeting of the season was held at Verona school Saturday afternoon, December 7th.
The following teachers were present:
N. E. Hamilton, Lizzie East, Josephine Madden, Jane Hance, Gladys Wilson, Mattie May, Ardelay Roberts, Anna Hudson.
Invocation by Supt. Riley.
Welcome Address by Miss N. E. Hamilton.
In the absence of Mr. Vallandigham, who was on the program for Methods in Reading, Supt. Riley gave some good thoughts, calling attention to the great improvement in The Methods of Teaching Reading and of the failures in life caused by poor reading.
The next subject on the program, The Value of Story Telling in the Primary Grade, Miss Maurer being absent was discussed by Miss Hamilton. She believes that all progressive teachers should make use of The Story Telling Method.
The subject of School Entertainments was discussed by several teachers present. The question is time lost in practice for school entertainments was answered.

ed by Supt. Riley.
Miss Sallie Vest read an interesting paper on Personal Interest in Pupils. The tenor of this reading was in behalf of retaining the Rural Schools that the child might not only come in close contact with the teacher but also have the protection of his home.
Supt. Riley showed clearly the necessity of School Supervision and that this could be more readily accomplished by the consolidation of schools.

Dear Editor:—I chanced to notice in your paper that my wife claims she is out under bond, her brother going her bond, and that she is now living with me. I wish to say to the public that this is the case. I am not living with her, neither do I intend to do so.
Yours Truly,
FRANK LICHER.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by J. W. Man Coughs And Breaks Ribs.
After a terrible coughing spell a man in Neenah, Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few few teaspoonfuls ends a late cough, while persistent use rids the system of coughs, expels the phlegm, and heals weak, sore lungs. "I feel sure it is a God-send to humanity," writes Mrs. Elsie Morton, Columbia, Mo., for I had not used this great remedy. It guaranteed to satisfy, and you can get a free trial bottle or 50-cent or $1.00 size at all dealers.

Man from Monkey

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

Q-Milady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

Q-Mother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Grandma had a Cabinet with a tin sugar bin nailed to the door; Granddaughter's has an ant proof, automatic valve, crystal glass one, swinging to the Cabinet side.

Q-Mother and Grandmother hid their ironing-boards behind the kitchen door. In our Cabinet an ironing-board instantly comes from underneath the table top, and when ironing is done, Presto—out of sight it goes.

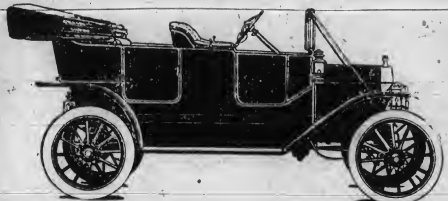

Don't buy a Cabinet until you see this.

Children Should Have Good Light for Studying

A poor light strains the eyes, and the injurious effects may last for life. An oil lamp is best. The light from the Rayo Lamp is soft and mellow. You can read or work under it for hours without hurting your eyes.

The RAYO is constructed scientifically. It is the best lamp made--yet inexpensive and economical.

The Rayo Lamp, made of solid brass--nickel plated. Lighted without removing chimney or shade. Easy to clean and rewick. Made in various styles and for all purposes.

Indigestion

causes heartburn, sour stomach, nervousness, nausea, impure blood, and more trouble than many different kinds of diseases. The food you eat ferments in your stomach, and the poisons it forms are absorbed into your whole system, causing many distressing symptoms. At the first sign of indigestion, try the old, reliable, vegetable liver powder, to quickly cleanse your system from these undesirable poisons.

Mrs. Riley Laramore, of Goodwater, Mo., says: "I suffered for years from dyspepsia and heartburn. Thedford's Black-Draught, in small doses, cured my heartburn in a few days, and now I can eat without distress." Try it.

WALTON.
Don't forget the Kiddies. Get them toys at Stephen's. For Sale--Two sons, and ten pigs. Jos. Palmer, Walton, Ky. Ira Stephens of Kenton county, visited friends here last Friday. McClure Chapter, No. 18, Royal Arch Masons, Walton, Ky., Nov. 29th, 1912.

Henry Coates of near Union, spent Friday here with friends and on business.

Atty. Jacob Blackburn, of Lexington, was a business visitor to Walton, last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Kipp, of Cincinnati, spent Saturday and Sunday here with friends.

Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Rankins were presented with a fine daughter last Sunday, December 2nd.

C. L. Renaker, of Dry Ridge, and Geo. O'Neal, were guests at the Atlas Hotel, last Friday.

Dr. Wallace Tanner and J. S. Surace, of Florence, were here on business and visiting friends last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Roy Cluster, of Cincinnati, have been enjoying a visit to relatives and friends in this quarter the past two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Boswell, of Dry Ridge, spent the past week here visiting their daughter Mrs. Fred Wayland and husband.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church will give a supper at the opera house Friday, Dec. 27th, beginning at five o'clock.

Henry C. Diers spent last week in Clermont county, Ohio, in the interest of his nursery business and had a very successful business taking a large number of orders for spring delivery.

Lee H. Hind, who is employed at a large lumber mill at Huttig, Arkansas, writes an interesting letter about the great lumber interest of that section. He likes his position very well and sends his kindest regards to his many friends in this quarter.

J. W. Hinton, of Scott county, arrived here last week to fill the position of station agent at the Cincinnati Southern depot for a couple of weeks, while the regular agent, James T. Hurt, is taking a vacation. All of the agents of that road have been given a vacation of two weeks.

Chas. Miller, of Big Bone, who has been attending school here, bought the barber shop of Everett York in the Phoenix Hotel. Mr. York will continue in charge of the tonorial parlor while Miller attends a college for learning the art of shaving and hair cutting, in Cincinnati.

Charles Napier and Miss Maud Kennedy, of this neighborhood, were united in the bonds of holy wedlock at Newport, last week. The groom is the son of E. F. Napier, and the bride is a daughter of the late Theodore Kennedy.

They will make their home on the farm near here, and their many friends wish them happiness and prosperity.

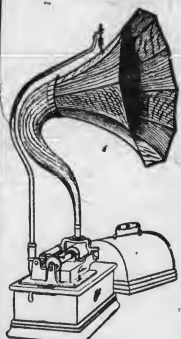

The Sunday Schools of the Methodist and Christian churches will hold their Christmas entertainment jointly at the Methodist church Tuesday evening, Dec. 24th, beginning at eight o'clock.

The Baptist Sunday school will hold its entertainment the same evening at the Baptist church, the teachers of the ten classes having prepared a musical and literary program for the occasion.

Mrs. Annie Wheatley, a colored woman, aged about 43 years, died at her home in Walton last Friday after a very short illness.

The woman had spent the Sunday before in Cincinnati with some friends and while there ate some food that disagreed with her, and on her return home became very ill and gradually grew worse until she died. Mrs. Wheatley had been employed as a domestic at the Atlas Hotel. The remains were taken to Louisville for interment.

Thursday, two itinerant book sellers hired a horse and buggy from the livery stable of A. M. Edwards to drive to the country, visiting various school houses for the purpose of selling their publications. On reaching the school house in the Beaver Lick neighborhood, they hitched the horse and went into the house, remaining for quite a while presenting their publications. On coming out of the school house they were greatly astonished to find their buggy in a blaze of fire and the horse doing his level best to kick loose from the blazing vehicle to keep from being cremated. The wheels and running gear was all that was left of the buggy. The fire was caused by the heater or foot-warmer left in the buggy. The men, whose names are J. B. Wilson and E. B. Byrn, telephoned to Walton for another buggy and had the remains of the other vehicle returned to the stable. Mr. Edwards, the proprietor of the stable asked pay for his destroyed buggy and a lap robe that helped the conflagration, but the book men disclaimed any responsibility and refused to make any

You remember that you failed to get eggs last winter and spring because you had a cold desolate henhouse. Now get your roofing paper and line the poultry house and put in a window if you have none.

Dr. R. C. Tilley, who has been in the jail here for several months was bailed out Monday, J. F. Blyth, of Burlington, and Albert M. Edwards, of Paducah, Kentucky, signing his bail bond for $500. The doctor was glad to get out and the people about Burlington were glad to see him at liberty again.

Commonwealth's Atty. Downs kept things moving about the grand jury room, last week, as shown by the work that jury turned into court. He evidently struck pay dirt upon his first appearance in Boone, and if the results of his investigations increase with time he may make Boone one of the best paying counties in his district. Heretofore Boone has been poor picking for the Commonwealth's Attorneys.

H. W. Shearer, of Erlanger, and Miss Charlotte Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall, of Burlington, were married at Grace M. E. church, Newport, on Wednesday evening of last week, Rev. Kagan, officiating. After a supper at a Cincinnati hotel Mr. and Mrs. Shearer left for a trip to New York and other points of interest in the East. Mr. and Mrs. Shearer have a host of friends at Burlington and Erlanger who wish them all the happiness and prosperity this world affords. They will arrive at home the latter part of this week.

Ends Hunt For Rich Girl.
Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man meets a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Her peach bloom complexion and ruby lips result from her pure blood; her bright eyes from restful sleep; her elastic skin from firm, firm muscles, all telling of the health and strength Electric Bitters give a woman, and the freedom from indigestion, backache, headache, fainting and dizzy spells they promote. Everywhere they are woman's favorite remedy. If weak or ailing try them. 50c at all dealers.—Adv.

At a special meeting of Bradford Lodge, F. & A. M., at Independence, last Saturday night, Past Master Dr. J. M. Chambers, was presented with a handsome Past Master's jewel as a token of the high esteem in which he is held by the many members, and in commemoration of the half century mark of his membership in the Masonic fraternity. Past Master Fred Harbeck, of Covington made the presentation speech. The occasion was further enlivened by work in the Master's degree and a fine spread was served at the close of the exercises.

ANNOUNCES FOR UNITED STATES SENATORSHIP

Former Governor J. C. W. Beckham has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Kentucky, to succeed William O. Bradley, in the State primary election to be held throughout Kentucky in August, 1913. His card of announcement is as follows:

"In answer to a great many inquiries, I feel that I should, without further delay, make known my purpose in regard to the approaching race for the United States Senatorship, for which a Democratic nomination is to be made in the State primary next August. Following my retirement from the office of Governor, about five years ago, and the result of the Senatorial election in the General Assembly of 1908, it was not my intention to again seek public office. Eight years of arduous and difficult service as Governor, frequently dealing with serious and critical questions, had prepared me to welcome and enjoy the relief from public responsibilities and the peace of private life which such retirement offered me.

"But from the people and the press of the State I have received so many kind and flattering assurances that I might as a Senator from Kentucky be of some useful public service, and gratefully appreciating the honor implied by such expressions, I have decided to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for that office in the primary next August, and to submit my candidacy to the Democratic voters of the State.

"I believe the people of Kentucky have known me long enough and well enough to judge by what principles and purposes I have always been influenced in my public life, and how well or ill I have met every responsibility or obligation confronting me. I have been frank with them at all times, frequently when I believed it to be to my personal disadvantage, and I have never let them remain in doubt about my position upon any important political subject.

"So, upon the issues now prominent before the country, the people of Kentucky will know how I stand and what my course of action would be if I should be elected to the Senate. I am in hearty accord with the principles of the platform of the Baltimore convention, and it would be my endeavor as a member of the Senate, without ostentatious display, to earnestly and efficiently assist President Wilson and his administration in fulfilling the promises made to the people in that platform and in the recent campaign.

"The verdict of the American people in the recent National election was unmistakable and emphatic. They voted for a definite change in certain policies of the Government, the restoration of its control to the people, the detronement of the power of special interests, relief from the burdens of tariff taxes and tributes, the overthrow of monopoly in our industries, the readjustment of the functions of government to serve the masses of the people rather than those favored classes which have fattened upon special privileges, and for other just and needed reforms outlined in the Democratic program. However much we may rejoice over the recent result at the polls, our victory is not yet won, and will not be won until we have substantially fulfilled these expectations of the people by enacting into laws the promises we have made. It is evident that the admirable man we have elected President recognizes the solemnity of the obligations placed upon him in these matters, and it is essential for the success of his administration that he should have in the Senate, as well as in the House, to aid him in keeping faith with the people, men who are in cordial sympathy with his policies, and men who are willing and capable of finishing successfully the work to be begun.

"I seek this position as Senator from my Native State not merely with any selfish consideration of the honor it may bring me, but for the broad opportunity it would afford me of rendering some useful and patriotic service to the people of the country. I believe that I have had such experience and training as would make me reasonably well prepared for the work. I do not come before the people of Kentucky in this race unknown to or untired by them. In my public career in the past they have had ample opportunities to determine whether or not I can be treated with official responsibilities, or whether or not I am accustomed to redeem my promises and obligations to them.

"Upon their sound judgment and generous confidence I rest my candidacy for this high office, seeking their support if they believe me worthy of it, and advising them to vote for some other man if they believe he can more faithfully and successfully serve them."

We Redeem the Profit Sharing Coupons.

To 40,000 Burley Tobacco Growers Stockholders in Strater Bros.' Branch Factory

Here are ten brands of tobacco. All of you know their worth, for you supply the leaf. It comes from your own tobacco farms. Most of you smoke or chew one of these brands, for they represent the cream of your crops. You know of none better, none richer, and you know that each sale brings a profit to you. You are partners in each of these brands. Here's a way to increase your profits on each.

40,000 Partner-Salesmen

We want 40,000 more salesmen and you. Mr. Grower, are one that we want. We want you to work with us, to help sell these brands, and thus increase your revenue from them. Your cooperation, individually, can result in gigantic sales. Here's how it works out.

Let Each Man Tell Ten Friends

Tell each of your growers tell ten friends what you know of Strater Bros.' Branch Brands, the brands for which you grow the leaf. Always keep one of these brands in your pocket and give to these friends to try. Explain that the leaves were the pick of your crop and that no better crops are grown. Point out the reasons why these brands of tobacco should be every smoker's and grower's choice since it is your choicest growth. 40,000 men, each telling ten friends, will thus get a powerful sales message to nearly 400,000. If each of those friends tell five others, nearly 2,000,000 men are affected. Think what an increase this would make on these brands in one section. You are selling to us. We are selling to them. So let us work jointly to sell the utmost that we can.

Tell Dealers, Too

Tell dealers, too, when you sell these brands, what you tell them know of their quality. Let them know of their nation-wide popularity, how they repeat, and how they make friends of consumers.

BE A BOOSTER OF BURLEY GROWERS' BRANDS, thus boosting the sales and your profits.

TO ALL DEALERS WHO SELL TOBACCO

These brands of tobacco are famous sellers as all who sell them know. They are made from the best, from the cream of the crops, from forty thousand farms. They form the greatest repeaters known, a steady source of profit. Put them into your stock for a trial and see what they do. You will sell them for years if you sell them one week.

PRESCRIPTION

For a Long Life.

This is the prescription for a long life given by an old gentleman in Connecticut, who is ninety-nine years old and still well and cheerful. "Live temperately, be slow to anger, don't worry, take plenty of exercise in the fresh air, and, above all, keep cheerful."

Should the system get run down—digestive organs weak—the blood thin and sluggish, take Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the medicine—body-building properties of cod's livers, with the useless grease eliminated and tonic iron added. We regard Vinol as one of the greatest body-builders and strength-creators in the world for aged people.

Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people, you would be unable to supply the demand; it is the finest tonic and strength-creator I ever used."

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction.

The December term of the Boone circuit court adjourned early last Saturday morning after five days session in which considerable business was disposed of. The grand jury was in session five days and returned 45 indictments, the largest number of indictments that has been returned in many years by a Boone county grand jury. Nearly all the indictments were for the violation of the whiskey laws.

The trial of Littrell for the shooting of Wilson was the biggest case in the court. Littrell was charged with murder and was defended by D. E. Castleman. The jury got the case about dark Friday evening and about ten o'clock a verdict was returned. The defendant was returned. The jury was composed of the following:

T. B. Roberts, Mudlick, Lewis Clegg, Union, Geo. Bradford, Pt. Pleasant, J. J. Duncan, Burlington, Chas. Utzinger, Francesville, R. J. Akin, Burlington, Nat Rogers, Bellevue, Lawrence Chambers, Petersburg, Ed. Berkshire, Burlington, R. W. Rouse, Burlington, Elbert Clore, Burlington.

The first ballot taken by the jury after it went to its room stood eight to four for acquittal.

Tributes of Respect.

Hall of Walton Lodge, No. 131, I. O. F., Walton, Ky, Dec 7th, 1912.

Whereas, Death, by its inexorable decree, has taken from our midst our beloved brother, Jacob Kipp, and depriving us of our high appreciation of him as a brother Odd-Fellow and our sorrow over the loss of his genial presence from our mystic circle, therefore be it

Resolved, That in Bro. Jacob Kipp we had the exemplification of the principles of Odd-Fellowship, "Friendship Love and Truth" in his daily walk in life, and we recognize his worth as a member of our fraternity, his value to the community as a citizen, and his sincerity as a friend. His high character as a just and upright citizen placed him in the highest esteem with all who knew him for his excellent qualities, and we as his friends and brothers sorrow over his death and drop a tear to his memory.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of the members of this lodge is extended to the bereaved sons whose father for forty years was one of our most faithful members, and as a token of our respect for the memory of our departed brother that the charter of the lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days and that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the sons of the deceased brother, and the resolutions be published in the Boone County Recorder.

Respectfully,
D. B. Wallace,
S. L. Edwards,
Committee.

Tributes of Respect.

Whereas, we are again called to mourn the death of one of our beloved Companions, James J. Jerman of Kenton county, who passed to his heavenly reward after a well spent life of usefulness in this community where he was universally loved and esteemed for his unquestioned integrity, his model citizenship, and his genial companionable nature, and realizing all of his many good qualities we feel that it is but right and fitting that we add our testimony to his merits and worth by the following resolutions of respect. Therefore be it Resolved, That in the death of Companion James Jerman the craft has lost one of its most valuable and zealous members, one whose presence at the Chapter meetings for nearly half a century has always been welcomed and added to the interest of every meeting. His knowledge and skill as one of the workmen on the speculative tone left its impress for good on all of the craft, and as the High Priest for years he discharged his duties with fidelity and zeal that made the Chapter a credit to the craft. In the ripeness of years he has laid down the working tools to take a well earned place in the Council above where "Holiness to the Lord" will be inscribed in his crown as diadems of his rejoicing.

Resolved, That we feel the loss of this dear and faithful Companion, and will carry the memory of his splendid character as one of our treasured possessions.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved relatives; that as a tribute to his memory that the usual badge of mourning be worn; these resolutions be inscribed on the Chapter minutes, and a copy given to the family of the deceased Companion.

Respectfully Submitted,
L. T. Grubbs,
Ernest W. McElroy,
A. K. Johnson
Committee.

An Explanation.

Walton, Ky., Dec. 7, 1912.

Editor Recorder:—

Will you please publish in your paper a few remarks I wish to make in explaining the road bill I introduced in the Legislature? I understand there are a great many people over the county that did not understand the bill, thinking if the bill had passed the Legislature that every one that owned land in our county would be compelled to pay $1.00 per acre on said land to build roads. This being far from the fact is why I am writing this explanation. In making my race to represent my county I had several good men over the county to ask me my views on the road question and also asking me if elected not to go to Frankfort and vote a perpetual road tax on our people to benefit the mountain counties. I promised them that I would not, and gave them my personal views as to how I thought we should build our roads, and tried to embody those views in the bill.

In the first place I believe in local taxation to build our roads. Those that are directly benefited should by county aid go down in their pockets and build their roads. I do not think it fair that because I live on a mud road that the people over at Verona or in any other part of the county where they have gone down in their pockets and gave generously to build pikes that it would be fair for them to help build roads in my community and the bill I introduced was purely local and for the benefit of those of us that have to contend with mud all the winter and would not affect those that have good roads at all. Had the bill passed the General Assembly it would still be in the hands of the land owners along any route or road proposed to be built as the bill provided that the land owners had a vote along said road and if the majority of said land owners voted to build the road the Fiscal Court could then put a dollar tax per acre on said land lying one-half mile on each side of the road. Now, you see it would not be reasonable for those that have their pikes to vote a tax on themselves and it would be left in their hands. Now, of course we expected the Fiscal Court to help us as much as they helped our neighbors, and if they did we would with $1.00 taxation have a fund of $1.00 per mile, which would pike some of our roads, and, of course, it would be up to the land owners whether they would put a tax on themselves the second or third year.

My idea was where there was where there was a small deficiency the land owners would make up the small amount rather than to be taxed again. The reason for the two and three year clause was this. Had the bill become a law it would have been a State law to operate locally, and in some parts of the state they would want to build wider roads and much better than our county would think of doing, and the two and three year clause was incorporated in the bill in order to let any county in the state have the benefit of the law.

We all know there has been plenty of talk about building good roads throughout the state, and we also know that it takes more than talk to build good roads. We have tried several times to make money to make up enough money by subscription to build our road, but have always failed to get enough. You all know that there is always some that we think are the most able to give that give very little. That was another motive I had in my bill, that every land owner along the road would be equally benefited. Should a pike be built and he should equally share the burden non-resident as well as those that live on the road. I did not altogether have in mind the road I live on but I can cite you to others. We will take East Bend road for instance. As for Chamberlain's, as there is in the state and about the worst road I know of in the county. We all know that some of the land is owned by non-residents. They can rent their lands and of course have good shipping facilities, and they are not interested in good roads. As for Chamberlain's, but what about the resident land owners? Can he afford to go down in his pocket and build the road independent of the non-resident? No, he cannot, and still he tells me he has tried our way by subscription to build his road and has failed as we have failed. Would not the non-residents land be more valuable if there was a good road leading to and from his land? And if some one was to offer to buy the land if the road was good would he not point out the advantages of the road, and would he in the end be benefited? Of course he would. Well, then he should help build the roads and the little bill referred to would bring him equal with the resident land owners. There could be much said along this line but I am taking up too much space. Just one more thought, No matter what kind of bill had been offered, there would have been opposition, but I tried to get up a bill that I thought fair and just, and if we cannot there was no harm done anyway, as the committee that had the good roads bill in hands had no time to take up a little bill like mine, but I believe if they had it would have benefited more people and I know we would have had one more road piked in this county.

Yours for Good Roads,

NOT A DAY OF JOY FOR ALL

Those Who Are Happy on Christmas Should Remember the Suffering and Distressed.

"It's Christmas time, friends! What will you do about it?" asks L. D. Stearns in Suburban Life. "Mothers! Aunties! You who love to see your babies bend, drooping softly over their family of dolls, with that grave little smile of dawning motherhood flitting tenderly over their faces, just within a stone's throw of babies who have no dolls, and the mother heart beats in their bosoms just as it does in that of your own sheltered darlings; but their faces are grave, and sharp and old; and little drawn, white lines show about their mouths; and their eyes are not like the eyes of your children. The other day, a baby opened its eyes for the first time on this old earth; it was one of our coldest days; but in the home was no stove, no bit of warmth, no foot, no nothings! On another street, in the midst of plenty, a woman with two small babies toddling about their father, one hunting for wax crabs—with red lids. We're not a dollar in the house, and nothing to eat! Oh, mothers—oh adoring aunties—life isn't made up of just prayers and sitting recently in church, keeping one day in the week holy. There's a try: to keep with life that is spelled in many, many ways, if you'd make it complete."

Helping the Fruit Growers.

The extension division of the Kentucky Experiment Station, tenders its services to the fruit growers of the State and promises to give them expert aid in the solution of their problems. In other words if the fruit grower is experiencing difficulty with his orchard he is invited to tell his troubles to the Experiment Station.

The extension division has issued a bulletin in which it says that on many Kentucky farms there are mature apple and peach orchards that have been neglected and that produce no income beyond an occasional small crop of uncertain quality. "With a little investment and a little work at the proper time a great many of these orchards can be made to return a cash income that will be an important item in farm economy."

An expert is to be employed who will devote practically all his time to the inspection, or diagnosis, and requests for his services will be complied with on practical. Fruit growers are urged to send in specimens of diseased trees, or twigs, suspected of infection by San Jose scale. Suggestions will be freely given with regard to the pruning and cultivation of orchards, and eventually, public spraying and pruning demonstrations throughout the various fruit growing sections. The Experiment Station will be of great value to fruit growers. Those who are interested in the improvement of their orchards or who are seeking advice to make their horticultural efforts more remunerative should avail themselves of the advice and assistance proffered. There are many orchards in Kentucky which are now unprofitable solely by reason of the fact that they have not received proper attention. These can be made profitable in many instances, at least, and their owners are losing good money by neglecting them.—C.-J.

The Woodpeckers Store-House.

It may be true that birds are guided solely by instinct, but in some cases the dividing line between instinct and reason is so indistinct as to the most imperceptible. An illustration is supplied by the behavior of a species of woodpecker that dwells in the mountainous regions of California. In the fall, when the acorns are ripe, it pecks numerous holes in the bark of trees, and in each hole inserts an acorn. Every acorn is placed in the same way, with the apex pointing toward the heart of the tree; and all are wedged in so tightly that one can hardly pull them out with the bare fingers. Anyone seeing the woodpeckers thus putting away acorns might suppose that the birds intended to eat them in the winter months, when other food becomes scarce. That is not the birds' aim at all. It is providing for a supply of fresh meat for the early spring. When spring comes, a worm develops in each acorn; and when the worm is juicy and fully developed, the woodpecker goes after it, breaking the protruding shell, and devouring its occupant. —Technical World Magazine.

Big Inheritance Tax.

We are informed that in a few days a check will be handed to Sheriff John E. Ellis for $16,000, which will be the amount of the inheritance tax due the State under the will of the late Diedrich Meschenhoff. This is the largest amount so far as we are informed, that has yet been paid as inheritance tax in any one case.—Oldham Era.

ONE CHRISTMAS CARD.

How it Gave One Man $30,000 and Another $5,000.

When boys and girls send Christmas cards they don't expect to get anything in return, except other Christmas cards, but here is a true story of one man that got $30,000 and another man that received $5,000 by sending one Christmas card.

The way the thing came about was very odd, as is often the case with true stories. The card was received at Christmas time by an aged and miserly merchant at Melbourne, in Australia. He was a bachelor and apparently quite unaccustomed to the luxury of having any one remember him at Christmas time, and when he received a card—and a very cheap one—with "From your old friend John Henry, who hopes you are flourishing," he was evidently considerably pleased with it. The card was in an envelope bearing the London postmark, and on the card itself was an address, the number of a house in Russell square.

The old gentleman died before the next Christmas, and it was found by his will that he had left $30,000 to "my old friend John Henry Mills of No. —, Russell square, London, in appreciation of his remembering me last Christmas." But the person named by him in the will had never lodged at the address, while the sender of the card—John Henry Smith—had, it turned out, never known the old Melbourne gentleman, but had confounded him with a friend of a similar name! Under these circumstances, the question arose as to which John Henry was really entitled to the legacy. The case was compromised; the John Henry actually named in the will took $30,000, and the sender of the card received $5,000.

Let the People Say.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Senator George H. Nelson has given out the following statement, setting forth his views of a report from Cincinnati that Judge Albie W. Young, in an interview in that city, had said Mr. James, with the State patronage at his disposal, could name the next Senator from Kentucky:

"It is not, claim the right to name the next Senator from Kentucky. That is the high prerogative of the Democracy of the State, and it is one that I could not usurp if I would. "The Democracy of that great State has honored me highly by electing me to the Senate to serve them. In one of the lawmaking branches of the republic, and not to dictate to them whom they should elect as my colleague. I have never believed that it was a part of my official duty to undertake to create myself as a boss over those whose servant I am."

ALL ABOUT THE MISTLETOE

Popular Christmas Plant is a Parasite and in Olden Times Was Considered Sacred.

Although in the majority of American and English homes mistletoe is displayed at Christmas time, it is remarkable how little is known of this curious plant. Mistletoe is a parasitic growth, appearing most frequently on apple trees, although it is also found on evergreens and on poplar, hawthorn, pear and oak trees, but very rarely in the last named. It is an evergreen bush, about four feet in length, thickly crowded with branches and leaves. Unlike all other plants, its leaves extend down as well as up. The plant flowers every year, but does not bear the little whitish berries until it is four years old. Mistletoe proper is a native of Europe, especially of England and Normandy. In olden times it was considered a sacred plant, because its berries grow in clusters of three—emblematic of the Trinity. The ancient Celts used to hang sprigs of mistletoe around their necks as a safeguard from evil influences. The maid that was not caught and kissed under the mistletoe at Christmas, would not be married within the year, so the tradition goes. According to the old rules, the ceremony was not properly performed unless a berry was pulled off after each kiss and presented to the maiden. When all the berries were gone the privilege ceased.

The Christmas Season.

The year now closing down amid the "sounds of revelry" always to be heard at the season of Christmas good will, has brought to many of the Recorder's readers much of joy and thankfulness, while to others it has been shadowed by sorrows and losses. We can not wish a "Merry Christmas" to all, for to some the wish would seem a mockery. But we do wish, most sincerely, that to each and every one of our readers may come the joy of having done well the duties of life, and that they may have health of body and spirit to go through the coming year, doing good unto others, and trying to live, as well as to say, the good wishes that now, in this festive season, spring so joyously to their lips. May you all have a happy, wholesome, satisfactory Christmas, and carry its spirit with you throughout the coming year.

The Recorder wishes all its readers a merry Christmas and all the turkey they can eat.

CHRISTMAS 100 YEARS AGO

Apprehension Felt From British Navy in the War of 1812.

Six months of the war of 1812 had elapsed when the people of the United States celebrated Christmas a hundred years ago. Hull had surrendered Detroit, but another Hull had won a decided victory over the British ship Guerriere, while another ship, the United States, had captured the Macedonian. In New York a great Christmas banquet was given to Captain Isaac Hull, commanding the Constitution, "Old Ironsides," which had won the battle with the Guerriere, and to Captain Stephen Decatur, commander of the United States City hotel, which occupied the whole front of a block from Cedar to Third streets, in the vicinity of Wall street. This was the last Christmas festival in New York till after signing of the peace treaty, for in 1813 the city was plunged into black despair over the fear of the British navy and the distress that had been caused to our commerce and shipping.

Looked at from this distance, it seems little less than a miracle that the comparatively puny American navy should have whipped the navy of Great Britain, then the greatest in the world. The panic in which our chief seaport town was thrown by the fear of attack from the mistress of the seas is easily understood.

The Use of Living.

Thousands of men breathe, move and live; pass off the stage of life and are heard of no more. Why? They did not a particle of good in the world; and none were heard by them, none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke could be recalled—their light went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, O man mortal? Live for something. Do good and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. No, your name, your deeds will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as bright on the earth as the stars of heaven.—Thos. Chalmers.

OFFICIAL PARCEL POST MAP.
This map is for use only in unit No. 1071, in which the city of Washington is located.
Numbered squares represent units of area; circles indicate boundaries of zones.

FIXING RATES UNDER PARCEL POST SYSTEM

Government Goes Into Business of Transmitting Merchandise
Through the Mails.

NEW LAW FULLY EXPLAINED

Country Divided Into Zones and Units for Purpose of Fixing Charges for Carriage—No Package Weighing More Than Eleven Pounds Is Mailable—Anything Properly Wrapped Which Will Not Injure Other Mail May Be Sent.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

With the coming of the New Year the United States government will enter into a new field of enterprise—the transmission of merchandise by what is known as the parcel post. For years there has been a demand for such a system of inexpensive transmission of packages. The camps of favor and disfavor of the parcel post scheme have been about equally divided. Finally at the last session of congress a bill was passed which will put the plan into operation, but only it must be said in little more than an experimental way.

It is the intention of Uncle Sam to move rather slowly in the parcel post matter. He wants to find how popular it will be, how much it will cost the government, and whether there is to be a profit or loss at the end of each year. If it is found that the plan is successful from the point of view of the people, which means the government also, the parcel post will be extended until finally it reaches the proportions which its proponents say they believe it is destined to assume.

Zone System Explained.
It is no exaggeration to say that thousands upon thousands of inquiries have been made of the postmaster general as to just what the parcel post will mean to the country. It was the law of congress establishing the system which made provision for a division of the country into zones and into 35,000 units which are to be used as centers in describing the circles which mark the boundaries of the zones. There has been no clear understanding, apparently, of this zone system, but really it is a very simple matter.

The accompanying map shows the country divided into zones from the center of which Washington is situated, as the center of the accompanying map is a table showing the rate of postage per pound for parcels from Washington to places within all the zones.

Each unit contains an area thirty miles square. Now each unit is a center from which the zones are drawn and so every unit is a center no matter where it is situated within the zones drawn from it. Just exactly as Washington has been drawn from it. For instance, take Keokuk, Ia., which is in a unit in the fifth zone. From that unit the circles are drawn exactly as they are drawn from Washington and they will be numbered from Keokuk as number one, just as they are numbered from Washington as number one. Of course, however, zone six will have a different geographical position as related to Keokuk than it has as related to Washington, but as the radius of the circles drawn from Keokuk is the same length as the radius of the circles drawn from Washington, Keokuk's zone six will be just as far from its center as Washington's zone six is.

How Rates Are Fixed.
It can be seen from this readily enough that the postal rates from Washington to its particular zone will be the same as the postal rates from Keokuk to its particular zones. Each unit being about thirty miles square will of course contain a certain number of postoffices, but each office in the same unit is considered as being the center of the circles from

RATES OF POSTAGE

Parcels weighing four ounces or less are mailable at the rate of one cent for each ounce or fraction of an ounce, regardless of distance. Parcels weighing more than four ounces are mailable at the pound rate, as shown by the following table, and when mailed at this rate any fraction of a pound is considered a full pound.

Wt. Lbs.	1st zone	2d zone	3d zone	4th zone	5th zone	6th zone	7th zone	8th zone which the zones are drawn. The rates of postage are fixed from the unit in which the sending postoffice is situated, but the price to every place in any zone is just the same. To illustrate, it will cost exactly the same amount to send a parcel from Washington to Erie, Pa., that it costs to send it to Atlanta, Ga., because Erie and Atlanta with reference to Washington are situated in the fourth zone. The rates therefore are fixed from the unit in which the postoffice is located, but they are the same from that office to any point in any one zone.

It will be seen by reference to the table of rates of postage that it will cost more per pound to send a package a long distance than it does to send it a short distance. The rate increases for a package weighing one pound at the rate of one cent for more than 11 pounds can be sent under the new parcel post law. It should be said right here that on the long hauls the parcel post may not be able to compete with the express companies, but that on shorter hauls it can so compete. It was the expressed desire of the legislators and of the postoffice officials that the parcel post system should be made of particular use to persons having farm and factory products to transmit to customers. It is probable that producers must study the rates of postage and compare them with the initial and compare them with the cost and convenience under present methods before individually a man can determine whether he is to profit or not by the change. Then there is another thing to be considered and which any can be known definitely when fuller regulations have been made to specify exactly what kind of things can be sent by parcel post. It can be said in a general way that anything can be sent which is properly wrapped and which will not injure other mail matter with which it may come in contact.

Copy Foreign Countries.

It is probable that the government will adopt a means of transportation for certain kinds of its merchandise much like those which have been adopted in parcel post countries abroad. What the English call hamper, basket-like arrangements, probably will be adopted, and as these can be kept separate from the ordinary mail matter it is believed that the regulations as finally adopted will allow the sending of eggs, butter, dressed poultry, live poultry, honey, fruit and other products of the country.

The 11-pound limit for a single package very extended use of the parcel post for some of the articles which have been named. Of course, more weight can be sent if it is sent in different parcels, but the cost in that case would be heavier because the increase per pound on a single package is not great up to 11 pounds, and probably it would increase at no greater rate if the government were to allow the limit of weight which is now fixed. To make it simpler, it would be better to send two packages of 11 pounds than it would to send one package of 22 pounds if the government eventually should allow a heavy single package to be carried and should charge in proportion just what it does now for one package of 11 pounds weight.

Every postmaster in the United States will have a parcel post map like the one which is here reproduced except that the zone lines will be shown with the unit of his postoffice as a center. All that a postmaster will have to do when a parcel is presented for transportation is to find out in what zone the destination of the package lies. His table will show him instantly the rate per pound from the unit in which his postoffice lies to the zone of the package's destination, the price as has been explained before, for every postoffice in any one zone being the same. The parcel post will take nothing but fourth-class material. Printed matter is still in the third-class designation. Therefore books cannot be sent by the parcel post system. This the postoffice authorities seem to think is in a way unfair and may work a hardship. It may be that in the future the law will be changed so as to include all printed matter. It seems to be certain that an attempt will be made to bring about this change as speedily as possible.

Must Bear Stamp.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has ordered that postmasters be advised that parcel post packages cannot be accepted for mailing unless they bear a distinctive parcel post stamp and have attached to them the return card of the sender. A series of distinctive stamps is now in course of preparation for this class of mail as required by the law. Consignments of these stamps will be ready for shipment to all postoffices in ample time for the establishment of the new system on New Year's day.

The postoffice department has given instructions to every postmaster in the country to enlighten his patrons as much as possible on the general subject of the parcel post and especially on the use of the special stamps and the necessary attachment of the return card. The law requires that all fourth-class material mailed after January 1, 1913, without a parcel post stamp attached shall be treated as "held for postage" matter. Parcel post packages will be mailable only at postoffices, branch postoffices, lettered and local named stations, and such numbered stations as may be designated by the postmasters.

It has been announced by Postmaster General Hitchcock that nearly 70,000 scales will be required for use in the parcel post system which is to go into effect January 1. He has accordingly authorized the issuance of the largest postoffice and their branches will be supplied with automatic springless scales. The next class of offices, numbering about 10,000, will be given high grade beam scales, while the four class offices, numbering about 55,000, will be furnished with the best spring balances obtainable, each having a capacity for twenty pounds. These scales will be used by postmasters to determine the amount of postage required on parcel post packages. The fact that many of the postoffices of the country are now furnished with scales of a limited capacity makes it necessary for the postmaster general to make this very large purchase of scales capable of taking care of the parcel post business. It is understood that this will be the largest single order ever placed for scales.

Rate on Seeds Not Affected.
It should be said that the act of congress which puts a parcel post plan into operation does not in any way affect the postage rate on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants as fixed by section 482 of the postal laws and regulations.

The classification of articles mailable as well as the weight limit, the rates of postage, zone or zones and other conditions of mailability under the act of congress, if the postmaster general shall, find on experience that they or any of them are such as to prevent the shipment of articles desirable, or shall permanently render the cost of the service greater than the receipts of the revenue therefrom, he is hereby authorized, subject to the consent of the interstate commerce commission after investigation, to reform from time to time such classification, weight limit, rates, zone or zones or conditions, in order to promote the service to the public or to insure the receipt of revenue from such service adequate to pay the cost thereof.

Through many years different members of the house and senate have been interested in promoting parcel post legislation. Among the men most active in securing the legislation which soon is to go into effect as law are Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon, Representatives David J. Lewis of Maryland and William Sulzer of New York, who has just been elected governor of that state.

To ascertain conditions surrounding the establishment of the parcel post system in places differing widely in size, climate and industries, Postmaster General Hitchcock recently summoned to Washington, to confer with the special parcel post committee, the postmasters of five typical offices. They are William H. Davis, Pittsburg, Pa.; Daniel T. Gerow, Jacksonville, Fla.; H. Foster, Wilmington, Del.; E. M. C. Quinby, Suffolk, Va.; and Henry N. Bradley, Charleston, W. Va.

Confer With Postmasters.

The postmasters of the five largest offices in the country have already conferred before the committee, so Pittsburg was represented as being a large first class office, though not as large as the greater five, and as being the center of a tremendous manufacturing area. The postmaster of Pittsburg reported that the board of trade of that city has a special parcel post committee, working toward bringing the consumer and producer nearer to each other by the new system. He also said that many of the merchants are planning to have their city deliveries made by parcel post.

Wilmington, Del., represented a large farming and manufacturing district, with its main connections close by inland in the form of the largest office in Philadelphia, the largest office in Florida, and the outlet for all the mail of the state. It is peculiar in having a special increase of force in winter, the tourist season, and the postmaster said that it was expected that travelers would use the parcel post extensively in sending home five and ten-pound packages of fruit.

Suffolk, Va., and Charleston, W. Va., are both very small second class offices, one in the tide-water district, with large truck interests; the other far inland in an orchard country, with diversified farm products. The postmasters of both offices reported great interest in the parcel post, and said that they had continual inquiries regarding its scope.

From these postmasters the committee was able to glean a great amount of valuable information, which, added to that gained from the recent hearings in Maryland, puts it in a position to plan the details of the service to the greatest advantage of the producing farmer.

Gives Him Time.

"You're a pretty old man to be beginning," said the lady to the man at the back door.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the man with his hat in his hand.

"Have you been begging all your life?"

"Not yet, ma'am."

APPROVES RULES FOR PARCEL POST

Postmaster General Issues Regulations Governing System.

WHAT MAY BE SENT BY MAIL

Gives American People Opportunity to Send Farm and Factory Products by Mail From and to Any Point in United States.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has just approved the regulations which will in detail the articles which may or may not be sent by parcel post. These regulations, after having been turned off at the government printing office on a "rush order" and they will be distributed as rapidly as possible. The rules as to what can be sent and what cannot be sent and the instructions for the preparation of mailable articles with other "official advice" are given here as they have just been prepared by the postoffice department in Washington.

The minimum rate will be five cents for the first pound and three cents for each additional pound to any point not exceeding fifty miles from the office of mailing; the local rate, which is five cents for the first pound and one cent for additional pound, applies to all parcels the delivery of which does not involve their transportation on railway lines. The rates increase for each successive mile of the route, the maximum rate being twelve cents a pound, which will carry a parcel across the continent or to any of our possessions. Parcels will be limited to eleven pounds in weight and six feet in length and girth combined.

Mailable Perishable Articles.
Butter, lard and perishable articles such as fish, fresh meats, dressed fowls, vegetables, fruits, berries and articles of a similar nature that decay quickly, when so packed or wrapped as to prevent damage to other mail matter, will be accepted for local delivery either at the office of mailing or on any rail route starting therefrom. When inclosed in glass cover and a strong outer cover of wood, metal, heavy corrugated pasteboard or other suitable material and wrapped so that nothing can escape from the package, they will be accepted for mailing to any office within the first zone where the radius of 50 miles. Butter, lard, or any greasy or oily substance intended for delivery at offices beyond the first zone must be suitably packed. Vegetables and fruit that do not decay quickly will be accepted for mailing to any zone if so packed as to prevent damage to other mail matter. Eggs will be accepted for local delivery when securely packed in a basket or other container. Eggs will be accepted for mailing regardless of distance when each egg is wrapped separately and packed in a strong container.

There is no restriction on salted, dried, smoked or cured meats and other meat products, but fresh meat in any form will be transported only within the first zone. Parcels containing perishable articles must be marked "PERISHABLE" and articles likely to spoil within the time reasonably required for transportation and delivery will not be accepted for mailing.

Manufactured Articles.
Manufacturers or dealers intending to transmit articles in considerable quantities are asked to submit to the postmaster for approval a specimen parcel showing the manner of packing.

When sharp pointed instruments are offered for mailing, the points must be capped or encased. Blades must be boxed so that they will remain attached to each other or within their handles or sockets.

In Powders, pepper, snuff, or other similar powders not explosive, or any similar pulverized dry substance, not poisonous, may be sent when inclosed in material of metal, wood or other case of any of the contents. Flour of all kinds must be put up in such manner as to prevent the package breaking or the flour being scattered in the mails.

Queen Bees and Nursery Stock.
Queen bees, live insects, and dried reptiles may be mailed in accordance with the regulations that now apply to other classes of mail.

Seeds of fruit, nursery stock, and all other plant products for preparation may be mailed under the same conditions.

Confectionery and Soap.
Candies, confectionery, yeast cakes, soap in hard cakes, etc., must be inclosed in boxes and so wrapped as to prevent injury to other mail matter.

Sealed original packages of proprietary articles, such as soaps, talcums, pills, tablets, etc., put up in fixed quantities by the manufacturer, and not in themselves unmarketable, will be accepted for mailing when properly wrapped.

Military.

Fragile articles, such as millinery, toys, musical instruments, etc., and articles consisting wholly or in part of glass, or contained in glass, must be securely packed and the parcel stamped or labeled "FRAGILE."

The following matter is declared unmailable by law:

Matter manifestly obscene, lewd, or lascivious; articles intended for preventing conception; articles intended for indecent or immoral purposes; all matter otherwise mailable by law, the outside cover or wrapper of which bears and delineation or language of a libelous, scurrilous, defamatory, or threatening character. All such matter, when deposited in a post office or found in the mails, shall be withdrawn and sent to the divisions of dead letters.

Intoxicants, Poisons and Inflammable Materials.
Spirituuous, vinous, malted, fermented, or other intoxicating liquors of any kind; poisons of every kind, and articles and compositions containing poison, poisonous animals, insects and reptiles; explosives of every kind; inflammable materials (which are held to include matches, kerosene oil, gasoline, naphtha, benzine, turpentine, disinfectant, alcohol, etc.); infernal machines, and mechanical, chemical or other devices or compositions which may ignite or explode; disease germs or scabs, and other natural or artificial articles, compositions or materials of whatever kind, which may kill, or in any wise injure another or damage the mail or other property.

Pistols, Animals and Birds.
Pistols or revolvers, whether in detached parts or otherwise; live or dead (and not stuffed) animals, birds, or poultry, except as elsewhere provided; raw hides or pelts, skans, or any article having a bad odor, will not be admitted to the mails.

Treatment of Undeliverable Parcels.
Perishable matter will be delivered as promptly as possible, but if such matter can not be delivered and becomes so damaged and injurious to health, postmasters may destroy it, or the injurious or offensive portions thereof.

Undeliverable perishable matter which in its nature does not become offensive or injurious to health may be delivered by postmasters to the proper local municipal authority to be distributed to hospitals, asylums, or other charitable or reformatory institutions. If there is no such municipal authority, the matter may be delivered to any charitable institution or organization making application therefor. If no application is made, the matter will be destroyed at the expiration of two weeks.

Parcels Improperly Packed.
Postmasters will refuse to receive for mailing parcels not properly inclosed or packed for safe shipment. When parcels on which the postage is wholly unpaid or insufficiently prepaid is deposited for local delivery and the sender is unknown, notice of detention need not be sent but such matter will be delivered and the deficient postage collected from the addressee by the carrier. If the addressee refuses to pay the postage the matter will be sent to the Division of Dead Letters.

Insurance on Parcels.
A mailable parcel on which the postage is fully prepaid may be insured against loss in an amount equivalent to its actual value, but not to exceed $50, on payment of a fee of ten cents per parcel post stamps, such stamps to be affixed to the parcel.

When a parcel is insured, the sender will be given a receipt showing the office and date of mailing and number of the parcel. When a return receipt is desired by the sender of an insured parcel the postmaster at the mailing office will note the request on the margin of the insurance tag, and the postmaster at the office of address will obtain from the addressee a receipt and mail it to the sender.

The liability for indemnity shall cease when delivery has been effected.

Forwarding of Parcels.
Parcels may be remailed or forwarded on the payment of additional postage at the rate which would be chargeable if they were originally mailed as forwarding office, in which case the necessary stamps will be affixed by the forwarding postmaster. Payment must be made every time the parcel is forwarded.

Preparation for Mailing.
Parcels must be prepared for mailing in such manner that the contents can be examined. A parcel will not be accepted for mailing unless it bears the name and address of the sender preceded by the word "From."

In addition to the name and address of the sender, which is required, it will be permissible to write or print on the covering of a parcel, or on a tag or label attached to it, the occupation of the sender, and to indicate in a small space by means of marks, letters, numbers, names or other brief description, the character of the parcel, but ample space must be left on the address side for the full address in legible characters and for the necessary postage stamps and for the necessary postage stamps and for the necessary postage stamps.

Parcel Post Stamps.
Parcel post stamps are not valid for the payment of postage on classes of the first, second, and third class, and when used for that purpose the matter to which they are affixed shall be treated as "Held for postage."

Maps and Guides.
Parcel post maps, with accompanying guides, are to be sold to the public at their cost, 75 cents, through the chief clerk of the post office department.

In ordering parcel post maps care should be taken to specify the post office from which the postage rates are to be determined.

Man from Monkey

is not more marvelous than is the evolution of this magnificent Greencastle Cabinet.

Q-Milady formerly stood on a step ladder or a chair to fill her flour bin. Now, the bin gently descends to the table to be filled.

Q-Mother's Cabinet had swinging doors that would not open or close until she cleared the table. Now, Daughter's Cabinet has handsome sliding doors that disappear inside like a roll-top desk. Grandma had a Cabinet with a tin sugar bin nailed to the door; Granddaughter's has an ant proof, automatic valve, crystal glass one, swinging to the Cabinet side.

Q-Mother and Grandmother hid their ironing-boards behind the kitchen door. In our Cabinet an ironing-board instantly comes from underneath the table top, and when ironing is done, Presto-out of sight it goes.

SEVERAL FACTS ON POULTRY

Flock Will Not Do Much During August and Few Eggs Are to Be Expected—Time to Clean.

(By PROF. L. SWINEY.)
As a general rule the flock will not do much during the month of August. Some hens are still broody; some are beginning to moult and one may expect but few eggs for a while. Then, too, most of us are apt to grow careless about the poultry business, since it is not, at present, bringing us in anything worth mentioning. We neglect to clean out the droppings as often as we used to; the roosts are never washed and aired out; no fresh new nests, take the place of the old, filthy ones; while the heat coupled with all these produces a scent both nauseating and dangerous to the flock.

Lice and mites thrive under these conditions and unless we keep a close and constant watch they sneak in and are playing havoc before we realize it. So, let's dip the hens about the time they begin to moult and spray the poultry house thoroughly with some effective, home-made solution. There are many such and they cost next to nothing.

Let's wash the roosts with ten quarts of good, strong soap-suds to which have been added a quart of kerosene and some strong brine, or use a good coat of whitewash.

Let's see that every atom of the droppings is removed from the building, then, to make sure we have done a clean job, spade up the dirt floor to bury the last vestige of filth. This should bring matters back to normal and with an occasional spraying, ought to insure the flock beginning the fall and winter egg-laying campaign early.

Electric Egg Candler.

Inches lined with asbestos and containing a 16-candlepower lamp, says the Popular Mechanics. Two openings in the top covered with adjustable slides are provided. Pushing aside a slide an egg is placed in the opening and the light shining through indicates its condition.

Care of Ducklings.
Ducklings require special attention for two or three weeks, to insure their not getting wet. After that they can be raised with less risk or care than chicks, are hardly ever troubled by disease, and are free from attacks of lice and mites. With a mash feed morning and night, and grass range, they practically take care of themselves.

Cheap Disinfectant.
A cheap disinfectant for the poultry house is a whitewash made by slacking fresh lime to the consistency of cream and adding a gill of crude carbolic acid to every pail of the whitewash. The whitewash will help keep out the chicken mites. The best treatment for lice on birds that have feathered out is to give them a good dust bath.

POULTRY NOTES

Keep your chicks on dry ground. Oats make an excellent ration for laying hens.

Nothing fattens young turkeys like plenty of corn.

Don't overcrowd the brooders, brood coops or colony coops.

The young turkeys will not begin to fatten until cold weather sets in.

Never let the hen and her young roost away from home a single night.

It is best to kill fowls ten hours before preparing them for the table.

Poor quality poultry and eggs are hard to sell or get rid of at any price. Clip the main feathers on one wing of the fence flyer. That will keep her in.

Plow or spade up chicken runs, if not well grassed, and sow oats or rye.

Move chick colonies to new ground before the grass in the old run is quite gone.

Don't fail to supply abundant shade and shelter for adult fowls and growing chicks.

The smoother the roosting poles the more easily they can be kept free from vermin.

The stock will benefit from the intelligent use of a good lice and mite killing preparation during the heated term.

Do not let your young birds roost with the old hens, as they are liable to catch diseases which old hens are more subject to.

All hens which have completed their second laying season should be disposed of at once, to make room for the young stock.

FEEDS FOR EGG PRODUCTION

Farmer Should Be Able to Supplement Natural Resources of the Farm to Increase Revenue.

(By J. S. JEFFERY.)

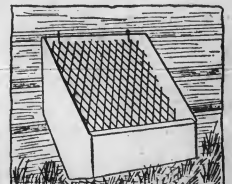

The production of eggs for market is generally considered the most profitable branch of poultry keeping. Under proper conditions there is no reason why eggs should not be produced at a price that will allow a good margin of profit. This should be especially true of eggs produced on farms where the fowls may find a large part of their sustenance at no cost to the farmer, utilizing what would otherwise be waste products.

With a knowledge of what is necessary for the best results in egg production, the farmer should be able to supplement the natural resources of the farm in such a way that revenue

Home-Made Box for Feeding Dry Mash from the hens would be largely increased by a small extra outlay for food.

It has been demonstrated that fowls do better where they have part of their ration of grains, either whole or cracked, and part of it of ground products or what is commonly called a mash. Until within the last few years, it has been the custom to feed this mash wet. This necessitated the mixing of the mash fresh for each feeding and required a great deal of extra work in mixing and feeding. On this account the farmer has never taken to the feeding of mash. With the introduction of the feeding of this part of the ration dry, from hoppers or feed boxes, the objection to it has been largely done away with, and it can now be fed with less labor than can grain. Enough mash can be mixed and put in the feed boxes to last for a week or ten days with no more work than was necessary for the feeding of the dry ration under the old method. Not only is there the great saving in labor, but it has been shown that hens return a greater profit on the dry-mash-hopper feeding system than on the wet mash, without taking into account the labor in either case.

A home-made box for feeding dry mash serves the purpose very well. It may be improved by putting the slats on the inside of the front and having a wire screen to cover the front at night to keep out rats.

A good style of galvanized feed box is covered by a grating of expanded metal. The hens get their food through this grating and are thus prevented from pulling a part of the mash out of the hopper in their search for the ingredients they like best. By hooking the lower end of the grating up at night, the hopper is made rat-proof.

Boll Drinking Vessels.
If many chicks are raised it is a good plan to keep a large kettle near the poultry house in which the drinking vessels can be boiled at least once a week. A handful of common soda thrown in the water will help.

Treating Chicken-Pox.
Chicken-pox can be successfully treated by anointing the head and wattles with carbolic vasoline, after having first bathed well with hot water. A one-grain quinine pill should also be given each night for a week.

Frightened Hen.
The hen that fees when you enter the yard or run has you "spotted" as a disturbing element. Change your attitude and you will at once change hers for the better.

Improving the Flock.
The welfare of the flock is in no way improved by irregular and indifferent breeding. Regularity is to the liking of the business hen as well as of the business man.

Failures are Common.
The failures in poultry culture are no more common than in other commercial activities, and are usually traceable to a want of proper knowledge of its requirements.

The "boys" had a high old time Saturday night and well into Sunday morning at the big chicken fight that was pulled off on a boat on the Ohio river between Springdale and the bend below this city.—Maysville Bulletin.

H. C. Stone this week bought of Will Wylie, a farmer living near this city, a hog which tipped the beam at 587 pounds net, paying therefor about $45. He made from the hog twenty gallons of lard and sixty pounds of sausage, besides spare ribs and backbone to a fare-you-well.—Princeton Leader.

Dover enjoyed a real "hog-killing" time last Monday. The scalding tubs at J. T. Holton's barn and at Andy Willett's were kept busy all day and about 10 fat hogs were butchered for various people about town and everybody wears a smile and a streak of grease from ear to ear.—Dover News.

There seems to be no end to the tobacco warehouses being established in Kentucky. Many thousands of dollars have been invested in them and the promoters must have confident hopes that the crop will be large enough for them all to get rich. We trust they will all get their hopes realized, but we do not see how all can make good.—Midway Clipper.

Mr. Roscoe Colyer, living at Cedar Creek, had some pretty tough luck a few days since. Mr. Colyer had just butchered his meat hogs and a lot of neatly sacked sausage hanging in the smokehouse looked like a nice addition to the winter larder. The night after, hungry dogs scratched at the door and entered the meat house and devoured all the sausage.—Stanford Interior Journal.

Mr. A. F. Martin brought to the Ledger office, a stalk of cotton grown by his venerable mother, Mrs. Amanda Martin, now in her 88th year, at her home in Lexington street. One of the seed planted in a hotbed in March and transplanted in April four stalks blossomed in August and later matured. One stalk was six feet high and presented a beautiful sight with its many white cotton blossoms in full bloom.—Maysville Public Ledger.

"Can't tell me that animals do not have reasoning power," remarked an old-timer the other day. "For many years I drove oxen through the hills and woods of Mercer county in the early days. When I turned them loose at night to graze I would tie a cowbell on the old lead ox so that I could locate them easily in the morning. Do you know, that old ox got wise to the thing and about daylight he would lie down and remain motionless so the bell wouldn't ring?"—Harrodsburg Leader.

The Kentucky boys with their corn contests have certainly taught father a lesson. In Daviess county the lad winning first prize raised 123 bushels to the acre. In Henderson county 113 bushels, and in McCracken, while the successful youth did not attain to the yield of these two boys, he made a very good showing. The youngster with the best record yet, however, comes from Owen county. Geo. Beckler, of that county, raised 103 bushels to the acre, and will probably not be topped. One McCracken farmer told us last week, after he had visited the local corn exhibit that he had learned his lesson and next year would apply it.—Paducah Sun.

The citizens of Knox county are watching with interest the outcome of the election in Bell county to vote upon the issuance of $500,000 in bonds for the construction of good roads in that county. The plans for the construction of these roads include a trunk line through Bell county from the Cumberland Gap with the Knox county line, this road to connect at Cumberland Gap with the pike in Virginia, and it is believed that the voters of Bell county will favor this bond issue, and if this issue goes thru as we believe it will, it will be up to Knox county to do likewise. Only three counties will be lacking to complete this trunk line, Knox, Laurel and Rockcastle, thus making it possible to go from any of the Northern states through this section to the Gulf.—Barbourville Advocate.

It is said there were 250,000 new automobiles in the United States in 1912 and that there will be at least 150,000 new ones in 1913. Word has been heard from 103 car manufacturers, and the conservative estimate on the information received is that 500,000 new pleasure cars will be disposed of during the coming year. It is estimated that the output of one firm alone will be 200,000 for the year that another factory will produce 50,000, another 10,000, another 30,000, another 25,000 and 35 others from 3,000 to 15,000 each. The market for low-priced cars scarcely has a supply equal to the demand, few of which can be found for secondhand sale. It will never do for a country that has the ability of courage to demand 500,000 new pleasure cars in a year to whine much about hard times or the high cost of living.

Kenneth Southern, Bert Smith or Robt. McNeely will get the job of carrying the mail on rural route No. 2. The appointment will be made in the next few days.

A New "Toy" Pistol.

Under the guise of toy pistols someone in Clark county has been celling to the school children a cheap but deadly weapon of the twenty-two caliber variety. The pistols have been found in all parts of the county and a grand jury investigation is being made with a view to indicting the person or persons guilty of peddling the weapons.

The ordinary toy pistol is an instrument of considerable capacity for harm and its use should be discouraged. The situation is infinitely more serious when pistols carring a leaden cartridge are sold indiscriminately to school children. General distribution of a death dealing medium of this sort cannot possibly result in any good and may cause much and irreparable damage. It is obvious that many of the children into whose hands these pistols may find their way realize the hazard that is involved in their use as a plaything.

Teachers of the Clark county schools have been ordered to confiscate all and all the dangerous weapons that may be found in the possession of their pupils. This is a wise action on the part of the officials and is calculated to obviate serious and distressing accidents. The children of Kentucky already know more about the use of deadly weapons than is States where the practice of "pistol toting" is more common and where the effects of it have been felt more sorely. Assuredly we need no success in the familiar elements of menace to the population young and old.

The officials of Clark county have done well in taking this matter promptly in hand. If perchance the sale of such weapons is going on in other counties similar decisive action should be taken.

Shucking Records.

Clarence Holzhouse came home from Ottawa, Ill., where he shucked 2,400 bushels of corn in twenty-seven days. Mr. Holzhouse's best day's work was 110 bushels. Clarence gained eighteen pounds, a remarkable record.—Versailles Republican.

Local Happenings.

Everything is now ready for the Christmas holidays.

The local option question will not be down in Scott county.

Not a thing on docket for Burlington during the holidays.

All the exchanges came in last week loaded with holiday advertisements.

Rev. Baker preached his last sermon for the local Baptist church last Sunday.

When the local school dismissed last Friday it was for a week holiday, which is all the law will permit.

Many couples in Chicago are illegally married and to testify according to a ruling of the Supreme Court of Illinois.

The mail clerks are a busy set of men just now, and they will be glad when the holiday rush of mail matter is past.

The Recorder is in receipt of a dainty calendar sent by the Misses Lucy Russell, of California. It contains a beautiful beach scene.

About as handsome a Christmas present as has come to town was the large, fat and juicy turkey some friend sent Mrs. B. B. Hume.

Bert Gaines took a tripple load of turkeys to Denver. Clutter-buck in Covington, last Sunday. They were bought at good prices.

Last Saturday was the shortest day of the year, and in the next thirty days the period of daylight will be increased considerably.

Mrs. Catherine Henn, aged 95 years and three months died at the home of her son F. J. Henn in Lawrenceburg, a few days ago. She was a native of Germany.

Reports from the various tobacco markets in different parts of the State show that the weed began to move last week, and that good prices prevailed at all points.

Boone county lost three of its old and prominent citizens last week—Thos. K. Fleming, of Richmond; Mrs. Mary Quick, of Hebron, and Mrs. W. T. Snyder, of Franceville.

The Cincinnati base ball club having secured a manager for next year another question of interest has been settled, and there is nothing left but the foreign war to interest this locality now.

Geo. Longenecker, who farms three miles northwest of Harrison, will have 7,000 bushels of fine popcorn to sell as this year's crop. He expects to get fifty cents per bushel—Lawrenceburg Press.

The ladies of the Hopetul Lutheran church will give an oyster supper at the Odd-Fellows Hall in Florence on the night of the 28th inst., for the benefit of the church. Everybody is cordially invited.

The rural mail carriers of this county will hold a meeting in Burlington at 1 p. m., on the 28th inst. Every rural carrier in the county is expected to be present as business of importance will come before the meeting.

R. S. Crisler has about completed the edition to his blacksmith shop, and when he gets this, put in place he will have quite a convenient shop. He is a hard worker and deserves to have a comfortable location.

The work of stripping tobacco has been delayed unusually this winter. Very often by this time a large portion of the year's crop has been put on the market, but the dry weather the past several months interfered with the preparation that the usual amount of Christmas money furnished by the tobacco crop is not in the country.

Edson Riddell was caught in the city, last Wednesday, by the winter storm and having gone in an auto some thought he would have trouble getting back home, but he arrived safe and sound about noon Thursday, and reported that the operating of an auto during winter conditions was not as bad as some had supposed, and that he had a very good trip from the city.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150 or more. He sought for a quicker, and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by J. W. Berkshire & Sons and E. E. Kelly. -Adv.

Leap year is about gone and the Recorder notices several of its late friends still in the eligible list with no indication that they will succeed in making a matrimonial contract. According to the marriage license record up at the county clerk's office the marriageable females in this county do not appear to have rushed matters this year, although it was their privilege to have made it lively in the matrimonial arena.

Hubert White, who resides out on the East Bend road, was engaged in the turkey traffic extensively last week.

The carriers on the rural mail routes do not know where they "are at" as regards the parcels post and are decidedly up in the air as to the quantity of farm and dairy products they will be compelled to handle.

L. S. Beemon's sale was well attended last Saturday and satisfactory prices prevailed. Mr. Beemon will leave for Florida in a few days to spend the winter. All wish him a pleasant sojourn in the land of flowers.

A story is told of a Greenville Republican who went home the night of the election and woke up his wife and told her to pack up and get ready to leave; that Illinois had gone Democratic and he wouldn't live in such a dinged state. After storming around for a time he went out to get some more sleep, and later returned home and told his wife that she needn't mind about packing up; that there was no place to go.—Greenville Illinois News.

The Sixth Kentucky District's hustling young Congressman, Arthur B. Rouse, of Boone county, continues his good work of getting things for his constituents. Following his success in securing a subpostoffice for Covington, to be situated at Twentieth and Madison-av., Rouse has now secured metropolitan service for Campbell county. Under an order he issued today from the Postoffice Department many additions to the service will be made beginning January 1.—Kentucky Post

The Boone County Medical Society met in Burlington on Wednesday last week. The following members were present: Drs. McNeefe, of Walton, Senour, of Union; Hale, of Florence; McKinnis, of Lawrenceburg; and McDaniel, of Clatsburg. They were entertained by Dr. Yelton. They made a call at this office but the large printing press being on the rampage they were not what it ought to have been, as the office force was swimming in ink. Come again doctors, when conditions are better.

Miss Olga Kirkpatrick received her supplies for the Parcel Post business last week, and will be ready on the first day of next month to take orders for that business, a considerable volume of which will be transacted at the local postoffice. It will be some time before the public is familiar with the requirements of the law establishing the Parcel Post, and to assist its readers along that line the Recorder publishes a page of information regarding the Parcel Post this week which it may be well to preserve for future reference.

Mr. E. E. Fry, who has been general agent in this section for the International Harvesting Co., has been promoted to the general offices for Kentucky at New Albany, Ind., and leaves next week to assume charge of his new duties. The many friends of Mr. Fry will regret to see him leave, but wish him well in his new position. He is one of the best salesmen in the employ of the trust.—Winchester Democrat.

The gentleman above referred to is Boone county's own Eddy Fry, of Verona, who made good with the International Harvesting Company several years ago, and besides being an excellent commercial man is one of the cleverest fellows the county ever produced.

At Home A Short Time.

Congressman A. B. Rouse and wife spent Sunday night and Monday at their home in Burlington. They went back to Washington Tuesday, on account of urgent business that the Congressman has on hand. He will not be at home again until after Congress adjourns in March. He has gone to housekeeping and will depend on the Parcel Post to keep him supplied with Kentucky products for his table. Mr. Rouse says everybody, and especially the Democrats, in Washington is very busy getting ready for the adjournment of the Democratic administration.

Only A Large House Cat.

Hearing that the animal that was been terrorizing the Middle creek neighborhood had been captured, Herbert Kirkpatrick struck out for the locality early last Saturday morning to purchase the hide, which he expected would be a very valuable piece. Before he arrived at Hubert Clor's, where the animal was captured, he was informed that it was nothing but a very large house cat that had been wild, come out of the house and was contemplating a trip. The animal is said to have been three feet long, black from the knee joints to the ground, had rings around its tail, large gray spots on its sides, and made a noise like that made by a young mule. To say the least the animal had some size and peculiar combinations.

Fine Farm Sold.

Last week Rev. F. S. Politt of Crittenden, sold his beautiful home place containing three acres lying partly in Grant and partly in Boone county. The purchaser is a Cincinnati gentleman, and the price realized was a little over sixty dollars per acre. Mr. Politt bought this farm nearly seven years ago and moved to it five and a half years ago and began at once to put it in splendid shape. He started a dairy herd with cement floors and gutters, and built a silo, from time to time reared out the poor cows, until now he has seventy-five head of high grade Jersey cows and heifers, and his herd is probably one of the best in the production of butter fat to be found in this part of Kentucky. His policy has been "Feed the land, and it will feed you."

He estimates that for several years he has been spreading each year from five hundred to six hundred tons of fresh manure, and in this way he has wrought wonders in building up his farm. As an illustration of what this method of farming will do he says he reared two of the poor cows he had four acres of ground near his house which was in red-top hay, and for two years it produced about $10 worth of hay each year. He then covered this ground with manure from his cow barn and the next year the crops on it were worth at the market prices from three to four hundred dollars. The next year the ground yielded a fine crop of wheat, and for two years has been in clover, and is now a rich piece of ground.

Mr. Politt has demonstrated that stock farming, and the dairy in particular, where provision is made to save all of the manure, is the way to rebuild the worn out soils in this part of Kentucky.

His success shows that he is right, and if our farmers would have greater prosperity it behooves them to give large attention to stock raising, and the saving of the manure. It may be added that on account of the richness of his milk in butter fat, Mr. Politt is now getting a higher price for his milk than any one else who is shipping into Cincinnati so far as known. It pays to have the best.

Man Coughs And Breaks Ribs.

After a terrible coughing spell a man in Neshaw, Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few few teaspoonful ends a late cough, while persistent, expels stubborn colds or heats weak, sore lungs and if used it is a Godsend to humanity, writes Mrs. Etie Morton, Columbia, Mo., for I would have consumption today, if I had used this great remedy. Its guaranteed to satisfy, and you can get a free trial bottle or 50-cent or $1.00 size at all dealers. -Adv.

As Others See Us.

The editor of the Lawrenceburg Press cast his eyes Kentuckyward last week and made the following discovery:

"Pupils up to the age of 86 years are attending night schools in Kentucky. In one reading class of twenty-five not a member is less than seventy-five years of age."

Last week's issue of the Boone County Recorder contained a page ad. for a grocery in Covington. Few county papers enjoy so good an advertising patronage as does the Recorder.

On the first day of the new year Charles Maurer will become Clerk of the Boone Circuit Court, the resignation of James A. Duncan to take effect at that date, he having turned over to Mr. Maurer the Master Commission-ership during the last term of the Circuit Court. While the people of Burlington are glad to have Mr. Maurer and his family as members of this community, yet they hate to see Mr. Duncan leave, and hope that his laying aside the official duties which poor health had caused to become burdensome to him, will result in the full restoration of his health. Mr. Duncan will take with him the love and respect of every citizen of Burlington, large and small. He will make his home with his daughter, Mrs. V. W. Gaines, of Bullittsburg neighborhood.

Move On Now!

says a policeman to a street crowd and whacks heads if it don't. "Move on now," says the big, harsh mineral pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. King's New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They gently persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at all dealers. -Adv.

Let the poor be remembered during the holiday season. Every neighborhood and country village ought to make sure that the poor are not left to suffer from hunger, or lack of fuel or clothing in this time of festivity and rejoicing. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

A feeder of cattle in Monroe county, Mo., paid $50 per head for 102 head of steers 10 months ago and sold them at $120 per head. They were on grass with a half feed of corn all the time and gained 500 pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Walton, of Petersburg, are rejoicing over the advent of a fine daughter at their home.

ARMAGEDDON OF THE SCRIPTURES

Stirring Presentation of Coming Events.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S VIEWS.

Churches of All Denominations and the Civil Powers of Earth Are About to Unite in Common Cause—Powerful Influence Preparing for the Battle of Armageddon—A Reign of Anarchy Will Be the Result of the Warfare Until The Messiah Takes Control.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded to the limit today to hear Pastor Russell's discourse on the "Battle of Armageddon." His text was: "He gathered them together unto a place called in the Hebrew tongue 'Armageddon'." (Revelation xvi, 16.) The speaker said: "Armageddon in the Hebrew signifies the 'Hill of Megiddo,' or Mount of Destruction. It was famous as a battle-field in Old Testament times.

The Lord has seen fit to associate the name Armageddon with the great controversy between Truth and Error; right and wrong; God and Mammon; with which this Age will close, perish, and the New Age of Messiah's glory be ushered in. He has purposely used highly symbolical figures of speech in the last book of the Bible, evidently with a view to hiding certain important truths until the due time for their revelation. But even in the due time, the Bible assures us, "None of the wicked shall understand" (Daniel xii, 9, 10)—none who are out of heart harmony with God—but only the wise of His people—the "wise virgin" class of the Master's parable.

I have long avoided presentation of my understanding of our text and its context. I take it up now by request and because I believe it is due time to be understood. I disclaim any special inspiration. In some particulars my views agree with those of other Bible students, and in other respects they disagree. Each hearer must use his own judgment, do his own Bible study, and reach his own conclusions.

Kindly remember that I am not responsible for the figures of speech used by the Lord. My interpretations do not constitute a terrible arraignment of institutions which we have all revered and which embrace good people, of good words and good works. God's saints in these various institutions, being comparatively few, are ignored when systems as a whole are dealt with in prophecy.

The Dragon, Beast, and False Prophet. Our context tells us that three impure spirits (teachings) will go forth from the mouths of the Dragon, the Beast and the False Prophet, and these three will be in accord, and symbolical of the doctrines are represented by "frogs." These three doctrines are to have a mighty influence throughout the civilized earth. They are to gather the kings and their armies to the great Battle of Armageddon.

The ecclesiastical kings and princes, and their retinues of clergy and faithful adherents, will be gathered in solid phalanx—Protestant and Catholic, the kings and capitals of industry, and as many as can be influenced by them, will be gathered to the same side. The political kings and princes, with all their benches and retainers, will follow in line on the same side. The noble kings and merchant princes, and all whom they can influence by their preference. For a time the wheels of liberty and progress will be turned backward and medieval restraints will be considered necessary for self-preservation—for the maintenance of the present order of things.

In giving this interpretation, it is necessary for us to indicate what is symbolized by the Dragon, the Beast, and the False Prophet. Bible students of nearly all denominations agree with us that the "Dragon" of Revelation represents the purely Civil Power. Protestant interpreters generally agree that the "Beast like a leopard" (Revelation xii, 2) represents the Papacy. But fewer still, we fear, will be ready to support our view that Protestantism is the "Image of the Beast" (Revelation xiii, 15) in our context given another name—the "False Prophet." We have no one to accept our interpretation, nor shall we think hard of any who refuse it. We will neither slander nor otherwise injure them now, nor threaten them with eternal torture. They have the same right to their views that I have, and the same right to make them known to others. And I, for one, will be very glad to consider anything which opponents may set forth as their interpretations of our text.

"Unclean Spirits Like Frogs." The symbols of Scripture, rightly understood, are always forceful. When the Holy Spirit used a "frog" to symbolically represent certain doctrines or teachings, we may be sure the true application will fit well. A frog has a special look, a wise look. It is a symbol of the "unclean spirit" of the devil to impress the beholder. Its great mouth well represents its chief power, used to croak.

Applying these symbols, we learn that an evil spirit, influence, teaching, will come from the Protestant churches federated from the Church of Rome, and from the Civil authorities, all in full agreement. The spirit of all will be hostile; an air of superior wisdom and knowledge will be proudly assumed—all will croak in harmony. All will tell dire results that would follow, involving the lives of both the present and the future life, if their counsel be not followed. However conflicting the creeds, the differences will be ignored in the general proposition that nothing ancient must be disturbed, or looked into, or repudiated.

The Divine authority of the Church, and the Divine right of the king, arise from the Church, will not be allowed to conflict. Any persons or teachings in conflict with these boastful and unscriptural claims will be branded as everything evil, at the mouths of these "frogs" speaking from pulpits and platforms and through the religious and secular press. The nobler sentiments of some will be strangled by the philosophy of the same evil spirit, which spoke through Caliph, as Caliph declared it expedient to commit a crime in violation of the law of God and Divine, to be rid of Jesus and His teachings, so this "frog" spirit will approve of every violation of principle necessary to their self-protection.

The croaking of these "frog" spirits or doctrines will gather the kings and princes, financial, political, religious and industrial into one great army. The spirit of fear, inspired by the croakings of these "frogs," will scourge the passions of otherwise good and reasonable men to fury, desperation. In their blind following of these evil spirits, evil doctrines, they will be ready to sacrifice life and everything on the altar of what they mistakenly suppose is justice, truth and righteousness, under a Divine arrangement.

For a brief time, as we understand the Scriptures, these combined forces of Armageddon will triumph. Free speech, free mails, and other liberties which have come to be the very breath of the masses in our day, will be ruthlessly shut off under the plea of necessity, the glory of God, the commands of the Church, etc. All will seem to be serene, until the great social explosion in our context described as the "great earthquake" comes to be the "great war," in symbolic language, signifies social revolution, and the declaration of the context is that none like unto it ever before occurred. (Revelation xvi, 18, 19.) Jesus described it as a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation—Matthew xxiv, 21.

The Lord Will Gather Them.

The false, frog-like teachings will gather together into one host the great, the rich, the wise, the learned, the kings of the earth, to battle. At this juncture Divine Power will step forward, and our text tells us that HE shall gather the marshaled hosts to Armageddon—to the Mountain of Destruction. The very thing which they fought to avert by their union, federation, etc., will be the very thing they will hasten. Other Scriptures tell us that God will be represented by the Great Messiah, and that He will be on the side of the masses. Thus we read in Daniel xii, 1: "At that time shall I stand up [the Godlike One—Messiah] to stand up [the Godlike One—Messiah] to take possession of His Kingdom in a manner little looked for by many of those who erroneously have been claiming that they were His Kingdom, and authorized by Him to reign in His name and in His stead.

Jesus declared, "His servants are to be under service." Some may be rendering service to Satan and to error, who claim to be rendering service to God and to righteousness; and some of these may be serving ignorantly, as did Saul of Tarsus, who "verily thought that he did God a service" in persecuting the church. The same principle holds true reversed. As an earthly king does not hold himself responsible for the moral character of each soldier who fights in his battles, so the Lord does not vouch for the moral character of all who will enlist in the fight on His side of any question. "His servants" may live and work in a manner which will render service, whatever the motive or object prompting them.

The same principles will apply in the coming Battle of Armageddon. God's side of that battle will be the people's side, and the very nondescript host, the people, will be pitted at the beginning of the battle. Anarchists, Socialists, and hot-headed radicals of every school of reason and unreason, will be in the forefront of that battle. The majority of the poor and the middle class prefer peace at almost any price. A comparatively small number of God-consecrated people, will at heart be longing for Messiah's Kingdom. These will bide the Lord's time and wait patiently for it; they will be of good courage, knowing the outcome outlined in the Bible and word of prophecy, to which they have done well to take heed, "as unto a light shining in a dark place until the Day dawn."—1 Peter i, 19.

The masses will be restless of their restraints, but will be conscious of their own weakness as compared to the kings and princes, financial, religious and political, which will then hold sway. Besides, the masses have no sympathy with anarchy. They realize truly that the worst form of government is better than none. The masses will seek relief through the ballot and peaceful readjustment of earth's affairs for the elimination of evil, for the placing of monopolies and utilities and the supplies of nature in the hands of the people for the public good. The crisis will be reached when the violation of the law shall become violation of the law and violators of the will of the majority as expressed by the ballot. Fear for the future will lead the well-meaning masses to desperation; and anarchy will result when Socialism fails.

The Cloud's Silver Lining.

Horrible would be this outlook for the future if we did not have the infallible Word of God, which assures us of a glorious outcome! Divine Wisdom has withheld until our day the great knowledge and skill which is at the same time breeding millionaires and discontents. Had God lifted the veil a thousand years sooner, the world would have lined up for its Armageddon a thousand years sooner. But that would have been too soon for the Divine purpose, because Messiah's Kingdom is to be the great Thousand-Year-Sabbath of the world's history. God is kindling the fire which will melt the time when the gathering to Armageddon would immediately precede Messiah's taking of Himself His great power, and beginning His reign.—Revelation xi, 17, 18.

"Send Them Strong Delusions."

St. Paul wrote prophetically of our time, that it would be one of serious trial and testing to many professing to be Christians. The reason for this he states—they received not the Truth in the love of it. (II Thessalonians ii, 10, 11.) They preferred their own erroneous theories, the Apostle explains, and therefore God will give them over to a "strong delusion," so that they will believe the lie which they preferred, and let them suffer for missing the Truth which they did not love. Thus they will be in the condemned host, "fighting against God," because of their lack of love for the Truth.

It is to be said that we all as Christians have been laboring under a thorough delusion respecting God's Plan. We have claimed that Christ set up His Church in Kingdom power, and that the Church has been reigning on the earth as His representative. On the strength of this delusion, Jews and heretics have been persecuting to death as opponents to Christ's Kingdom. All the while we thoughtlessly repeated the Lord's prayer: "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as in Heaven." We knew that the Redeemer said that He would come again to make His Bride and joint-heirs; but we ignored the Scriptures. We were drunk, as the Scriptures symbolically say, "all nations were drunk" with the false doctrine. It is this false doctrine that will constitute the "frog" spirit which soon will begin to croak and to prepare for Armageddon.

The Bible presentation is that the world is a section of the universe in rebellion against Divine authority, under the captivity of Satan and his associated fallen angels. By Divine grace Jesus has already "tasted death for every man," and the merit of that sacrifice must, eventually, grant Adam and his posterity a full and fair opportunity for the attainment of everlasting life. All who thus see the Divine program and are walking in the light may know something at least respecting the "times and seasons." These brethren "are not in darkness, that that day [and that battle of Armageddon] should overtake them" as a thief—unawares.

Armageddon Not Yet but Soon.

For forty years the Armageddon forces have been mustering for both sides of the conflict. Strikes, lockouts and riots, great and small, have been merely incidental. It is the militant parties crossed each other's paths. Court and Army scandals in Europe, Insurance, Trust and Court scandals in America, have shaken public confidence. Dynamite plots, charged by turns on employees and on employers, have further shaken confidence and tended to make each distrustful of the other. Bitter and angry feelings on both sides are more and more manifest. The lines of battle are daily becoming more distinctly marked. Nevertheless Armageddon cannot yet be fought. Other matters intervene, according to prophecy.

Gentle times have still two years to run. The "Image of the Beast" of our context must yet receive life-power. The Image must be transformed from a mere mechanism to a living force. Protestantism, Federation realizes that its organization will still be futile unless it receives vitalization—unless its clergy directly or indirectly shall be recognized as possessed of apostolic ordination and authority to teach. This the prophecy indicates will come from the two horned beast, which, we believe, symbolically represents the Church of England. High-handed activities of Protestantism and Catholicism, operating in conjunction for the suppression of human liberties, await this vivifying of the Image. This may come soon, but Armageddon cannot precede it, but must follow—perhaps a year after it. According to our view of the Prophecy, still another thing intervenes, though the Jews are gradually flowing into Palestine, gradually obtaining control of the land of Canaan, and although reports say that already nineteen millionaires are there, nevertheless prophecy requires an evidently larger number of wealthy Hebrews to be reached. Indeed we understand that "Jacob's trouble" in the Holy Land will come at the very close of Armageddon. Then Messiah's Kingdom will begin to be manifested. Thenceforth Israel in the land of promise will gradually rise from the ashes of the past to the grandeur of prophecy. Through its Divinely appointed prince Messiah's Kingdom, all-powerful but invisible, will begin to roll away the curse and to lift up mankind.

Would-Be Humorist.

J. H. Moore, editor and publisher of the Fulton Inn, Leader takes a fall out of the would-be city humorists, who poke fun at the news items of the country papers in the following from a recent issue of the Leader:

"If there is one thing that makes the average country newspaper man sick at his stomach it is to read the criticisms written by city 'guys' to that should be used in a country newspaper and what not. They know absolutely nothing of the people, their environment, their tastes, likes or dislikes and yet they write lengthy articles on their needs and what constitutes a paper. Laugh at the society news of the ordinary country paper etc. Why, it looks just as ridiculous to the country editor to see the city papers catering to the man of dollars, glossing over the crimes of wealth and holding up the weaknesses of the poor and making a column article out of a few dollars' worth of news. People living in the country are busy and employed all the time and their society events are dates spent with relatives and friends and are of much importance to them as the dances, card parties, receptions of the city sisters, barn raisings, church socials, threshing days, corn shredding, clover hulling and all the days of this kind are ones of pleasure. Although work is connected with them you may be sure the pleasure is genuine and thoroughly enjoyed. Every editor of a country newspaper knows his readers and what is wanted and liked best by them just as well as the city editor does. Write your editorials on some subject you are more familiar with and let the country editor alone. He is doing a good work and finds plenty of material outside of weekly or monthly events of the city papers and their contents. When you put in every week Mrs. Dash entertained at 500 or had the Blue Ribbon Readers to a three-course luncheon it is just of the same news importance as the rural editor has that farmer Smith and wife had neighbor White and family to Sunday dinner, or Cal Strong had a barn raising, followed by a big fried chicken dinner. Time for a new subject."

DO YOU ENJOY EATING

Or Does Everything You Eat Distress You?

Experts declare that the reason stomach disorders are so common in this country is due to hasty and careless habits of eating. Stomach troubles and run-down conditions are usually the result of indigestion.

John Lind, of Oneonta, N. Y., says: "I have been troubled with a bad stomach trouble for fifteen years, and became so weak that I could hardly walk or do any work. My appetite was very poor, and it seemed impossible to get any relief. Since taking two bottles of Vinol I find that it has already made a remarkable improvement in my health; my digestion is much stronger, and I have gained in weight."

Vinol makes weak stomachs strong because it strengthens and tones up the weakened, tired and overtaxed nerves of the digestive organs. Vinol is easily assimilated by the weakest stomachs, and is delicious to the taste.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

Burley Tobacco Growers

Boost Your Own Brands

We, as you know, are using your choicest tobacco in the brands of Strater Bros. Branch, and you know that nobody grows better tobacco than you do. You know how we manufacture, so you know that these brands are perfection. Now we want you to help us sell these brands this year even better than our best previous years. The reasons you should so help are as follows:

You Are Part Owner

The fact that you grow the tobacco makes you part owner of all these brands. Every time that one sells you profit. Every word that you say in favor of any helps to increase those sales. Every brand that you buy for your own use helps make those profits better. All our interests—your interests and ours—are pooled in these several tobaccos. It is logic that you should bend all of your efforts, however small, in the selling.

The United Power of 40,000 Buyers

40,000 men in a section wield an enormous buying influence. If all ask for these brands when they buy tobacco, there results a gigantic sale. And big sales are the best advertising known.

Tell Every Friend

Tell your friends of these brands. Tell them what you know of the tobacco. Tell them you grow it and smoke and chew it yourself, so you know. Tell them it comes from Kentucky, from the center of the richest Burley sections. Let them know it's the cream of your crops and that they can buy these brands from "most any dealer, because dealers know that these brands are the best they can buy."

Burley growers should be Burley Boosters and the best way to boost is to BUY BURLEY—YOUR OWN BRANDS—YOURSELF.

To Dealers! Dealers throughout the United States know these famous tobaccos, and are Nation-wide sellers—popular brands. They are made from the pick of the famous crops of 40,000 growers, bringing the profits to dealers—to those who sell these brands. Are they working for you?

Here are the mild, fragrant smoking brands—GOLDEN GLOW—PENNY POST—FULL PAW. Here are the delicious chewing brands—INDEX—BY JOE TWIST—CUP—DAY'S WORK—ON THE SQUARE—TORCHLIGHT—STRATER'S NATURAL LEAF. Put them into your stock. See how they sell.

PLAQUE OF THE FIELD MICE

Even in Small Numbers They Destroy Considerable Clover and Alfalfa and Injure Orchards.

(By E. S. PIPER.)

The mouse which produced the plague in some of the western states, a short time ago, proved to be the "black mouse," one of the numerous species of short tailed field or meadow mice, a group which has caused widespread destruction in various parts of the world. In nearly all parts of the United States short-tailed field mice are among the most abundant of mammals, and a number of species in widely separated localities have occasionally exhibited the same tendency to excessive increase, indicating that favoring conditions may produce mouse plagues wherever the mice exist. Even when in small numbers they destroy considerable clover and alfalfa and injure orchards, nurseries and root crops.

This is the first recorded instance of an irruption of field mice in North America attaining the proportions of a plague. The experience indicates the probability of future and even more disastrous outbreaks. In the extensive reclaimed areas of the west the abundant food and luxurious cover furnished by alfalfa fields and the miles of irrigation ditches, which afford these mice suitable homes along their banks, greatly increase their increase, while surrounding desert conditions limit the spread of mice beyond the cultivated areas.

Without doubt poisoning is the best method at present known of dealing with field mice on an extensive scale.

SOIL TOO RICH FOR APPLES

Trees With Beautiful Foliage, but Mighty Little Fruit, Were Finally Removed by Ax.

A common mistake in the selection of a site for the apple orchard tract, large or small, is that of choosing a soil that is too rich; that will cause abundant growth of wood, but mighty little fruit. In the valley in which the writer's ranch is located is an orchard of mature apple trees, as pretty a sight from the standpoint of foliage as one could ask to see, which has lately been felled because it did not deliver the goods.

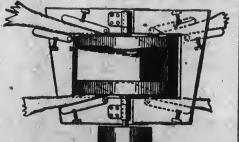

The tract is fat, rich and well watered. Within gunshot of this tract is a block of winter Nellis pear trees of the same age that for several years past have grossed their owners close to a thousand dollars per acre, says a writer in an exchange. Never was more emphatically demonstrated the fact that soil can be too rich for apples, but not for pears. Within a mile of these unproductive apple trees, on thinner and lighter granitic soils, the apple trees bear prolifically to the point of breaking down.

GOOD SOIL FOR BUSH FRUITS

Ground Between Rows Must Be Kept Fine and Mellow—Give Plenty Sunshine and Air.

The ground between the rows and around the bushes should be kept fine and mellow. If the soil is allowed to become hard and allowed to grow up in weeds and grass, the yield will be cut short, and the fruit will be small and of inferior quality. All bush fruits are grown in wide rows, so the greater part of the cultivation can be done with the horse, hoe and cultivator. The proper distance to plant currants, raspberries, blackberries and gooseberries in the fruit garden is five feet apart each way for horse cultivation. For the small family garden, plant in rows five feet apart and three feet apart in the row. This will allow of the larger portion of the cultivation being done with the horse cultivator. The ground around the bushes must be broken up and mellowed with the hoe. Expert fruit growers maintain a dust mulch until the berries are half size, then a thick coat of long straw, manure, grass or rotted leaves is spread over the entire ground about four inches thick. This mulch prevents the growth of weeds—and keeps the soil cool and moist. When this method is followed, the field will be greater, the berries free of dirt and much larger size and of extra fine flavor. All fruit succeed best when given plenty of sunshine and air, along with intelligent culture. The common practice of planting the bushes along the garden walk or fence row is bad, as the bushes cannot be cultivated economically. The yield and size of the berries is greatly increased where there is a full supply of moisture. The irrigation for fruit and vegetables big surface flow and under ground irrigation is being extended as the result of tests made by practical men. The method of irrigation for vegetables and small fruits practiced by market gardeners of Boston has been found economical and profitable.

SUMMER PRUNING OF TREES

Cannot Profitably Be Done on Old, Stunted, Dying Trees—They Need Rejuvenation.

If the tree has a dense top, open up the center to permit sunlight and air to enter. Thin out the sides by removing from one-tenth to one-fourth of the branches, always cutting back to a limb and never leaving a long stub to die or throw out a big crop of sprouts. Summer pruning cannot be profitably practiced on old, stunted, dying trees. They need rejuvenation, which comes with winter pruning, but may be profitably practiced upon old, thrifty, shy-bearing trees.

Apple Cluster showing apples at correct stage for second or apple worm spraying. Young fruit standing up with calyx lobes wide open ready to receive maximum dose of poison.

Large limbs can be removed at this time just as safely as at any other season of the year, only it is not advisable to remove too much of the top at once. Where great quantities of wood must be removed it is better to distribute its removal over a period of from two to three years, rather than entirely unbalance the tree's growth.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

When spraying, if showers come and wash off the poison, spray those trees a second time.

In setting out strawberries pinch off most of the leaves and the plants will take hold better.

The city dealer profits by the laziness of the grower by grading and repacking his badly planed fruit.

It is a good plan to mow off the tops of the strawberry plants within a week after the fruiting season is over.

Spray your trees whether they have a crop or not. Spraying in off years is just as important as in years of heavy crops.

A yearling tree is preferred by many to older trees. They are thought to be safer to transplant than two-year-old trees.

Many growers say that weeds are as valuable as fertilizers as clover and cow peas if they are turned under every year.

If you believe that you have scale in your orchard, do not wait a day to have an expert examine the trees, and then fight for their lives.

That corky old apple the Ben Davis holds a high price in the city markets because its fine appearance deceives the ignorant buyer.

One of the surest ways to keep down weeds in the strawberry field is to cut off all the runners until July 1, to allow close cultivation.

In picking strawberries it should be borne in mind that bruised fruit will not stand shipping. A careless picker has no place in a strawberry field.

WALTON.

J. T. Dempsey of Hume, spent Thursday here with friends and on business.

Henry C. Diers bought a fine mare in Clermont county while there last week, paying $130.

Ross Carroll, a clever and popular citizen of the Big Bone neighborhood, spent Friday here with friends.

Rev. Geo. D. Prentiss, the pastor of the Methodist church, has been quite ill the past week with grippe, but is now better.

Wm. Miller of Florence, was here last Thursday on business. He sold his fine crop of tobacco to Covington parties at ten cents.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Miller, of Landing, were visitors here a day last week, going to Cincinnati to purchase extra holiday goods for their store.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. B. Cook and daughter Mrs. N. T. Mathews and little son Robert, and Mrs. Frank Cook, all of Kenton county spent Friday here with friends and on business.

Judge J. G. Tomlin spent part of the past week at Indianapolis the guest of his brother Dr. Wm. S. Tomlin and wife. He has some business interests there in real estate and also has a number of personal friends in that city.

Several sales of town lots in the new subdivision to Walton have been made lately. E. P. Northcutt sold a lot to Grover C. Riley for $150 and the latter expects to build a house on the lot in the spring. W. B. Johnson sold a lot to L. P. Vallandigham and there are several other sales under negotiation.

Edward Taylor, who has been in a private sanitarium in Cincinnati for some time for the treatment of a lung affection, returned home here last week much improved though still very weak. Mr. Taylor's many friends hope he will continue to improve and will soon be enjoying his wonted health, as he is not only a good citizen, but a clever, genial man of many fine qualities.

Wm. H. Briggs and H. F. Jones of the Big Bone neighborhood, were here last Thursday delivering the tobacco crop raised by Mr. Briggs and sold to Wayland & Co., at ten cents all around. The crop was a very fine one and showed Mr. Briggs to be not only an expert raiser of the article but possessed of a thorough knowledge of how to handle a crop and prepare it for market.

McClure Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, conferred the Past Master's degree and the Most Excellent Master's degree on Ira Stephens of Kenton county, and on Carl Neumeister at the regular meeting last Friday night. The Royal Arch degree is to be conferred on six candidates—Friday, Jan. 10th, the work beginning at two o'clock in the afternoon. A fine supper will be served in the evening.

Harley Cram, who has been attending college at Georgetown and Roy Cram who has been employed at surveying in Ohio, have returned home to spend the holidays with their parents.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cram, Russell Chapman and little son of near Kyle, Gallatin county, spent Thursday here on business.

Chapman sold a little farm of about fifty acres near Kyle, to Mrs. Nannie Hemingway of near Glencoe, for $800.

The Board of Trustees of the Walton High School have purchased a fine upright piano for the school use. The teachers of the school deserve special praise for the purchase of the piano for they not only worked up the idea but pledged their individual names for the payment of one half of the cost of the piano if the trustees would arrange to pay the other part, and it was the liberality of the teachers that induced the trustees to pay the remainder, as it was evident that the school needed the piano very much in the general work as well as in the entertainments given by the school in the various exercises showing the progress of the work of the school. The piano was installed in the school room Friday.

Reversed Themselves.

Frankfort, December 23.—Reversing their action of last week, the State Railroad Commission today, by a divided vote, fixed the assessment of the tangible property of the railroads in this state the same as last year. W. F. Klair, of Lexington, and Green Garrett, of Winchester—Klair Democrat, and Garrett, Republican—voted to fix the value of the tangible property the same as last year. Chairman Finn, of Franklin, Democrat, protested against such an assessment and stood for a substantial increase of assessment.

Ft. Worth, Texas, December 23.—For the first time in 20 years, and in some towns for the first time in their history, South Texas today enjoyed sleighing. Snow to the depth of two to four inches fell as far south as San Angelo, west to Big Springs, north to the Dallas line and east to Dallas. Many children in the southern counties had never before seen a snowstorm.

Roy Kirkpatrick, who works for the Fleischman Co., at Riverside, Ohio, came over Tuesday to spend Christmas with his mother, and brought with him a large turkey which the firm presented him as a Christmas gift.

If all the men mentioned for positions in President Wilson's cabinet are to be accommodated, the next President will have to put through a bill creating a number of new departments.

TOBACCO MARKET.

Mt. Sterling, Dec. 18.—The tobacco market was active and prices high today. At the Farmers' house 80,000 pounds were sold at prices ranging from 4 to 35 cents. Colory grades were in demand.

Madison, Ind., Dec. 18.—W. H. Hooks & Co. sold 40,000 pounds of leaf tobacco today. The highest price was 34 cents per pound. Several good colory, crops averaged from 18 to 20 cents a pound.

The Danville warehouse broke the year's record price in this section today when an extra large basket of tobacco from Mercer county brought $37.50 per 100. Tobacco is now coming in strong and the prices are considered high.

Richmond, Dec. 18.—Both tobacco houses here had large sales today owing to the splendid season due to the continued damp weather. Tobacco prices exceeded any former sales, netting close to 15 cents per pound. The lowest grades today brought 8 1-4 cents, while the highest price was 33 cents.

Shelbyville, Dec. 18.—The town was crowded with tobacco wagons today. Sales at the three warehouses will foot up 200,000 pounds. While the general average is still playing around $12, bidding was decidedly more spirited, making an active market and indicating a strong demand. Prices ranged from $3 to $50. Several crops averaged more than $20. N. B. Mathews sold today at the highest price that has been paid on the market this season for any one basket at $50 per hundred.

Lexington, Dec. 18.—Both the high price record and the crop price record for the season were broken on the Lexington tobacco market today. A fancy lot of 970 pounds, selected from a crop grown by J. C. Bosworth of this county, sold for an average of $39.40 per 100 pounds, and the choicest lot of 100 pounds brought $61. This was said by good tobacco judges to have been the finest lot of tobacco which has been seen or probably will be seen on the Lexington market this season.

Horses That Were 30 Feet Tall.

A hunt of giant horses, some of them measuring more than thirty feet tall, is now in progress in Texas, near Galveston.

Ranch people are stirred up over the excavation that has been started at a spot near Prairie Dog creek, just north of Silverton, by an expedition of scientists sent out by Yale University. This party is headed by Richard S. Lull, professor of vertebrate paleontology of that institution.

They are digging for the fossils of prehistoric horses. It is said by Professor Lull that all evidence that has accumulated tends to show that the horse of today had its origin in these long extinct animals that once roamed the expansive plains in the Texas Panhandle.

Discoveries of bones that are classified as belonging to the prehistoric horse have been made from time to time in this section. Not a great while ago, in opening a gravel pit near Plainview, the fossils of an animal that scientists proclaim belong to the equine species were brought to light, and when placed together the height of the skeleton measured more than one hundred hands. This relic of an unknown past was brought to the light by E. M. Erick of Plainview. The bones of the animal were sent to the Smithsonian institution at Washington.

It is the theory of Professor Lull that in prehistoric times, when these giant horses roamed the plains, there was co-existent with them a civilization of high standard in what is now New Mexico and Arizona. The ruins of the homes of these people are still to be seen, and in some parts of the arid region there has been discovered the evidence of extensive systems of irrigation. There is nothing remaining at this time to show from what source the water for these irrigating canals was obtained.

There are good reasons for believing, according to Prof. Lull, that these giant horses, which had a height of thirty to forty feet, were often domesticated by the people of that day and time, and were the chief means of them getting about from place to place.

Eggnogs are ripe.

It was an old fashioned white Christmas.

Don't forget the supper that will be given by the ladies at Florence next Saturday night.

A. B. Renaker and wife went to Dry Ridge, Grant county, to eat Christmas turkey with his relatives in that neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer spent Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall, their first visit to Burlington since their marriage.

A fine snow began falling about dark last Monday, and by Tuesday morning the face of mother earth was covered with about two inches of the beautiful.
